PICTURES DRAWN BY ADAM

FIRST WORKS OF ART BY PRIMITIVE MAN FOUND IN AN ANCIENT CAVE.

A FRENCH scientist and archaeologist, M. Rene Jeannel, has discovered the earliest drawings of prehistoric man in existence.

If we regard Adam as the first intelligent man, the successor of the ape-like creature from whom we are all descended, then these drawings may very well have been made by Adam himself.

The drawings belong to the Paleolithic, or Old Stone, Age, when man had just evolved from the ape-like stage, and was only able to make the coarsest and roughest tools out of chipped stones. It required thousands of years for man to advance to the stage of making symmetrical and well finished stone axe heads, spear heads, chisels and so on, such as are found in the remains of the Neolithic, or New Stone, Age.

It is remarkable that man at this period should have frittered away his time on art, when he could not make satisfactory tools for catching and cooking his food, but we must remember that to-day people buy ornaments for their homes when they are not able to prepare a good dinner.

How long ago these prehistoric drawings were made cannot be decided with any close approach to accuracy, but there is a general agreement that they were made over 20,000 years ago, and some authorities put their age much further back than that.

They were found in the cave in Portel, which is situated in the Department of Ariege, in southern France, where a remarkable number of relics of prehistoric man have been found. Here the Old Stone man made his home before he knew how to build the crudest kind of house, because in the cave he found shelter from wind and rain and cold, and could easily protect himself from wild animals by blocking up the entrance.

The cave of Portel is reached by a long, winding passage, which leads down to a series of oblong chambers hollowed in the cretaceous chalk. The right wall is smooth, dry and rocky, and the left humid and covered with stalagmites. The drawings are always found on the dry and rocky side and cease where the stalagmites are found. Some years ago archaeologists discovered in one part of it remains of man of a period before he made tools, and elsewhere remains of Neolithic man.

In the latest exploration M. Jeannel found forty drawings representing animals and human figures. Some of the drawings are made in paint and others are scratched with some kind of tool. The most interesting of the drawings are reproduced on this page. They represent the profile of a man, a cow, a deer, two horses, a bison, a reindeer, two men's heads and a goat.

The chief interest, of course, lies in the pictures of men found in the cave. The heads are very remarkable in shape, being quite ape-like. Two men are represented in profile at full length, so that there is an excellent opportunity to note their facial peculiarities. They are extremely dolichocephalic, or long-headed, and have remarkably retreating foreheads and projecting under jaws. Their faces, as far as we can judge, on account of the crudeness of the drawing, appear less intelligent than those of some

TO BRING THE RUINS OF ANCIENT PHILÆ TO NEW YORK

It is proposed to save the ruins of Philae by bringing them to New York. They are the most beautiful group of ancient ruins in the world, and it is now settled that they are doomed to destruction through the raising of the Nile by the Assoudan dam, unless they can be removed.

With the destruction of Philae would disappear a group of temples and palaces that have witnessed the greatness of ancient Egypt, the rise of Greece as a world-power and its supplanting by Rome, the advent of Christianity, the fierce struggles between Christians and Mohammedans and, in fact, many of the most dramatic and historic scenes in the history of the world for three thousand years.

Does it not seem incredible that an age, which spends much money for archaeological and historic research should allow such a collection of buildings to be lost?

This fact has impressed several wealthy Americans in Europe, and they have come to the conclusion that if the British Government will not save Philae, Americans should do it and carry the ruins to America. They have thought out an ingenious plan for carrying out their idea. Among those interested in the project is Richard Croker, the once famous New York boss, who is now spending the evening of his days as a sporting magnate in Ireland. Mr. Croker is anxious to make some return to New York for the extremely generous manner in which that city treated him during his years of activity.

The plan of the American Philae Committee is to have the ruins transported to New York and re-erected in Central Park, just as they now stand on their island on the Nile. It will, of course, be necessary to obtain the consent of the city, and the matter requires serious consideration.

The members of the committee believe that the ruins will furnish the most beautiful, interesting, instructive and inspiring spectacle in New York. Those who view them will necessarily be led to think of the great events that have happened in sight of their walls. They will lead the New Yorkers to take an interest in world history. The ruins are so imposing that no one with a vestige of imagination can fail to be impressed with the greatness of the past they represent. Moreover, when properly arranged in Central Park they will form a very delightful and agreeable place for rest and meditation, especially in hot weather, for it must be remembered that the ancient Egyptians understood better than any other people how to build for a hot climate.

The project of removing the ruins has been received with great interest and considerable favor in New York. Mr. Cope Whitehouse, the well-known authority on Egyptian matters, said:

"I think it would be an excellent thing to bring the ruins of Philae to New York if it is not possible to save them from destruction by the useless Assuan dam.

"The ruins are very beautiful, and they could not fail to be a most instructive object lesson to our young people, who are apt to forget what admirable work man could do before their day.

"For my part I should prefer to save Philae by removing the Assuan dam, which is not only useless but a positive danger to Egypt. If by Rayan canal and lake project, which was once approved by the expert advisers of the Egyptian Government, had been carried out, Egypt would have secured her reserve store of water, a standing menace of flood would have been removed, the monstrously expensive Assuan dam would have had no excuse for existence and Philae would have been in no danger. But if the dam is to continue its career of destruction, by all means let us have Philae in New York."

A rough estimate has been made that it would cost $1,000,000 to transport the ruins of Philae to New York. Labor is cheap in Egypt and freight rates by sea are low, but there is an immense amount of labor to be done and an immense quantity of material to be moved. Each stone will be marked with a number and when the stones are received in New York an architect will understand just how to set them up as they orginally stood.

A site has been suggested on the east side of the park, near Cleopatra's Needle, an Egyptian relic that now stands in dejected loneliness. The Philae ruins could be arranged effectively in a space 300 yards in length by 100 in width. The principal buildings are the Temple of Iris, the Portico of Nectanebo and the Kiosk of Trajan.

What has occurred up to the present time indicates that Philae must soon be lost unless some such radical measure as moving the ruins to New York be adopted. When the construction of the Assuan dam was first proposed, the plans showed a barrier of such height that the whole of Philae would have been buried under water, but the protests were so strong that they led to some modification at the head of the movement. Against destroying the ruins was the late Lord Leighton, the artist, who declared that "any tampering with the ruins would be a lasting blot on the British occupation of Egypt."

The engineers then reduced the height of water they originally proposed from 387 to 347 feet. With this modification they said the highest level of the reservoir would only inundate part of the island.

Even this level, however, has done great damage through the action of the flood on the foundations of the temples. For five months of the year when the water level is highest the great Temple of Isis and the beautiful roofless, unfinished temple known as the Kiosk or "Pharaoh's Bed" are partly inundated, and when the water falls the lower part of their walls and pillars is covered with a coating of filthy green mud. The foundations are already injured, and here and there ugly wooden props have been put in.

Moreover, the wonderfully brilliant wall paintings which have endured for 2,000 years are beginning to decay from the proximity of the water.

But this is not all. It is proposed to make the destruction complete. The engineers and financiers have now asked to be allowed to take back part of what they conceded a few years ago. And the Government has agreed to their adding twenty feet to the dam. With this height, Philae will be under water for a great part of the year, with only the upper parts of its towered gateways rising above the surface of the water. It has been suggested that the whole group of buildings should be built on new foundations raised high above the water; but neither the Government nor private persons have shown and inclination to furnish the money for this purpose. The plan of removing them to New York seems, therefore, to offer the best hope of saving them.

The temples of Philae are described by the best authorities as forming the most beautiful group of ancient buildings in Egypt, although not the largest or most ancient. The oldest building dates from the reign of Nectanebo, in 350 B. C. The chief deity was Isis, the goddess of the cultivated land; but her husband-brother Osiris, god of the Nile, also had his cult. The important temples which now give the island its peculiar beauty were erected by the Ptolemies during the last two centuries B. C. and by the first Roman Emperors. During the early centuries of the Christian era Greek and Italian pilgrims visited the temple, as frequent inscriptions inform us, to do honor to the mystical healing goddess of the place.

Even after all Egypt had been Christianized the worship of Isis was still continued here, and it was not till the reign of the Emperor Justinian that the temples were closed.

Finally, when the banners of Islam swept across Egypt, the Arabs made of Philae a palace.

The Temple of Isis being on high ground, has been least affected by the water. It is still possible to walk on the floor of the hypostyle hall, thought the water is almost level with the floor and the ripple raised by a gentle breeze splashes upon the stones. There are in this hall eight columns, which are considered the most interesting in Egypt. Their floral capitals, as well as the walls and ceiling of the hall itself, are decorated in colors which have defied the elements for over two thousand years.

From the roof of the temple one obtains a comprehensive view of the disaster. There where that naked little Nubian boy is swimming on a log was the Temple of Hathor, and yonder a break in the current marks Hadrian's Gateway. Looking down the river one sees dim shapes, the capitals of columns, the suggestion of a roof, a city of the dead.

Within these walls now tottering to their fall the old Egyptian Pharaohs came to ease their hearts and take counsel with their gods. Here, perhaps, Alexander the Great stood in triumph and Greek sages came to study the religion of the older country. Here came the proud Roman prefects. These walls echoed to the name of the Saviour chanted by the first Christians, and their prayers were in turn drowned by the fierce cries of the Moslems.

Many ages later General De Saix, of Napoleon's army, stopped in his fierce pursuit of the Mamelukes and inscribed the line: "An 7 de la Republique Francaise." These stones saw Gorden going to his death at Khartoum, and ten years later the army of Kitchener passed by on the road to victory.

What a fascinating idea, to transport this splendid epitome of world history to the heart of New York!

of the apes we are familiar with to-day, such as the chimpanzees.

Needless to say, these very early men are without clothing of any kind. Probably they knew enough to take the skin of a bear or wolf and put it over themselves when they felt cold, but they did not think of including this covering in their portraits.

They had intelligence enough to select a convenient cave for their homes, to block up the entrance to keep out wild beasts, and to dig out the interior in places so as to make more spacious chambers. They hunted the mighty cave bear, now extinct, and the huge wild ox, called the aurochs, equally extinct. To kill these great beasts they had only sharpened stones and other crude weapons. They surrounded their prey in numbers and attacked them at close quarters, often losing their own lives in the fight. When at last by superior cunning and courage they had slaughtered their huge foe they dragged him back to their cave, where the industrious women skinned the animal and cooked its flesh.

The animal most frequently represented on the walls of the cave is the horse. Some of them are represented as running or galloping. The drawing is rather rough. The hoofs are very poorly drawn, and the different parts of the body are out of proportion. Owing to these peculiarities it is difficult to make out the nature of the animal intended to be represented, and only an expert in studying prehistoric remains can understand the artist's intention with any degree of accuracy.

None of the animals is represented as pierced with arrows, as is the case with drawings of a later prehistoric period. This indicates that the arrow, that exceedingly ancient implement of warfare, was not then invented. Man at this period probably killed the beasts with sharp stones and clubs.

A New Book of Beauty

FROM PAINTING BY PRINCE TROUBETZKOY

Mrs. John Jacob Astor.

FROM PAINTING BY HOWARD CUSHING

FROM PAINTING BY JOHN SARGENT.

Mrs. Joseph A. Widener, of Philadelphia.

ALL the world over "American beauty" is a phrase that does not need translation into any other language. In the great cosmopolitan centres—Paris, Berlin, Vienna, St. Petersburg—it is as well understood and as easily spoken as in New York or London.

There is a certain variety of rose known by that name, but the woman has eclipsed the rose. Daughter, wife, mother, even grandmother; rich or poor, of distinguished family or of lowly birth, wherever she sails under the Stars and Stripes, she is the "American Beauty."

East, West and South, each section produces its beauty type. The types which are able to travel and to mingle with fashionable society at home or abroad—especially when distinguished artists paint and exhibit their portraits, and newspapers and magazines publish their photographs. Thus among well known American women of fashion there are probably a hundred who would properly be included in a volume of photogravures bearing the title of "Masterpieces of Portraiture in America."

This is, in fact, the title of such a volume now in preparation by Francis Sullivan, of New York. Among the notable portraits which it will reproduce is Howard Cushing's charming likeness of Mrs. Henry Payne Whitney.

Mrs. Whitney is one of this country's women of wealth and fashion who is more than an "American Beauty." She is an artist of recognized ability, and devotes more of her time to canvas and brushes than to society.

For a long time she has had a studio in Macdougal's Alley, near Washington Square, where she works as hard as any young painter struggling for reputation and a living.

Her marriage to "Harry" Payne Whitney, which united two of the greatest American fortunes, did not destroy her enthusiasm for sketching and painting. At Newport, upon a picturesque cliff jutting out into the ocean, she built a studio which she christened "Hermit's Cave." It is an ideal painter's workshop, containing two small rooms besides the large studio proper. Most of the roof over the latter is glass, admitting the cold north light that is so important a feature of art studios.

Mrs. Whitney is an indefatigable sketcher from nature. Her studio work is mostly in water colors, though she has successfully undertaken important works in oil, besides designing architectural embellishments for several of New York's "show" buildings. Among "American Beauties" she is one of the most accomplished in a solid way, as well as one of the most influential socially.

Mrs. John Jacob Astor, whose portrait is reproduced here, is undoubtedly that American woman whose beauty is most celebrated everywhere, at home and abroad. Her beauty, her husbands wealth and her impregnable social position in the front rank of distinguished American families, makes her in many ways the most favored of all her countrywomen.

Mrs. Astor spends much time abroad, where her influence in social matters is almost as much sought as in her own country.

Wife of a multi-millionaire patron of out door sports, art collector and philanthropist, Mrs. Widener's social position is on a par with her beauty and grace. Her box at the Horse Show and at the opera is the chief centre of social attraction upon these occasions. Her photographs are published broadcast, and probably no American woman has been more besieged by portrait painters eager for her to sit to them.

There are probably a score of rich and fashionable women of America whose portraits would vie in charm with the three reproduced on this page. Beauty quite as remarkable exists all through the country in less lofty circles, waiting to be celebrated by famous portrait painters or by the encomiums of foreign connoisseurs. A hundred examples of the very first class would not be difficult to find.

American beauty has one distinct advantage over the distinctive beauty types of other countries. It is an amalgamation of nearly all the types of the world inspired and varied by the atmospheric conditions of widely separated sections. Yet wherever the type exists, whatever of the South or the West or the East, it may proclaim to the beholder, it is stamped with its characteristic national attribute, either of feature or the spirit that animates the whole.

Enlightened foreigners recognize that a woman is American just the same whether she is sharp and eager and hails from Nebraska, or languid and soft spoken, as are most of the women of the Sunny South. The lively Chicago girl, the proud and intellectual Boston girl, the smart and dashing girl from New York, and the luxuriant Pacific Coast beauty—all bespeak to the cosmopolitan connoisseur the American girl.

English girls, speaking the same language—with practically the New York and Boston accent—when travelling on the Continent of Europe are never mistaken for American girls—not even when they happen to be well and tastefully dressed. They lack the characteristic American stamp, which cannot be counterfeited because it imbues features, forms, intelligence and emotions with something in the soil and air and habit of thought that is not found elsewhere.

SHALL A DOCTOR TELL HIS PATIENT THE FATAL TRUTH?

How a Remarkably Realistic Painting Has Revived an Old Controversy--and the More Revolutionary Proposition of Putting to Death Those Fatally Stricken with Torturing Diseases.

MORE and more insistently, in all parts of the civilized world, as though demanding a definitive answer from humanity, arises the question:

"Must human beings mortally stricken by disease, and eager for death as the only relief from their agony, be compelled to linger on in torture? May they not justly demand that the physician, who would assist nature to perform a possible cure, come now to nature's assistance in hastening the death that is inevitable?"

Associated with this question is another, less revolutionary in character, which is expressed in this way:

"If a physician knows that his patient is doomed, shall he tell him the whole truth—that he must die of his present malady? Or is it better that the fatal truth should be concealed from the doomed patient as long as possible?"

In England the latter question has started a fresh controversy owing to a remarkable painting lately exhibited at the Royal Academy by the Hon. John Collier, entitled, "Sentence of Death."

The picture shows the condemned patient—a young man—at the moment his physician, in his office where the two are seated, has told him plainly that his case is hopeless, that he must die. The physician's fateful expression of features, the open volume before him, the microscope and stethoscope on the table, and the condemned youth's attitude of despairing resignation, tell the story as plainly as words could tell it.

The physician is sure of his knowledge; the doomed youth accepts the verdict; all that is lacking are such details as the nature of the disease from which the patient is suffering, and the length of time that yet remains to him on earth.

Would the last days of the patient be happier if the physician had concealed the truth from him temporarily? Or was it best to prepare him for the fate that was so near?

The answer seems to be that it depends on circumstances. Does the patient desire the truth, whatever it may be? Are there weighty reasons why he should have time in which to prepare for death? Will the fatal news make more miserable the days and nights that remain to him?

Another problem. Sometimes physicians are mistaken. Suppose the physician's knowledge is inadequate, and the patient's case really is not hopeless? Might not the shock of receiving such a sentence bring death which otherwise might be long deferred? The most reputable physicians have been mistaken. Cases which have been pronounced "hopeless" have been marked by recoveries.

In this country recently each of these questions—the patient's enlightenment as to his hopeless condition, and the physician's privilege to arbitrarily shorten the period of mortal suffering—has been illustrated by notable examples.

In Greater New York, William H. Marsh, accepting his physician's statement that he was fatally ill of rabies, and that the death tortures would be terrible, begged for the administration of a drug that would render him unconscious during the last stages of the disease—and the physician granted his request.

This was not a radical application of the principle advocated by many that human beings have as much right to be put out of their misery as animals have, for all the physician did was to produce unconsciousness, which is one way of "relieving pain"—part of the Hippocratic oath by which many modern physicians hold themselves bound.

In this instance the patient was grateful for being told the fatal truth. It prepared him for death, and enabled him to obtain the means of dying painlessly. But the physician's action is not allowed to pass without investigation by the Medico-Legal Society, whose conclusions are awaited with interest.

Out of another case of mortal illness developed an attempt to pass a law in the State of Ohio authorizing reputable physicians, after consultation, and with the consent of the patient and the members of his family, to arbitrarily shorten his period of suffering by killing him painlessly.

The father—rather the "mother"—of this bill introduced into the Ohio Legislature is Miss Anna Hall, daughter of the late Captain Hall, the Arctic explorer. Explaining her efforts to have such a bill passed, Miss Hall said:

"My bill seeks to legalize what physicians are already doing. Being a physician myself, I am in a position to know. They would not admit it, of course. Technically, as the law now stands, it is murder, but it is really the most humane act that man can do.

"My mother died from cancer. During her last week she suffered much. She knew she must die, and begged to be relieved from her misery. The physicians told us she could survive only a few hours, but she lived on in that awful agony for more than one hundred hours. Since that time I have been an advocate of the proposition contained in my bill."

The introduction of the bill created a widespread sensation. Some physicians approved it. Others declared that civilization was not yet ready for anything so revolutionary. An Indianapolis doctor declared that the man who introduced the bill "ought to be shot."

(From a Sketch.)

Causing Death by a Hypodermic Injection of Morphine.

The bill was drawn with considerable care of a kind calculated to prevent unscrupulous physicians and relatives from making improper application of such a law. It provided that any person of lawful age and of sound mind, who was fatally injured or hopelessly ill and suffering great pain, might, when so pronounced by a physician not related to the person or interested in his estate, in the presence of three witnesses, ask to be put to death in some quick and painless manner.

Thereupon the physician, if his diagnosis was confirmed by three other reputable physicians, might proceed to carry out the wishes of the dying patient.

The first reading of this bill in the Ohio House of Representatives provoked a debate which, at times, verged on the unseemly. Some members lampooned it unmercifully. Others made satirical arguments. Still others argued seriously that such a law would turn all physicians into red-handed murderers. By a large majority it was voted down.

Outside of the Legislature, however, the controversy continued. As a general thing physicians throughout the country were conservative in their utterances, agreeing on the whole that the time was not ripe for such legislation.

"I have myself given a patient a fatal dose of morphine when death was certain, in order to prevent further suffering.

"The wife of a colonel in the army burned herself frightfully. In fact, she was literally roasted. She had tried to commit suicide, and expected to be dead before she was found. When I saw her condition I asked the other doctor:

"'What will you do?'

"'Why don't you fill the syringe?' I asked.

"'Will you administer the morphine if I do?'

"'Certainly,' I said.

"He filled the syringe and I administered the morphine.

"The woman died a short time afterward. When the priest came to administer the last sacraments we told him what we had done.

"'You did exactly right,' was his comment.

"I believe that in cases of this kind it is right to stop suffering."

It should be stated here that the Catholic clergy of Milwaukee made prompt denial that the Church indorsed any such act. The Very Rev. J. J. Keogh said:

"No human law nor professional opinion can contravene the Divine law, and the Divine law declares, 'Thou shalt not kill.' The Catholic Church cannot approve of any such action."

In the State of Iowa a bill similar to that advocated by Miss Hall in Ohio was introduced at the request of a physician—Dr. R. H. Gregory—himself a member of the Iowa Legislature. But it met the fate of its Ohio predecessor.

One of the strongest opponents to such legislation in the medical profession was Dr. John V. Shoemaker, of Philadelphia, professor of materia medica at the Medico-Chirurgical College and Fellow of the Medical Society of London. Dr. Shoemaker went on record to this effect:

"The suggestion is infamous, and it cannot be successfully defended upon any tenable grounds. In thirty-two years' practice I have encountered scores of so-called incurable cases, and I have seen men start home to die, only to see them return hale and hearty after a period of rest and proper treatment in a favorable environment.

"I am profoundly impressed by the command 'Thou shalt not kill,' and I have faith in our ultimate ability to cure all the ills of mankind."

As yet doctors do not seem to have entered very heartily into the controversy as to whether or not they should tell their patients the fatal truth when they have discovered it. Probably they feel that there should be no fixed rule about it. There are seldom two cases marked by exactly the same conditions.

Usually, too, the near relatives entertain different opinions. Some urge that the patient has every imaginable right not to be deceived, that he would welcome the worst news because it would be a warning to him to set his affairs in order and make provision for those near and dear to him.

Other relatives think only of the dreadful shock the passing of the death sentence upon a patient would add to the burden of painful illness he already bears. They urge that hope should be held out to him to the last.

It appears that clergymen, as a rule, do not favor keeping the mortally stricken patient in the dark about his fate. He should have time in which to prepare for death in a spiritual sense.

It is plain that the doctor should be sure that his conclusions are absolutely correct before he pronounces the death sentence to his patient. Fortunately, with respect to the majority of fatal diseases, there is plenty of time for the patient to thoroughly realize his condition, and to become reconciled to the inevitable some days or weeks before the hour of death is due.

Evidently the painting "Sentence of Death" is intended to illustrate those cases where some insidious organic trouble foretells death only to the skilled physician at a time when the young patient has not begun to realize that he is seriously ill. Should such a patient be told the dread truth while he has, perhaps, months yet to live?

Why Women Want June Weddings.

ONE of the most curious things about the present century of progress and civilization is the way in which old pagan customs and superstitions survive among us. Many centuries of Christianity have been powerless to eradicate them, and even science—which is far more powerful than religion in such matters—has been utterly defeated. Most of these old superstitions trace their pedigree back through Rome and Greece to Egypt and Babylon, and so strongly rooted are they even now that they must clearly have their origin in some primeval instinct, some chord in the human heart, which we feel still, though we are utterly unable to explain it.

One of the most curious of these old superstitions is that which relates to marriages in the month of May. Brides will not, if they can possibly help it, get married in May, because they say that May marriages are unlucky; and so deep-rooted is this idea that at the end of April there is a rush to get married before the unlucky month sets in. During the last weeks of April the column of marriages in the daily paper is a formidable one, but as soon as May begins it dwindles away almost to nothing, and the "fashionable weddings," which were so marked a feature of the previous month, are scarcely represented at all. The only reason given for this fancy is that it is unlucky to be married in May; but why it should be unlucky, nobody can explain. There it is. Poor May has been given a bad name, like a dog, and if it is not hanged, which is impossible, it is most effectually boycotted.

The only other period of the year which shares this evil repute with May is the forty days' fast of Lent, and one can easily see why that time should be taboo. It is the period of fasting and mortification in the Church calendar, and the festivities of marriage were all through the ages, and are still frowned upon. The reluctance to get married in Lent, when the Church is in mourning, is only natural, and can be clearly explained by the rites and ordinances of the Christian Church. But May always comes after Lent and Easter are over, for however eccentric Easter may be it never by any chance wanders into the month of May. The taboo of May is therefore absolutely extra-Christian, and can only be attributed to what, for want of a better name, we call superstition.

It is all very well for the cynical to say that marriage is of all human institutions the best calculated to mortify the spirit and the soul of man. That would be all very well in Lent, when mortification is the rule, but it has no meaning whatever in May, when all nature is joyous with the approach of Summer, and when no mortification is required either by the Church or by the season of the year. Besides, no one, neither man nor maid, ever enters into matrimony with the deliberate idea of undergoing a penance. On the contrary, all is congratulation and merrymaking at a wedding, and if some time afterward the ceremony is found to have been the beginning of penance and mortification it is always with surprise that the discovery is made. The cynic's explanation is clearly no explanation at all, and if it were it would not apply to the merry month of May.

The theory that the month was dedicated to the goddess of Spring, and that the deity in question was a virgin goddess, is the most probable theory that has been put forward. The coming of Spring was hailed by all the ancient nations, who were essentially agriculturists, as the greatest and most auspicious event of the year, and one can well imagine that they would do nothing which, in the opinion of their medicine men, would bring ill luck in the fields or draw down on the community the wrath of the virgin goddess. To the virgin goddesses of the Old World the idea of matrimony was an impertinence, if not an insult, especially at the dates sacred to their mysteries, or among their own votaries. And these superstitions were, of course, fostered by the priests, to whom these restrictions and the penalties for breaking them were a source of power and income.

But all these ancient pagan superstitions were supposed to have been done away with by Christianity, and to be, like Great Pan, dead. As a matter of fact, there is hardly one of those ancient widespread superstitions which has disappeared from among us. With great skill the early Fathers of the Church, finding that it was impossible to abolish them, absorbed them in Christian ceremonies. They turned the local gods and goddesses into saints and martyrs, so that the ignorant population went on adoring their old friends under new names; and they turned the old pagan celebrations into Christian ceremonies and festivals. In this way they changed the Saturnalia into the Christmas holidays, and the midsummer rites into the festival of St. John, and so on all through the calendar.

But the May Day and other pagan ceremonies of the month seem to have been quite beyond them. There was no festival with which they could be absorbed, or other name under which they could be hidden. No doubt they did their best to suppress them, but it was without avail, and the unauthorized superstitions of the month of May have flourished in spite of the Fathers and all the priests and ministers who have succeeded them. And so we find ourselves in the twentieth century of Christianity slaves to an ancient pagan superstition of which we can assign no reason, but which very few people care to oppose. A sentiment which has lasted so long, so many ages, and among so many and different peoples, cannot be justly dismissed as a pure superstition.

A NEW "UNWRITTEN LAW"?

"Go Home and Tend Your Babies," Said the Judge to the Wife and Mother Who Had Killed the Woman Who Had Brazenly Claimed Her Place in Her Husband's Heart.

"Nerved her hand to face the destroyer of her home with a fusillade of five revolver shots—the last of which sent Mrs. Griffin to eternal judgment, and set her herself above the law of the land."

The Deserted Wife of "Affinity" Earle.

The Body of Mrs. Helen Griffin, in the Morgue at Los Angeles.

MRS. U. Z. DE ARMAN, wife of the horseman, well known at all American racetracks, buried in her heart a great grief born of traitorous acts persisted in by another woman—Mrs. Helen Griffin.

Mrs. De Arman's neighbors knew of the wrongs she endured in silence, and gossiped about them. Even the neighbors' children knew and gossiped. Thus the little De Arman girls, Annie and Lynnie, heard strange stories, and were curious, and went to thehir mother for enlightenment.

"Mamma, who is this Mrs. Griffin that papa bought the big yellow automobile for, to drive to the racetrack in?"

"Yes," chimed in little Linnie, as though Annie had not put the matter plainly enough, "we hear so much about papa and Mrs. Griffin. Does she belong to our family, mamma?"

Poor Mrs. De Arman could only take her little daughters in her arms and tell them not to mind what people said.

But her little boys, Cecil and Clay, were also disturbed by the gossip of their boy playmates. One day all the little De Armans appealed to their mother for light on a most vexatious problem.

"Mamma," said little Cecil, "is Mrs. Griffin our real mamma, or are you?"

"Because you are the mamma we want. Only the boys are laughing at us, and telling us we can't say who our real mamma is, because Mrs. Griffin tells so many people that papa is her husband."

Mrs. De Arman was able to soothe her little ones with the assurance that she was really and truly their mamma. She continued silent about her great wrongs, but one day she sought Mrs. Griffin in the corridor of the Los Angeles Post Office, in California, drew a revolver from her handbag and shot her dead.

At the inquest, and before the Magistrate the whole story came out. Yes, Mrs. De Arman had shot and killed Mrs. Griffin. There was no denial, no doubt about that fact. But when the whole story had been told the word "murder" no longer existed. The Magistrate's voice was choked. Not a dry eye in the courtroom.

"If ever there was a case of justification," began the Magistrate, and there his voice stuck in his throat. After a moment he blurted out to Mrs. De Arman, slayer of Mrs. Griffin:

"Go home and tend your babies."

The wife and mother protector of her home was free. A new "unwritten law" had established its precedent.

The provocation of the injured wife and mother, as shown in court, was so great, and the emotions of judge and spectators so aroused in favor of abstract justice, that the letter of the law was absolutely set at naught, forgotten.

Doubtless cases are rare where the taker of a human life could profit by the precedent established in Mrs. De Arman's case. Oftener it is the "affinity", not the injured wife, who takes the law into her own hands. Mrs. Annie Bradley, who shot and killed Senator Brown, of Utah, was not his wife, though she claimed that he was the father of her children.

If Mrs. Brown had killed Mrs. Bradley, would this new "unwritten law" have prevailed in her case? If the abandoned wife of "Affinity" Earle had killed the young woman who took her husband from her, would she have escaped the legal penalty as easily?

In New York the Rev. Jere Cooke, of Hempstead, Long Island, deserted his wife to elope with Floretta Whalley, a young girl member of his congregation. Is it likely that a judge would have held Mrs. Cooke guiltless of murder if she had killed Floretta Whalley?

The answer seems to be that none of these instances presented such great provocation, such justification, as did that of Mrs. De Arman.

The tragedy occurred as a climax to four years of worry and unhappiness on the part of Mrs. De Arman, occasioned by the attentions Mr. De Arman showed to Mrs. Griffin. Yet those four years of heartache, the bitterest a woman ever knew, was nothing compared to her grief on learning that the Griffin woman was not content with stealing her husband's affections but was contemplating taking her children to Germany and leaving her friendless and childless.

It was a cruel blow to the pretty, frail woman, married when only fourteen years old to the man who had brought her so much unhappiness. When her husband was ruled off the track and all that stood between him and reinstatement was the Griffin woman, who had him in her toils, she sought no revenge; but when her mother-love was aroused she shot the woman who would have taken her children away from her.

Mrs. De Arman first intended to kill herself and children but was saved from this terrible deed by hearing the merry laughter of her little ones. She rode mile after mile on horse-back trying to decide what she should do. That she herself must die seemed certain, but how she would bring about the end was a question.

Then came the scene in the post office and the two weeks of illness and uncertainity that followed.

Exactly two weeks after the tragedy Justice P. B. Halloway, overcome with emotion and tears rolling down his cheeks, bade the woman go home to her children, declaring her act was justified.

Paul W. Schenck, a young lawyer still in his thirties, was responsible for the thrilling scene that took place in the courtroom. Though a young man in years, he made a plea that an orator with a national reputation would have been proud of. Dramatically he told of his client's sufferings, of the other woman's usurping the place that rightfully belonged to the wife, and repeated the tales that the children had carried to their mother, repeating neighborhood gossip, and asked who was really their mamma, Mrs. Griffin or Mrs. de Arman.

During this recital there was not a sound save the sobbing of the spectators. The Judge was overcome and the Prosecuting Attorney buried his face in his hands to hide his emotion. When Schenck finished his auditors broke into cheers.

Mrs. De Armand had in the meantime swooned; she never heard the speech, and was carried to her home unconscious—a free woman.

"God in His goodness saved me for my little ones, and I will be faithful to the trust," she said the next day. "I have lived through four years of frightful torture, but now, God helping, it is all over, and I will try to look at the future bravely.

"I thought I could not live until I reached the courtroom, and when I listened to all the testimony I felt that human nature could not bear it any longer. Before Mr. Schenck had concluded his speech I thought death was stealing over me. I could not call my nurse or husband for aid, and soon unconsciousness overtook me. They have since told me what the judge said—God bless him—as he dismissed the charge, but I knew nothing of it until hours afterward. At times I would regain consciousness for a few minutes, then sink again, and I called for my children, thinking the end had come. But am better now, and I will get well for my little ones.'

"And you have forgiven your husband for the past?'

"When one has passed through what I have, to forgive is easy," she replied. "I know and feel that he will do right and my heart is not filled with bitterness—only a hope that the future will bring forgetfulness."

De Arman never knew his wife until now. He is overcome with shame and remorse. He plans to take her to the mountains, to a strange country where she will learn to forget.

"I will be good to her," he said. "I have done wrong, but God helping, I will never cause her a moment's unhappiness again. I will live now for my wife and children.'

Apparently nothing but death to the "other woman" from the hand of the wronged wife could have restored this husband wholly to his family. De Arman declared that he had repeatedly given the Griffin woman money with which to leave the country and bother him no more.

Invariably she returned to him with the same story. She had lost the money gambling at the race track. She lived in the atmosphere of race track gambling. Her husband had been a jockey. De Arman had met her at the Saratoga race track before he married. After his marriage, his young wife was naturally thrown into race track society, the breeding and racing of horses being her husband's business.

The young wife, in love with her husband, simple and trustful by nature, saw no reason why she should not accept the proffered friendship of Mrs. Griffin, who never missed a race meeting in any part of the country. It was several years before even an inkling of the wretched truth gained root in her mind.

Then children had come to keep her at home, leaving Mrs. Griffin free to queen it in her husband's box at the track, to strengthen her hold upon him, to miss no opportunity to make it appear that she was herself Mrs. De Arman.

Many habitues of the track indeed believed that this dashing, fashionably gowned woman, always to be seen in De Arman's box, was the wife of the celebrated horseman. During the last year or two she arrived in her automobile, a big yellow machine presented to her by De Arman. Seated in De Arman's box, with messengers running to and fro executing her betting commissions, she took care that her position was respected.

Mrs. De Arman did not stop attending the races altogether. But when she arrived it was in a modest trap, and she occupied an inconspicuous seat in the grandstand. She was simply attired, and retiring in her manners. If she had occasion to make it known that she was Mrs. De Arman, what more natural than that many accorded her, the lawful wife, the position really occupied by Mrs. Griffin?

Yet she made no complaint that reached so far even as the ears of her neighbors. Probably she sought to reclaim her husband, and perhaps he confessed to her how fruitless were his efforts to rid himself of the "other woman." It is on record that De Arman confessed to friends how he longed to be rid of her and how powerless he was in her hands.

"She has promised to go, and has left me," he said, "only to return with threats that if ever I abandoned her she would kill not only me, but my wife and children."

Latterly the Griffin woman's conduct had become more and more brazen. It showed her purpose to force her general acceptance in racetrack society as De Arman's wife.

At this stage came those curious inquiries from her little sons and daughters that nearly drove Mrs. De Arman to suicide.

"Is Mrs. Griffin our real mamma, or are you?"

Perhaps Mrs. De Arman might have borne this, too, in silence. But what she could not bear was her belief that Mrs. Griffin actually was planning to rob her not only of her husband, but of her children also.

This dread nerved her hand to face the destroyer of her home with a fusillade of five revolver shots—the last of which sent Mrs. Griffin to eternal judgment, and set her herself above the law of the land.

A Girl's Idea of the Proper Sphere of Girls.

HAVE you ever noticed when you find a group of children at play that the game which seems always to be first favorite is that of "Playing Mamma?" Even the little ones recognize that to be "like mother" is one of the highest things to which they can aim. They are always trying to copy her sayings and doings, and are never happier than when they are surrounded by their dolls, speaking to them and comforting them, as a real live mother does.

It is doubtful whether those who have the care of children always realize the position they hold in a child's mind. Mothers and grown-up sisters would need to be very watchful over themselves if they would always remain on the pedestals to which the little ones raise them. In the child's heart at least, the mother reigns supreme, while the "big sisters" hold a high place there too.

We often hear people talk about "women's rights." Some women will spend all their time and energy in trying to obtain what they consider their "rights," forgetting all the time that instead of increasing their domain they are losing much of their old inheritance. They forget that they have a kingdom to govern which no one but themselves can govern, and which, if left to other hands, must ultimately go to ruin or be lost.

One of the grandest "rights" that woman has is that of being queen in her own home and of making it a place of beauty, and her "subjects" happy. No man can ever fill her place there; there she reigns supreme. It is within her power to make it the most attractive place on earth. Her duty lies there, and her greatest joy. It may be a humble, even a poor place, but it is her kingdom, and while she is doing her utmost to make it the happiest spot on earth for her dear ones, she has as much right to be called "queen" as any sovereign on the throne.

Every one must admire girls who, when it is necessary, have the pluck to go out into the world in order to earn their daily bread; but admiration is just as great for those whose duty lies at home. She is there in her true woman's sphere. She is doing the work for which woman was always intended. Some girls fret because they cannot go out into the world and work for money as many of their friends do. They grow restless and discontented because they must always "help at home." Now, if these girls would only realize it, they are doing the very noblest thing they can do.

Does it never occur to them that they are under a great big debt to their fathers and mothers, and that anything they can do, ought to be done to make the "old folks" happy as they become less active and able for work? It oftens happens that we can help best by working and carrying home our earnings to add to the household exchequer; but often, too, we shall find that our clear duty lies right in the home itself. And when that is the case let us go to work with a right good will.

We have been told that we are all born princesses, and that some day or other we shall be queens in our own right in our own homes. Let us try then to prepare ourselves for the honor which is to come to us!

Nature's Laws in Animal Life Applied to Humans.

By Prof. Herbert Heywood.

EUGENICS is the new science which has come into existence lately, meaning "good breeding," as applied to the human race. The object of this new science is to determine the laws of heredity, and to so apply them that better babies shall be born and the human race improved rather than allowed to degenerate. So important is this subject deemed that Dr. W. M. Hays, Assistant Secretary of the Department of Agriculture at Washington, representing the American Breeders' Association, appointed a committee on eugenics somewhat over a year ago. On this committee are Professor Alexander Graham Bell, Professor Roswell H. Johnson, formerly with the Station for Experimental Evolution at Cold Spring Harbor, of the Carnegie Institution of Washington; Luther Burbank, the famous plant breeder of California, and other scientific men.

So seriously has this problem been taken in England that Sir Francis Galton, the distinguished scientist, has established a eugenical laboratory in the University of London. Here are being studied the causes why a part of England's population is declining on account of degeneracy, and why other eminent and noble families are really thoroughbreds and "breed true," as breeders would say, generation after generation. One of the most notable examples of this is that of the family of the late Charles Henry Wilson, Lord Nunburnholme. He belonged to one of the most famous families in English society. His widow is a beautiful woman, so was her mother and grandmother. The four daughters of Lord and Lady Nunburnholme, Millicent, Enid, Gwladys and Joan Wilson, the latter now Countess of Chesterfield, are famous for their beauty. And their children, in turn, are also models of well-bred beauty. So this may be termed a "thoroughbred" family.

Thoroughbred families need not be supposed to be rich and aristocratic, but good families in which all or nearly all the members for several generations have led honorable lives and filled useful positions in the community.

Heredity has long been a puzzling subject. It has been assumed that a child should be like its parents, a son like his father and a daughter like her mother. When it has turned out that children are totally unlike their parents, as so often happens, people have been at a loss to account for the cause.

It is possible now to forecast what kind of children are likely to result from marriages of certain types of people.

The child will be one-quarter like the father, one-quarter like the mother, and one-half like the ancestors of both. It will thus be seen that the quality of the ancestors counts for more than either one of the parents.

A man of superior attainments can thus expect his sons to have only one-quarter his own individual excellence, unless he comes of a long race of superior ancestors. If his wife also has similar ancestors, then their children may be expected to come up very nearly or fully to the standard of the parents.

If both parents, good in themselves, come from inferior ancestors, the children will tend to revert to the mediocre standard of the ancestors. This is why good ancestry is of such vital importance in securing uniformly good offspring.

The child often resembles an ancestor in some feature or character that neither of its parents personally possesses.

Though a long established race habitually breeds true to its kind, subject to small variations, yet every now and then the offspring do not resemble the parents at all, but possess some new qualities of their own—that is, they become "sports"—sometimes of such marked peculiarity as to rank as a new type, capable of becoming the origin of a new race.

This is what eugenics hopes to bring about—such a mating of desirable elements of the population that a new and superior race will soon be produced.

Beside this movement for securing better offspring there is a widespread interest in a more scientific training of children, from their babyhood up.

Some very interesting studies of children have been made by Dr. E. H. Bradford, of the Harvard Medical School, showing how in some respects in their early years they show many of the qualities of primitive races. A child walks with the bended knee and easy swaying motion of savage races. The child's body leans forward in walking and running, and illustrates the process of falling forward, which was the way man first learned to move about in an upright position on two legs instead of four feet. It would now seem strange to see men and women shuffling up and down Fifth avenue and Broadway, in New York, with bended knees and bodies inclined forward like savages on a dog trot. The straight upright position in walking is a result of modern civilization and the forming of a dignified, conventional gait.

Dr. Landone, of Los Angeles, an expert in child culture, is about to found a school for developing children into superior human beings by selecting the best specimens he can find in a number of different cities. He has also taken the worst child that he could find and trained it into one of model behavior.

All these factors working together for the betterment of the race are among the most hopeful signs of the time.

THE improvement of the human race depends largely upon two great factors, heredity and environment; and we deal chiefly with the question of heredity. It is a breeder's problem with which we are mainly concerned and not a question of education or environment.

We have learned to apply the laws of heredity so as to modify and improve our breeds of domestic animals. Can the knowledge and experience so gained be made available to man, so as to enable him to improve the species to which he himself belongs?

The problem is one of great difficulty and perplexity, for its solution depends upon the possibility of

Series of Moving Pictures, Showing How a Child Bends the Knees in Walking Like PrimitiveSavages. The Straight. Upright Walk of Later Years is an Acquired Habit Due to Civilized Custom.

New and Very Interesting Experiments and Investigations of Habits and Hereditary Traits of Young Children.

Training Selected Children.

By Prof. Leon Albert Landone.

I PROPOSE to do for children what Luther Burbank has done for plant life. I have a corps of twenty teachers in training for this work, which is to be conducted on a co-operative, philanthropic basis.

I will pick the representative children, perfect from the viewpoint of physical perfection and mental ability, and will treat them until they are as perfect as the highest types of plant life developed by Burbank, who selects only the best for his experiments. They shall be the best examples of body development; Whether they come from among the poor or wealthy, matters not.

Not only is my system adapted to taking good children and making them better, but I can take bad children and reform them. To illustrate this, I borrowed the worst little boy I could find—a child of so reckless and passionate a nature that he would certainly have become an inmate of an insane asylum at fourteen years if not specially treated.

This four-year-old boy had a habit of destroying everything he put his hands on. He tossed costly vases and bric-a-brac through windows and wrecked furniture, smashed his toys and the dishes on the table.

His relatives "loaned" him to me for four months. I prepared a room with no windows, the light filtering into the room through a hole in the ceiling. I removed all furniture and had peepholes cut into the walls. The child was not given food for about twenty-four hours and then placed in the room. He threw himself upon the floor in a paroxysm of rage. There was nothing there for him to destroy, and so he pounded his heels and head upon the floor and cried until he was exhausted.

Prior to placing him in the room I had a heavy table constructed. There were twelve round and square holes in the table, all of different dimensions, and there was a block that fitted each. When the boy was less excited I shoved the table into the room and threw the blocks upon the floor to test my theory. I believed the child would display interest in the blocks and the holes in the table, and would seek to fit the blocks into the holes. It is my idea that to bring out the best there is in children they must be rewarded when they perform the tasks we desire. The table and blocks were so constructed that when the right block was in place in the table a spring would be pressed and a piece of candy would appear.

The boy displayed no interest in the table until I had performed the test three times, with him looking on with wondering eyes. He saw that each time I was rewarded, and at the third test he displayed eagerness to play with the blocks. In the course of time he selected a block and fitted it in its proper place, and a piece of candy rolled to his hand. At the end of three months the tendency to destructiveness had absolutely disappeared.

It is my plan to provide other forms of tests to fit each child in the attempt to build up and develop the weak places in the physical or mental fibre.

If the child is slow in acting and in decision, he will be set at games and tests that will compel him to decide quickly, else he will lose the reward dangling before his eyes. Our second principal idea will be to develop the nerve structure as the physical culturists develop the body. There are those who lead in sciences who say we cannot develop and add brain cells in the human. It has been done in animal life, and we can and will develop the functional powers of children in our work.

An instance of brain development in animals is of a dog which by education of the color sense was found to have increased its brain cells from an average of sixty to one hundred per surface of a square millimetre to from six hundred to two thousand for the same surface.

In this case the cells were larger and better connected than in the brain of a dog not developed according to my idea.

Carrying out this theory, I can state with positiveness that under my practice the most capable, creative mental faculties can be indefinitely extended in power. For instance, a Gladstone, a Spencer, an Emperor Wilhelm or a new Darwin could have his mental faculties intensified, his brain cells increased so as to impart to them additional intellectual forces and give to them acquirements which they could never attain otherwise.

In experimenting to prove my theory and practice I have so far utilized human deficients. Dumbness, deafness, color-blindness, incapacity for constructiveness, entire absence of discrimination of beauty in tone or form all three we have remedied, and in the process mightily added to the number and construction of the brain cells.

In other words, I have changed the tissue construction of the brain, giving it added dynamical ability.

Now I propose to apply the same methods employed on deficients to normal, capable brains. Ameliorating the conditions of the unfortunates is of less importance than the improving of the average or even higher types of intellect for the benefit of the race.

The character department for children is based upon evolutionary processes of development and methods of training.

the offspring from human beings. By no f compulsion can this be done. The con- power, if it is possible to evoke it in the of the race, resides exclusively with the in most immediately concerned. This fact, I ould be recognized as fundamental so that sses should be persuasive rather than man-eat hope lies in the fact that human beings ntelligence, and a desire that their offspring ully up to the average of the race in every , if not superior. It is certainly the case nan desires that his children shall be weak, fective, or in any way inferior in physical or ndowments. A condition of sentiment, there- ails that is eminently favorable to voluntary s with plans that appeal to reason and sound . The mere dissemination of information g those conditions that result in superior or ffspring would of itself tend to promote the n of the superior elements.

hould be clearly shown that certain classes ges are hurtful to the offspring and others the mere dissemination of that knowledge itself tend to promote desirable and prevent le unions of the sexes. Would any reason- on, for instance, think of marrying his first ny more than he would dream of marrying if he really believed that any harm would the offspring; and if you could find one such uld you find two—for it takes two to make e.

e statistics which indicate very clearly that neous unions should not be contracted by persons, and the results obtained by Dr. E. are specially significant in this connection. s that there is considerable liability to the n of deaf offspring where a deaf mute mar- ed relative, even in cases where the original we not congenital.

r individuals on the whole have a larger n of superior offspring than the average of Of course, in cases where both parents ior this prepotency is increased. It would ther increased if all the four grandparents erior, and if three or four generations of were all individually superior a thoroughbred produced. We are all familiar with the y of the thoroughbred among animals. In- s mainly through the use of thoroughbreds mprove our stocks of domestic animals. In of men and women who are thoroughbred in the points of superiority, it is obvious that endants, spreading out among the population ying into average or inferior families, would potent over their partners in marriage in he offspring, thus leading to an increase in n of superior offspring produced from the e inferior with whom they have mated. Thus would the proportion of superior offspring y the community as a whole be increased, but the level of superiority in the superior class would also be raised. There would thus be a general advance in the possession of desirable qualities all along the line from the lowest to the highest. Is not this what we mean by improvement of the species?

This result, I am inclined to believe, would follow from the simple process of promoting the marriage of the superior with the superior without resort to legislative restrictions upon marriage to reduce the production of the inferior.

If the conditions that produce undesirable offspring could be authoritatively stated, prudential restraints are apt to arise in cases where defective offspring are likely to be produced. Public opinion is a great compelling force and few there are who can resist it.

The problem of improving a race of human beings is a most perplexing one to handle. The process of improvement must be slow where the forces concerned act from within and are not [illegible] control from without. Under the best conditions it would require several generations to produce [illegible] results, but in the United States we have in the new blood introduced from abroad an important means of improvement that will act more quickly and that is eminently susceptible to control. All the nations of the world are to-day contributing elements to our population; and we have now, and now only, the opportunity of studying the process of absorption before it is complete. Why should not Congress provide for an ethnical survey of the people of the United States? We should have definite and reliable information concerning those foreign elements which are beneficial to our people and those which are harmful.

The grand spectacle is presented to our eyes of a new people being gradually evolved in the United States by the mingling together of the different races of the world in varying proportions. It is of the greatest consequence to us that the final result should be the evolution of a higher and nobler type of man in America, and not deterioration of the nation.

To this end the process of evolution should be carefully studied, and then controlled by suitable immigration laws tending to eliminate undesirable ethnical elements, and to stimulate the admission of elements assimilated readily by our population and that tend to raise the standard of manhood here.

Children from Specially Selected Parents.

By Prof. Roswell H. Johnson.

HUMAN progress takes place in two fundamentally different ways. Man may himself change as time goes on, just as he has been changing in becoming man. Or without any real innate change in man there may be such a modification in all those customs and activities called civilization, as to affect a marvellous advance.

The test by which we may distinguish between this social progress and "race progress," as it is sometimes poorly named, is heredity. Eugenics is the name adopted for the new science of studying human heredity and applying its laws to breed a better race of human beings.

The question is, at the present time, are the newborn babies any better now than they were formerly.

We have naturally been more interested in social progress, but the time is at hand when race progress must also have consideration.

Social progress has its limitations in the poor quality of many of the individuals. To make the maximum gain we must have better babies as well as better conditions.

Between 1870 and 1880 there began a marked diminution in the birth rate which has continued to the present time and shows no sign of abating. The causes of this are complex, but an analysis, such as that made by Pearson, Heron and others shows clearly that the decrease is greater among those with larger incomes.

A similar investigation in our country indicates that it affects the American blood far more than the immigrant blood.

The rapidity with which this differential birth rate may produce change is strikingly shown in Copenhagen, where one-quarter of one generation is producing one-half of the next.

It is a pressing problem to know what to do to increase the birth rate of the superior stocks and keep proportionate, at least, the children from the inferior stocks.

The progress which society is now making in bettering the conditions of workingmen, and legislating against alcohol and drug habits, because they are injurious to the individuals, will have a good effect on future generations as well.

We should urge legislation, therefore, which will decrease poverty and also that which denies to the individuals the freedom to endanger his own constitution and thus jeopardize the welfare of the next generation.

Man has been able to modify in amazing ways various animals and plants by a thoroughgoing artificial selection. So from Plato onward we have had various proposals as to how men might be modified in this way.

To sum up, I would say that man is evolving. In general the factors are those which have been studied in other animals and plants, but his social life and mental capacities have introduced important modifications.

A general survey of these factors is not encouraging as to the advancement of the race. The downward forces are balancing, if not actually surpassing the upward tendencies.

It is quite possible to modify these evolutionary tendencies without radical interference with present social conditions.

I would propose certain practical measures:

1. In charitable work it is desirable to discriminate in respect to inheritable quality and prevent reproduction of unworthy classes of society as far as possible.

2. As the army and navy drain off much of our best blood, it makes it advisable to avoid increasing those two great classes of celibates, by preventing war, whenever possible.

3. Shorten the period of professional education, and extend it by special part time courses after graduation.

4. Advocate such legislation as will decrease the inequality of wealth, so as to decrease artificial class distinctions.

5. The standard of living should be more elastic, in order that marriage need not be so long postponed among superior men, and that the number of children may be greater.

6. Young people should be taught to have a more ethical or religious attitude toward marriage and reproduction, esteeming parenthood a great privilege and duty. Young people should be given greater opportunity for increasing the circle of their acquaintances among the opposite sex. Co-education should be encouraged.

7. Some classes of criminals and defectives should be kept in celibate colonies.

8. Pure food legislation should be encouraged.

9. Prohibit marriage between the white races and those that are markedly inferior.

10. Set up an educational test for all immigrants to keep out the ignorant and degenerate.

11. Facilitate divorce in cases of conviction for felony, habitual drunkenness, moral perversity, cruelty, epilepsy, insanity and feeble mindedness. These are better grounds than desertion and adultery from the standpoint of heredity.

12. Society might well subsidize children born of parents of superior qualities.

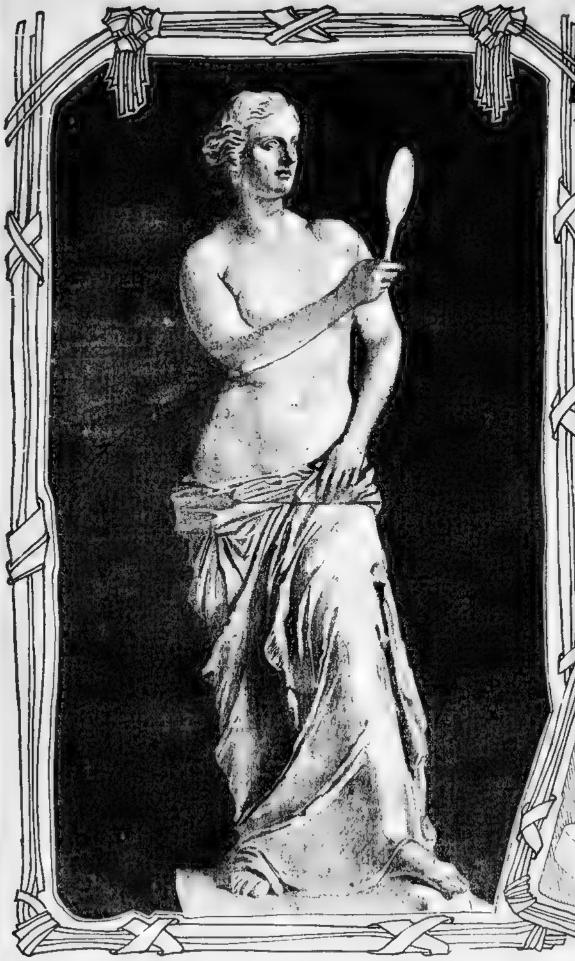
ARE THEY THE REAL LONG LOST ARMS?



The Venus de Milo Held a Mirror in Her Right Hand and Supported Her Garments with Her Left, According to the Statuette of Mononvasia

A NEW and pr[illegible] offered of the [illegible] the artist[illegible] the lost arms of the V[illegible] Milo

At Mononvasia, in [illegible] La conia, in Greece, an unmutilated terra cotta statuette has been found which reproduces exactly the type of the famous statue in the Louvre

The statuette is ancient and [illegible] to be a copy of the Venus de Milo, made when the great statue was perfect and occupied a position of honor in some splendid temple

The statuette shows the goddess holding a mirror in her right hand, and supporting her peplum, as the garments which she wears is called, in her left hand. In other words, Venus is in the midst of her toilet, and is admiring herself. Her expression [illegible] ever be interpreted [illegible] certainly [illegible] But she [illegible] ordinary woman would [illegible] perfectly satisfied

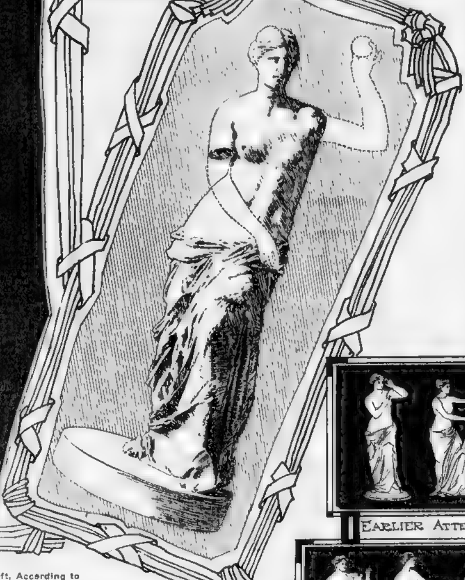
This position of the [illegible] controversy [illegible] satisfactory [illegible]

The history of the discovery of the Venus de Milo is as fascinating and mysterious as anything in the literature of art. There is strong reason to believe that the arms were found at the same time as the statue, but the probability that they will ever be recovered seems remote

The statue was discovered on the Island of Milo, or Melos, in the Greek archipelago, in 1830. A peasant named Bottonis, and his son, were out walking one day on the island when the ground caved in beneath them and they fell into an ancient temple the walls of which were richly decorated. It was filled with statuary and ancient objects of Greek art

M. Brest, the French Consul at Melos, heard of the find and hurried to the spot. He found there a statue about six feet high, now famous as the Venus of Milo, and also two small statues, a lot of broken arms, legs and other parts of statues. Among these were the head of a child and some broken fragments of the limbs, which are still preserved

There were also two female arms which might have belonged to the large statue, and a sculptured apple



HENRI ROCHEFORT'S SUGGESTED RESTORATION.

M. Brest, who possessed great influence on the island, secured the statue for France for the remarkably small sum of $4,000. The money was paid over by the Marquis de Riviere, the French Ambassador at Constantinople. After this M. Brest became angry, because he said the Marquis de Riviere had assumed all the credit for securing the statue for France

Admiral Le[illegible] who was on duty in the Mediterranean some years after the discovery, declared that he met M. Brest, who said to him

"I know where the arms of the Venus are, but I will never tell, because I have been treated with shameful ingratitude by the French Government."

From the clew given by M. Brest it is thought that the arms are still on the Island of Melos. It is presumed that they were found, like the rest of the statue, by some of the natives who should know where they are. Thorough search of the island, however, has failed to discover any trace of them

Henri Rochefort, the most prominent journalist in France and a distinguished art critic, has made a remarkable statement concerning the statue

"The statue of the Venus de Milo," he says, "was originally made holding an apple in her left hand, and the hem of her stola in another. I am quite sure of this. I learned it first from a family tradition which I heard when a child. I am a relative of the Marquis de Riviere, who was French Ambassador to Constantinople at the time the Venus was brought to Paris.

The statue was received in France with great honor and was placed by King Louis XVIII. in the Salle des Cariatides of the Louvre, where it has ever since remained, the greatest glory of antique art in the world

Before it was put in place it was entrusted to a French sculptor named Lange for repair. He added the end of the nose, which had been broken off. It was first intended to restore the statue completely, but better taste prevailed, and it was left as it was

Many suggestions have been made by distinguished sculptors in various periods for completing the statue. Messrs. Millinger, John Walker and Butler thought that Venus should be represented as holding the shield of Mars

According to Sculptor Redberg Venus held a shield upon which was engraved an inscription commemorating the victories of the Greeks over the Persians.

Mr. Stillman, who studied the subject very thoroughly, posed Venus as tracing an inscription on the [illegible]

Felix Ravaisson decided that the statue was intended to represent the Venus Urania welcoming into Elysian bliss Theseus, the heroic founder of Athens. He found a supposed reference to the creation of the statue in ancient history

M. Tarra and [illegible] von Kavensburg restored the Venus with her right hand clasping her drapery and her left holding an apple at the level of her head

[illegible] Frank Palma, an American artist, has published a book setting forth that the Venus was originally a [illegible] sort of Greek madonna holding a child on her left arm. Both mother and child [illegible]

The period when the Venus de Milo was sculptured appears to fall between the time of Phidias and that of Praxiteles, or about 400 B. C. In Roman mythology Venus was the goddess of beauty and love, more especially sensual love. Venus was of little importance as a Roman goddess until at a comparatively late period she was identified with the Greek Aphrodite. She is represented as the highest ideal of female beauty, and was naturally a favorite subject with poets and artists

The Venus de Milo as the most perfect [illegible] of this ideal has been held up to modern women as a type of figure to cultivate. But most women of the present time cannot be made to think that the Milo waist line is desirable. It is considered too masculine. There is some scientific authority for this feminine criticism. Professor D. A. Sargent, of Harvard University, says.

"In the early history of mankind women and men led lives more nearly alike, and consequently they were more alike both mentally and physically than they are today. As an illustration, compare the Indian woman and man with those of our white people. The former look alike, the latter look unlike. This divergence of the sexes is a marked characteristic of progression among highly civilized races."

The Exact Hour When You Will Die.

THE hour that kills. How strange the idea seems that there [illegible] any hour of the [illegible] particularly fatal to [illegible] beings. And yet such would appear [illegible]

It is, indeed [illegible] only familiar. For [illegible] matter of common observation [illegible] when they come to die [illegible] to succumb to the [illegible] before daybreak. It is [illegible] Angel of Death whom men [illegible] a circuit of the earth every twenty four hours, flying a little ahead [illegible] dawn

But [illegible] question [illegible] men have [illegible] as yet [illegible] have been [illegible] experiments [illegible] have arrived [illegible] phenomenon [illegible] which, one [illegible] temperature

People die just before daybreak [illegible] at that hour the [illegible] temperature is lowest [illegible] their vitality is then at a lower ebb than at any other time in the twenty four hours

It is most curious and interesting, this matter of human temperature. Nobody can say with certainty how it—that is to say, the warmth of our bodies—is produced or how maintained at the level requisite for the continuance of [illegible]. All that we know positively is [illegible] to what we call [illegible] falls only a little below the normal [illegible] death [illegible]

Any physician [illegible] normal temperature [illegible] ninety-eight and [illegible] Fahrenheit. But as [illegible] investigations [illegible] speaking. There is, indeed, no point of the thermometer that can be indicated as representing such normal temperature because the latter in any man or woman is continually moving either up or down. And while moving downward or upward it is constantly [illegible] never exactly the same [illegible] together

Some of the most valuable of recent experiments in this line have been made by Professor Armsby of the State University of Pennsylvania. He has found that during twenty four hours the temperature of a person in normal health may vary as much as two degrees Fahrenheit. But the oddest thing about it is its rhythmic movement that is to say, its regular rise and fall like that of the tide

Its lowest ebb is between 3 and 4 A. M.—the hour at which so many people pass away. Its highest point is reached about 6 P. M. Apparently its ebb and flow do not vary at all with the time of year, and certainly they are not affected by the habits of the individual. Experiments have proved that if a person turns the routine of his life upside down, sleeping all day and working all night the fluctuations of his temperature are unaltered, going on just the same

It has [illegible] ascertained, too, that when a person travels around the world, changing his [illegible] at the rate of half an hour [illegible] perhaps, the rythm of his temperature goes on just as in ordinary circumstances. But it will be noticed that this implies a change of time so that there [illegible] radical alteration in the [illegible]. What, then, is the inference from this fact? Why, simply that the whole matter is governed and controlled by the sun!

We are all of us, as one might say, [illegible] of the sun. All of our vital [illegible] from [illegible] which grows [illegible] whether directly or in the form of meat. The fuel for our [illegible] it is the sun that gives the necessary warmth to the fluid element [illegible] we live [illegible]. Thus it is by no means surprising that it should exercise control over our temperature

The ebb and flow of this temperature has to do with the waxing and waning of the day and with nothing else. It reaches its lowest point just before daybreak merely for the reason that at that hour the sun has been longest away from the earth. Apparently for the very opposite reason it attains its highest point at [illegible] o'clock in the evening. One might [illegible] that the hours of lowest and highest [illegible] with the seasons [illegible] rises later and sets earlier [illegible] Winter [illegible] Summer. That such is not [illegible] which the scientific investigators have not yet [illegible]

The whole problem, in truth, is far from [illegible] complete solution. There is [illegible] of mystery about the [illegible] temperature of the human body. We speak of [illegible] heat,' and re[illegible] of vital [illegible] suffice to explain [illegible] even the [illegible] it is exactly [illegible] The food [illegible] still a puzzle. Does [illegible] produce heat? Apparently [illegible] exists [illegible] [illegible] have been [illegible] apart [illegible] kinds of energy [illegible] of them, [illegible] and heat is another. [illegible] exercise is a form of [illegible] energy. The chemical energy [illegible] is still [illegible] only [illegible] but also to drive [illegible] work the lungs, and operate the rest of the vital machinery

Now, after [illegible] energy of the body has [illegible] converted into mechanical energy [illegible] uses, as these, it is transformed [illegible] and serves to keep the [illegible] at all events, is [illegible] subject. If as [illegible] correct one may easily [illegible] is so [illegible] an engine, [illegible] in this respect any type [illegible] yet invented

If it so happens that you feel cold, and there is no fire or other artificial heating, what do you do? Why, you exercise your body as vigorously as possible [illegible] Why? Simply because the muscular movement [illegible] the fact is that [illegible] the energy employed to work the [illegible] itself by raising the temperature

The temperature of [illegible] of a fish is the same as that of the water in which it swims. With such [illegible] as well as with turtles and snakes, neither cold nor heat seems to make any [illegible] difference, so long as it is not very extreme. [illegible] temperature [illegible] Water [illegible] very low [illegible] heart [illegible] not suffer any [illegible] and when Spring arrives the cheerful batrachian becomes as lively as ever

[illegible] There is nothing the physician dreads so much as a lowering of the temperature of a patient who is seriously ill. The fever which in typhoid or other maladies pushes the clinical thermometer up several degrees beyond the 100 mark, does not necessarily excite alarm. But let it fall only a degree or two below the normal and the presence of [illegible] is recognized. It would seem as if [illegible] of the life thus depend [illegible] all times of [illegible] of warmth which represents [illegible] even a slight fall of which, as marked by a drop of the mercury, is dangerous

WHAT WILL PRETTY MISS HOUK DO NEXT?

ONE of the most attractive of the new books of the early Summer is "The Girl in Question." On its cover is the face of a girl with tip-tilted nose, a piquant expression and a glorious crown of hair.

But it isn't.

It is the authoress herself—Violett Houk. And, singularly enough, the real girl is very much unlike the fictitious girl in the book, with one exception. Both provoke the question,

"What will she do next."

"The Girl in Question" in the book is left in much the same predicament as Stockton's heroine in "The Lady and the Tiger." She hesitates between two fateful alternatives.

Shall she wed the Prince, whom she does not love, and become the enthroned queen of her tropical island, or shall she return to "the States" and marry her warrior hero, who adores her and whom she loves?

This is the tantalizing problem which the book presents, but the real flesh and blood girl, with the pink and white complexion, the pouting lips, the gorgeous red hair (yes, it is really red, not "Titian hued"), she presents quite another problem.

Nine years ago she was little Elsie Houk, the ten-year-old child violinist, the pet of Washington society. She was the daughter of the late Congressman Leonidas C. Houk, who represented the Second District of Tennessee in the House for fourteen years.

Five years later she had thrown her violin aside, and had gone to Paris to study art.

Two years after that she had returned home and become an actress, appearing with Eleanor Robson, and the following year playing the leading role in Winston Churchill's "The Crossing," which had a short run at Daly's Theatre in New York.

It was then that Violett Houk announced that she was going to write a book.

The book is out this month, and now the girl authoress calmly announces that she is going to be a playwright—in fact that she is already writing a play in which she will star next season.

Ye gods, what will this nineteen-year-old girl do next?

"Marry," you say.

That is what her friends have been predicting for the last two seasons—but that is just what seems to be the farthest from this very [illegible] girl's mind.

So, to [illegible] for [illegible] guess about this [illegible] girl's mind it will be [illegible] a more searching glance into [illegible].

And [illegible] he [illegible] mamma [illegible] less in confidential whispers to the surrounding statesmen [illegible] short [illegible] great [illegible] their [illegible]. It sounded very odd. It was [illegible] from her [illegible].

That accounts for how this slip of a girl can now tell of such subtle political intrigues in her book.

After her "infant prodigy" days she and her mother went to Paris. First it was to study music, but the violin was soon laid aside and the easel, brushes and paints took its place. Going to London she continued art studies at the Blackburn studios, and coming back to Washington she took up work in the Corcoran Art Gallery and devoted herself to black and white drawings and etchings.

Then social life captured her, and for a season she was a well known belle and became quite famous as a beauty. All this time her violin laid on her bookcase like a little black coffin, and Miss Houk called it one of her "dead dreams."

With the attention she received socially every one expected her to make a brilliant match when, lo, she went on the stage. After two successful seasons in that profession Miss Houk comes out as an authoress.

The hero of her novel is an army officer, the villain a United States Senator, and the heroine "The Girl in Question."

This girl, at first a mystery, turns out to be a dethroned queen who lands in Washington society.

In the book there is a restaurant scene among a group of statesmen, Senators and Congressmen. The conversations are very subtle and it is hard to believe they are original with the owner of so innocent and lovely a face as that of Miss Houk. Still, it is said the toast in "The Girl in Question," which is omitted from the book, is often used in Washington [illegible] was recited by the young and beautiful authoress herself at a large dinner given at a famous hostelry in her honor in New York recently. After many toasts were addressed to Miss Houk she raised her own glass daintily and said: [illegible] the ambassa[illegible] But no one of the party would [illegible].

Miss Houk has [illegible] New York with her mother for the past three seasons. She is a great favorite [illegible] the Southern set and [illegible] all their balls, parties and dinners. Every Summer she returns to Paris.

"After talking to her for half an hour," says a friend of Miss Houk, "I noticed one odd feature of [illegible]. Not once did she mention [illegible]. So I broached the subject, hoping to [illegible] some new idea from this [illegible] girl, and I received the same answer I got from Ethel Barrymore two years ago. Men? Yes, they are delightful." And then the young authoress began to talk of the play which she is now writing."

When the friend again led around to the young writer's own personality, and delicately asked if her red hair had brought her unhappiness, according to an old tradition recently voiced by Elinor Glyn, Miss Houk said:

"No," I do not agree with Mrs. Glyn—red haired women are not unhappy. Oh, no, they are like sunflowers—they turn their faces ever to the sunshine of life. No one ever saw a gloomy or despondent red haired girl, such are not among the suicides, they fight the world and oftener rise above the world than are conquered by it. Still my advice is don't be born with red hair. We are so misunderstood," she replied wistfully, and then went on:

I protest against Mrs. Glyn's declaration that the red haired woman is a storm centre who spends her time making herself and others miserable. I believe her to be a vital [illegible] of forces, her innate nature craving light and joy. If she were permitted to develop freely and taught from her birth that she is born for the unusual, her little peculiarities put down [illegible] of her being red haired, not [illegible] by her fellow women and men [illegible] picion, she would add to the [illegible] existence.

"'If a red-haired girl and a [illegible] tion or wealth are discussing [illegible] mantic effect of the stars upon [illegible] and every woman within [illegible] will [illegible] he proceeds [illegible] upon earth to interrupt the [illegible] and rescue him.'"

All this provokes the question: what will this girl in question, [illegible] scintillating hair, and [illegible] do next?

Cats That Are Real Kings and Queens.

THE world is divided, roughly, into two classes—those who adore cats, and those who despise them. There seems to be no mean of affection. Those who contemn cats are unwilling to admit that they have any fault or failing, whereas those enlightened persons who dislike them [illegible] them [illegible] one redeeming quality.

Public opinion may be said to be changing regarding the feline. Time was when it was fashionable to deride it. Now even the impassive and impartial cyclopædia claims that the cat is an extremely useful and misunderstood member of society. It [illegible] who are cater[illegible] pay [illegible] common ordinary mouse-killers.

In considering [illegible] cats have been justly abused, the compendium of knowledge acknowledges that their character has been maligned, and that they are not, as a [illegible] cold [illegible] or indifferent, lacking [illegible] gratitude, but [illegible] emotional and warm hearted. [illegible] they are not, as [illegible] [illegible] of learning [illegible] too clever to be the [illegible] of [illegible] like dogs and monkeys, in short, that they refuse to be made fools of for mankind's amusement!

[illegible] comparatively few people who have attended cat shows of late years, [illegible] at the Exposition Building of Boston and Madison Square Garden, New York, have any conception of the beauty and variety of the feline species, [illegible] that the once-despised mouse-catcher [illegible] command hundreds, even [illegible] dollars.

One of the most celebrated and [illegible] in the country is that of Mrs. [illegible] of Grand Rapids. Mrs. [illegible] more profitable occupation [illegible] for a woman and the [illegible] of cat breeders are women. Mrs. Dykhouse has had flattering success, but she counts the honor and the money as secondary, for she loves her little charges devotedly.

When I visited this particular cattery, the famous "Romeo" kennels, I envied [illegible] the guests and the hostess.

In the same town with her home Mrs. Dykhouse has erected a small [illegible] frame house, which with its equipment, cost $2,000. It has a fine reception room filled with trophies and photographs of its former distinguished inhabitants. Beyond, on either side of an aisle, are fourteen cages. PART II.

CHAPTER I

Caught in the King's Trap

D[illegible]

A hand clutched at his foot, but he kicked himself free, and hoisted himself through the aperture."

So Strong turned and smiled down at the King. "I believe," he said, "that I have heard something of this. I before—to fact I have even desired to make its acquaintance."

He stepped into the lift, and the King stepped after him. There was something in Strong's voice that caused him to look up at him sharply, but he drew the gilt gates to and pressed the button of the elevator and they shot up.

When the lift came to a standstill the King threw open the gates again and Strong stepped out on a little strip of passage. Half a dozen yards away hung a heavy pair of curtains.

"Permit me to lead the way," said His Majesty, and he drew one of the curtains aside. Strong stepped forward and as he did so he heard a sharp click behind him. He turned about and found himself quite alone in a long, low, sparsely furnished room.

"At last," he said, as he glanced about him, "I have discovered the secret of the [illegible]."

A Deadlock, and an Escape.

STRONG set about examining the room in detail. Its four walls, which were innocent of any decoration whatsoever, were distempered a pale green. A red carpet so thick that his feet sank into it covered the floor. Along one wall was placed a table, on which were set food and drink.

There was, as a matter of fact, a large [illegible] of beef, a huge tankard of beer and a [illegible] addressed to John Strong, Esq. [illegible] He opened it and read as follows:

MONTGOMERY JONES.

[illegible]

Yet it was [illegible] the roof that Strong would [illegible]

Apart from that, everything had gone well. He had not [illegible] that he would be [illegible] to this part after [illegible] He had first heard of it from Diana when she [illegible] had over questioned the [illegible] of the King of [illegible] when he was staying in Park street as Mr. Montgomery Jones.

From Diana he had drawn all the details of this queer apartment which, so Diana had said, His Majesty had built for the express purpose of satisfactorily dealing with those emissaries from his enemy the King of Selvania who [illegible] to his house. [illegible] in desiring to be imprisoned in the tower himself was twofold. [illegible] he wished to learn the secret of Mr. Montgomery Jones's methods, that he might the better hold him to silence, and, second, the Tower presented to him the best means of escaping in a manner likely to increase Mr. Montgomery Jones's dawning fears.

But this grille above the window was a stumbling block which appeared to prevent his putting into execution the plan which he had carefully matured.

Strong therefore drew the curtains to again and walked back into the room. He turned on the switch and began to examine the ceiling. [illegible] of it was undoubtedly a trapdoor, a stout, strong trapdoor, which appeared to have no fastening on the inner side. It was, however, fitted with two small keyholes, such as are used in Yale locks.

"However," Strong continued, "let's put all that on one side and let us endeavor to see whether we cannot come to an agreement which is satisfactory to both, for obviously the proposal that you make would be satisfactory to me. To be perfectly honest, I do not place over much confidence in your good faith, and once in your hands, I doubt if the airship would ever return to mine. However, I am prepared to waive that on one condition only, and that is, before I hand over my craft, you will permit me to marry Diana."

The King rose from his chair and kicked it savagely behind him. There was an evil light in his eyes and Strong watched the revolver which covered him, wondering if His Majesty in the greatness of his age would bear just a little too hard on the trigger. But the King passed through the curtains, and Strong again heard the click of the sliding door.

He dragged a table to the centre of the room, picked up the chair which Jones had kicked over and pounded on the steel trap. He pounded for some moments, but there was no response. Undeterred by this, however, he went on pounding again, and presently he saw, sliding back, a little grating of the steel trap.

A pair of eyes peered down at him and a gruff voice in German ordered him to be still.

It was in German that Strong answered back. "Hullo, jailer," he said.

The eyes peered at him again, and Strong, craning upward, detected in them a smile. To make other people smile is to reach the halfway house toward one's goal.

"Look here," said Strong, "I'm pretty dull down here, and you are pretty dull up there. I cannot get out. I could no more escape from the top of the tower than I could escape from here, and as I value my precious neck, I am not likely to do you any harm. Why not come down and have a drink? They have left me enough for six."

The man put his legs through the aperture and hoisted himself down. He dropped rather heavily onto the carpet.

[illegible] he walked over to the table and [illegible] the tankard and drank [illegible]

"[illegible] as beer," he said.

"Try the couch," said Strong. "You might just as well make yourself comfortable while you are about it. I am getting tired of my own company."

"With your permission, sir," said the man, and lifted the tankard and walked over to the couch.

"My best respects to you, sir," he said, and once more he drank deep.

Quietly [illegible] as a child does, the man dropped off to sleep before Strong's eyes.

Strong, with the plate still held in his hand, gazed at the man with thankful [illegible]

"[illegible] I'm hanged," he said. "So it was drugged after all."

Then his quick ear caught a sound without the door. He threw [illegible] from him across the floor and leaped like a cat on to the table, and so on to the chair. He pushed the steel trap a little wider open and then, leaping up, caught the edge. As he hung there by his hands, Strong [illegible] A hand clutched at his foot, but he kicked himself free and hoisted himself through the aperture. A moment [illegible] he was on the roof, and had jammed the trap door back.

[illegible] he heard a faint cry, and then his ear caught the purring of the [illegible] propellers.

ALTHOUGH the American woman holds up her hands in horror at the Directoire skirt and says she "simply wouldn't dare" [illegible] apparently she won't [illegible] bathing costume, judging from [illegible] have seen.

I'm just mentioning this to prepare you for any shocks you may receive later on at nearby beaches, and to forestall you in imagining that an old-time Weber and Fields chorus had been let loose to gambol upon the sands.

It is inevitable, I suppose, that the spirit of sensationalism which for the last eight months or so has been influencing women's attire should be felt particularly in bathing costumes—which are, after all, only a species of fancy dress. And the [illegible] here, I assure you. Such screaming effects, such "Hoot, mon!" plaids, such skin [illegible] effects and abbreviated skirts! Just wait until you see.

The modes of the moment are here. Princess dresses with panel fronts, semi-Empire effects, kimono sleeves and [illegible] scarfs—all are represented. I wonder what our great-grandmothers would say could they visit a fashionable bathing beach to-day. Their comment might be [illegible]

There is a [illegible] out this year for those who [illegible] less extreme bathing dresses. Made of a mixture of mohair and silk, it has the good qualities of both. It is really more brilliant than silk, and yet has all the water-shedding and wearing virtues of good mohair. It is sure to be popular among the "beauty bathers" this Summer—of course, to those whose "bathing" consists of sitting for half an hour or so on the sand, one plunge and a run back to the bath house, water-shedding and wearing qualities have little interest.

The designers of bathing dresses this season seem, however, to have kept both kinds of bathers in mind—the devotees of the surf and the devotees of the sand. For the women who loves to promenade up and down the [illegible]

[illegible] for the girl who [illegible] with the water there [illegible] something quite different. She [illegible] a two-piece bathing dress, bloomers and waist cut in [illegible] short skirt [illegible] Short puff [illegible] stockings [illegible] for the same reason. As she enters the water she draws over her hair a cap of rubber [illegible]

[illegible] something among bathing dress models to suit you. The suits of [illegible] with collar, belt and cap of [illegible] are a very good [illegible] This year borders [illegible] have been put to effective use [illegible] at the bottom of the short bathing dress, to form kimono sleeves, outline the neck and make the belt. Brown with tan stripes is very good, as is navy blue with Copenhagen blue stripes. The dresses of broken-check black and white silk, trimmed with black silk or satin, with big black-covered buttons, worked with a few stitches in white, are charming.

Braiding of [illegible] is found on many high priced suits. Often [illegible] panel of a Princess bathing dress [illegible] braided, with belt and [illegible] Some perfectly cut Princess [illegible] made without trimming depend [illegible] effect on their good lines.

Of course, under these [illegible] dresses [illegible] necessary that corsets [illegible] be worn. Several models of rust-proof corsets are on the market and [illegible] rubber [illegible] each season [illegible] same [illegible] freedom of movement.

It really looks as though the audacious Merry Widow hat was going to enter the [illegible] a [illegible] brown or [illegible] hats which for some heaven knows what reason are dubbed "Merry Widow," but the broad fringe edged hat which the fascinating widow wore when she descended the stairs at Maxim's. It is on a similar model that the up-to-date bathing hat is made. A few—just a few—of these becoming hats I saw worn by members of the "400" at Bailey's [illegible]

[illegible] the most satisfactory [illegible] bathing dresses. It wears well and [illegible] shedding the water [illegible] very good looking [illegible] the quality is [illegible] dark [illegible] a good quality [illegible] of the water [illegible] of a new material composed of mohair and silk I have spoken above.

Footlight Favorites Give Hearty Praise To the New Ballad, "Sweetheart Days"

"Many thanks for the new songs just received. I think 'Sweetheart Days' the best of all. It should be one of the greatest hits you have ever published."

Bessie Wynn.

"I want to extend congratulations upon your new song, 'Sweetheart Days.' That this ballad will win universal popularity goes without saying. It has the true ring."

Adele Ritchie.

"'Sweetheart Days' is one of the prettiest and most pleasing songs I have heard in years. I sincerely believe it will crowd to the front rank of popular ballads. Congratulations."

Cheridah Simpson.

"Again you have picked a winner. If 'Sweetheart Days' does not take the country by storm I will be much surprised. The words and music are certainly ideal for a sentimental ballad."

Ethel Levey.

Four of America's best known stage favorites have furnished their opinions, as above, to Jerome H. Remick & Co., publishers of "Sweetheart Days." Certainly they are well qualified to judge of the merits of a song, as all the best numbers published are submitted for their consideration. "Sweetheart Days" is by the writer of "Dreaming," but has a much sweeter melody and the verses and chorus are written with a rare charm and sentimental appeal. Leading music dealers everywhere already report a tremendous sale of "Sweetheart Days," which would indicate that the four singers pictured above have made no mistake in predicting great success for this new song.

Don't Neglect Your Own Hair During These Days of False Hair.

A TIMELY BIT OF ADVICE FOR THE SUMMER GIRL.

SEEING how much the good looks of women depend on the hair and how necessary it is to preserve it if one would not get old prematurely it is altogether wonderful how little care people bestow upon their tresses, as far as taking care of them is concerned. They should be abundant and glossy. There is many a woman who almost entirely owes her claim to good looks to her hair, for if in good condition and well dressed, they well we mean not only fashionably and carefully but becomingly, it develops the good points of the features and the charm of expression.

So much depends on the line of [illegible] between the face and the hair. To some women it is all important to have a [illegible] descending in the centre of the forehead, and soft curls falling to the temples, which are points which the fashionable coiffures of to-day favor.

We begin to lose our hair and our hair outline first on the temples, so that it is there that the tresses should be carefully cultivated, and at present it is most essential to pay special attention to the dressing of the hair at the back, so that not too hard a line should be seen when it is combed upwards. Men get bald on the top of the head, women rarely, unless they have strained and tied the hair unduly in that direction. But about the temples, if allowed to assume importance, the whole facial expression will change and youth will vanish. Many people are reckless in the treatment of their hair and comb and brush [illegible] much, almost as if a pine [illegible] necessary [illegible] though [illegible] to shampoo the head too [illegible] in all things is a great secret in beauty.

It is well to remember that, while the most important, the hairs that border the face and neck are the most delicate. In these days of friction and massage, when [illegible] is attended to, the hair is often suffering. We injure it terribly by frizzing with the comb to increase its apparent bulk and by trying to [illegible] the [illegible] toward the front by means of a comb after [illegible] has been dressed. [illegible] both these processes. Do not comb the hair upward before brushing it, on the contrary, let it assume its most natural pose before dressing it.

Part the hair down the centre before beginning brushing operations, and continue the brushing down from the roots to the points. When the hair is thick part it in small strands and brush between. The movement of brushing should be a gentle one, not scouring the scalp, but directed to the hair. Curling on rollers during the night is a strain, but it is not so injurious as the persistent use of hot irons. When face washes are used it is wise to introduce a little oil on the edges of the hair, so that none of the face creams and tonics find their way on to it.

When golden hair was the mode, many and many a beautiful head of hair was ruined forever by the use of [illegible] and of the [illegible] where [illegible] does wonders. The scalp should not be hard and immovable on the skull, but soft and easily pushed backward and forward, and this can be promoted by moving it gently with the fingers of both hands without interfering with the hair. This increases the circulation of the blood. In time it will bear fruit by the growth of fresh hairs. The hair should be well ventilated, so that the air can get to it.

The hair falls off more in the Autumn than at any other time of year. People who enjoy sea bathing often injure it. Before entering the water they should place a wet sponge at the nape of the neck and allow water to flow down the spine, thus preventing the shock which the contact of the sea water so often gives and is so deleterious. Salt water has a bad effect on the hair, and, if not protected by a waterproof cap, it should be well washed on leaving the sea. It is in the Autumn that special care should be directed to the hair, otherwise, not only will it fall off, but will become gray. If the scalp is inflexible the vigor of the hair will suffer. A quarter of an hour spent by beginning at the outer edge and working toward the centre, the fingers pressed firmly, the skin, not the hair, being well manipulated, works wonders. Then a good tonic should be used, according to the nature of the head, oily or dry. Many heads of hair will not stand constant washing.

GIRL DARES DEATH IN TRIPLE AUTO SOMERSAULT

Turns With Car Three Times, Making World Record for Daring and Skill.

CROWD AWED BY PERIL

A slender girl with great brown eyes and a wonderfully winning smile, not yet out of her teens and untrained in the great amusement world, faced death with superb courage yesterday at Wonderland in one of the most thrilling and apparently dangerous feats ever attempted for the delectation of an applauding crowd.

For a [illegible] there was a hush of suspense [illegible] of suppressed fright and then a [illegible] shout of approval went up [illegible] as the brown [illegible] from the car followed [illegible] wave of a slender, bare arm.

Makes World Record.

The girl was safe and she had accomplished something in the way of a spectacular act never before attempted in the world. The "death dip," which in all its name implies, had been added to the long list of thrillers.

The little girl who braved so much for the [illegible] of the public and the percentage [illegible] from the act is down on the bills as Mlle. Nile Novi. The inventor of the whirling car [illegible] Mr. Morrock has two other machines [illegible] but the cars turn in the air but twice.

For a week or more the employes of Wonderland have been wrought up to a high pitch of excitement over the "devil car" as some began to call the queer little motor like contrivance. They watched the platform rise in the air from which the steep track ran and wondered if anyone would really ride down that precipice in a car that turned over and over and over in the air. The managers of the park were just as anxious as anyone else.

If the attempt was a success they knew they had a great winner. If it proved a failure—a tragedy—well, that was another thing.

"Not for a Million."

Time after time, again and again, the little car, laden with sand to the weight of Mlle. Novi, was dropped down the track. It seemed fraught with the caprice of a Boston Spring day.

Sometimes the car would shoot into the air, turn once and leap forward like a living thing. Again it would turn twice and a half, crash down on its side and a sigh of disappointment would issue from the lips of the [illegible]. Then they would change the tilt [illegible] of the rails and try [illegible] changed, sometimes for the better, sometimes for the worse.

Several times such a strong whirl was given to the car that it turned three and a half times. The uncertainty of the machine and its consequent danger excited comment.

"I would not ride in that car for a million dollars!"

"That girl will take her life in her hands if she tries that dash!"

"It will never turn three times in the air and light right side up!"

Anxious for Plunge

And all this time the slender little girl was waiting—waiting for her chance to thrill the world, listening in anticipation to the huzzas of the populace and, maybe, trembling just a little at her own daring. For Mlle. Novi never before in her short life attempted anything more dangerous than the riding of a skittish horse.

A reporter of the Boston Sunday American found the young woman sauntering out with her maid, Miss Clara Newman, an hour before the time scheduled for the initial trial. When the park people first attempted to find her they went to the skating rink.

"She's up there skating most of the time," Mr. McNally said.

But she had left there and had wandered outside of the park enclosure. There was a flush of excitement on her cheeks when she was finally located. She wore a white shirtwaist and dark skirt. Her head was bare and her plentiful hair was coiled luxuriantly on the top of her head. When she smiled, which was frequently, rows of white, even teeth gleamed. She talked without hesitation about herself and the dangerous act she was about to attempt.

Maintains Steady Nerve.

"I am to try it to-day," she said. "I have been told to get ready. Did you see my name on the bulletin programme? What did it say? I haven't looked at the programme. I haven't watched the building of the track and the high trestle much because [illegible] to do so. He thought it might make me nervous.

"But I'm not nervous, am I? My hand does not tremble at all. Look! I have never done [illegible] of this kind before. I have been [illegible] a circus but never tried anything [illegible].

"I [illegible] myself. There is nothing [illegible] about me. You see, I [illegible] to do something daring since I was a little girl. If I had been a man I [illegible]. That is fascinating [illegible] dangerous. I have always wanted [illegible].

"When Mr. Morrock heard of me I was [illegible] by an old friend and he [illegible] could attempt the dip of death [illegible] what I was looking for [illegible] and he took me up [illegible]. He did not give me the chance to back out even if I wanted to.

"And here I [illegible]. What time is it, please? Oh, [illegible] an hour yet. It will take some time for me to dress. But I haven't got my real dress for the act yet. You know this is [illegible] trial, and—well—we don't know just how it will come out.

"You think it will [illegible] all right, don't you? Do you? [illegible] I have had a feeling all the time that it would. It just came to me that it would. Don't think I'm foolish when I tell you that I had my palm read to-day in the Mystic Temple, and I was assured that [illegible] all right. I just know it [illegible].

"I'm not a bit afraid [illegible] not nervous, but you know I'd just as lief it was over. What time is it now? I think we had better go to the dressing room—every minute now will be like an hour."

The color in the girl's cheeks had brightened and spread as she talked and as the minutes sped. But she was probably not as nervous as those about her. The crowd had begun to gather in front of the administration building. They gazed in wonder at the derrick like structure, with its almost perpendicular track for the automobile.

Just before 5 o'clock the car was hauled out. It had none of the garish things that one would expect in a dazzling act of that character. The car had just been finished and was without paint. About the seat was curved a sheet of iron to hold the body of the girl. Inside the iron covering was thickly padded. Over it extended iron bars to protect the girl as much as possible if the car landed wrong side up.

Hoisted to Platform.

Mr. Morrock climbed upon the structure and adjusted the pulleys and ropes and the car was drawn to the top. Then there appeared, making her way alone through the crowd, the slender girl who was to take the unique, amazing ride. She was clad in a bright blue skirt, with a bow of the same color at her throat. She wore a white lace waist. Her head was bare. In her right hand she carried a handkerchief.

The girl climbed into a swing and was slowly hoisted to the platform in the air, where the car awaited her. The crowd gazed, awe-stricken. Not a word was heard and the silence became almost painful.

Before Mlle. Novi got in the swing she turned to two of the men who were at work on the structure, shook them by the hand and said something. It appeared to be "good-bye." Before getting into the car she did the same thing to Mr. Morrock. She was strapped securely with her hands free. A thick shawl, doubled several times, was tucked between her body and the straps. With her free hand she pressed the handkerchief between her [illegible]. She glanced over to the balcony of the administration building where several newspaper men were standing and nodded brightly.

Plunges Down Incline.

The little section of the track upon which the car rested on a level was hoisted so that the angle coincided with the incline, and for half a minute the girl hung there in the air while the onlookers held their breath. A word from Mr. Morrock. She was released. It plunged downward, out in graceful curves into the air, turning over three times, exactly as had been calculated, dropped with a crash on the inclined chute and the feat had been performed.

The crowd rushed wildly to the car, and when the girl was helped out and she ran lightly through it the air shook with acclaim. The girl climbed up on the chute, bowed about her and hurried to the dressing room. There the writer saw her within five minutes after she had gone through the thrilling experience.

"How did it feel while you were whirling in the air?" she was asked.

"I never lost my senses. I knew where I was all the time and what was happening. I counted the turns [illegible] count them and knew that I was coming down all right. I found that my head had not been strapped fast and it jerked forward. [illegible] stiffened my neck and held my head back firmly. After this I shall have my head strapped fast.

Whizz Through Space.

"The car was released. It plunged downward, nothing that I ever had before. It was a whizz [illegible] space, a holding of my breath, a whirling in the air, a flash of dazzling light and a shock as the car struck the surface. The air fanned my face deliciously as the car shot forward and I closed my eyes and murmured a short prayer of thankfulness. I knew I had done what had never been done before. I never was so happy in my life before."

Mlle. Novi at ten o'clock last night gave a second performance of her most thrilling act. It was successful in every respect. The whirling auto turned over three times in the air, while thousands of people cheered.

SHEATH GOWN ON STAGE OF TREMONT

The sheath gown vogue now engaging the modistes of this country and others has found the musical comedy destination that was inevitable with the publicity given the new women's costume that comes originally from the Rue de la Paix, Paris.

And Boston, if you please, is to be the first city where the musical show will offer the gown as a sartorial effect de resistance.

"A Knight For a Day" at the Tremont is the production to include the new costume among its gown pageants and to-morrow evening is the date announced for the initial exposition.

The directoire, as the sheath dress is called in Paris, is not commonly as picturesque as the gown to be shown at the Tremont. Manager B. C. Whitney, who is adding the novelty to his show's costume attractions, having had the costume to be shown in his production modeled for the smartest effect possible, while keeping the lines within those of the new costume.

Besides being the first costume of the directoire class to be shown in a local production, the dress to be worn by Miss Dawson will be the first made by a local costumer, those shown publicly elsewhere to date, or announced for exposition, being imported effects.

OPEN INDEPENDENCE QUARTERS IN JULY

By Boston American Leased Wire.

New York, June 6.—Plans are rapidly being made for the occupancy of the new National Independence Club of No. 17 Gramercy Park. This house, formerly the Gerard mansion, is flanked by the Players' Club and the Columbia Club. It is a short walk of two blocks from the Eighteenth street subway station; it is equally distant from the Eighteenth street Third Avenue L station, the Fourth Avenue surface cars pass within a stone's throw; the Broadway cars can be reached by two minutes' walk; the Williamsburg cars on Fourteenth street are but a few short blocks from the clubhouse.

Contracts have been let for the carpentry and masonry work, the electric lighting, the kitchen equipment and the painting and decorating.

House Warming in July.

The officers of the club, who met Friday afternoon and inspected the premises, expect to have the club ready for occupancy the first week in July. The house warming will occur when Mr. Hearst returns from Europe, about the middle of that month.

The Board of Governors has decided that for the present there will be no initiation fee. The yearly dues have been fixed at the unusually moderate rate of $12, payable semi-annually in advance.

The purpose is to make a permanent home for all citizens of an independent turn of mind politically, both in this city and State and in the country at large.

As there are 30,000 enrolled Independence Leaguers in Greater New York, the success of the club is already assured.

National Scope of Club.

The national scope of the club is indicated by its officers. They are John Temple Graves, president; John J. Hopper of New York, Thomas L. Hisgen of Massachusetts, Charles A. Walsh of Iowa, vice-presidents; Alfred J. Boulton, secretary, and James R. Butler, treasurer.

LLOYD GARRISON SCORES ROOSEVELT

Longwood, Pa., June 6.—Speaking here to-day at the yearly meeting of Progressive Friends on "Non-Resistance a Better Defence than Armies and Navies," William Lloyd Garrison of Boston sharply criticised the attitude and course of President Roosevelt. He said in part:

"The consciousness of our national inconsistency is shown by confession alike of pulpit and press.

"The President's dream of national pomp and power has called into expression the latent brutality of the masses. Vested with more than kingly power, his impulse precedes reflection and his decision is adhered to with unreasoning pride of opinion. Quick to assimilate and reproduce public sentiment, he is a preacher of homilies while distrusting fixed principles and annoyed at their power of resistance.

"His defects of temper exclude patience, sobriety of judgment and self restraint. His diplomatic code justifies denial of intention up to the eve of the deed's committal, and his political genius is shown by his skill in assuming control of movements the moment they loom up as political factors.

"I grant that he is as willing to make a demonstration for peace as for war—as in the case of the Russian Japanese treaty—provided he is permitted to be the commanding figure. Herein, perhaps, will be his strongest defence, that nature made him to personify this heterogeneous and discordant people in a period of extraordinary civic and social complexity, and that he faithfully reflected the nation and the times. The fact may soften judgment and invoke consideration."

VETERANS TO GET PAY FOR MEMORIAL DAY

Superintendent of Streets Emerson yesterday announced that full pay will be granted to G. A. R. veterans in the employ of the city who were not at work on Memorial Day. Deputy Superintendent Sexton of the bridge division had previously declared that pay could not be granted because of the civil service certification law, which says that "city employes shall be paid only for time in which they work."

LODGE CORNERED BY GUILD'S CANDIDACY

Must Secure Governor's Nomination to Second Place Or Face Senatorial Contest.

The politicians who are on the inside in the Republican party, are beginning to sympathize with Senator Lodge in his present predicament into which he was plunged by Governor Guild's candidacy for the vice-presidency.

It is up to Lodge to make good at Chicago, or else the chief executive may be tempted to become a candidate for United States Senator when his term expires three years hence. It begins to look as if Lodge would not only be forced to make the nominating speech, but also make the nomination secure, for the Guild senatorial boom was on the way long before the Governor was stricken with sickness this Winter.

Senator Lodge was informed before the governor was taken sick that he would likely oppose him for reelection to the Senate, and to his friends it is said to have remarked that he had met many men the equal of the Governor before, and was not afraid of the pending battle.

The task of presenting Guild's name to the convention must fall on Lodge, for [illegible] long taught [illegible] a stampede [illegible] the former Secretary [illegible], by the way, was a candidate for Vice President in [illegible] that his name never went before the convention. Instead, that of Theodore Roosevelt of New York, the warm personal friend of the Nahant statesman, was presented.

Given "Double Cross."

Although the Massachusetts delegation was pledged to Long his name was not presented to the convention. He left Washington for his home in Hingham so as to be in a receptive mood when the convention had completed its work, but the call never came and the relations between Roosevelt and Long became more strained than ever.

While Long submitted to the situation and made the most of it, such a result is hardly expected in the case of Governor Guild, and it is said that he intends to go to Chicago and be on the ground when the big show opens up June 3. It was expected that Lodge would be excused in the matter of presenting the Governor's name, owing to the fact that he is to be the permanent presiding officer of the convention, and that it would be bad taste for him to take part in the deliberations from the floor.

It is very doubtful if Long could be induced to present Guild's name, because there is no love lost between them. When Long was appointed in McKinley's first cabinet, it is said that Guild, then a private in the ranks, wondered where he fitted and the Hingham man heard of it, and does not forget it. There is no doubt that Long will be a big figure in the convention and Taft's friends want him to second the nomination on behalf of Massachusetts, which he will do.

Calls Bigney a Joke.

When many Republicans were wavering somewhat, Long was among the first to declare his preference for Taft.

It is now that the Guild shouters are regretting that he did not consent to be a delegate at large to the convention when he had the chance, for it would have given him a commanding position on the floor of the convention, something he will need if he is to remain in the light.

During the past week the suggestion to have Lodge assume full charge of the Guild boom has come along pretty strong, and it looks as if he will have to go down on the floor and present the name to the convention. Colonel Bigney of Attleboro would willingly help in the nominating act if he was only asked to, but the Governor regards him as too much of a joke for the job.

As for asking Senator Crane to make the nominating speech, that is entirely out of the question, for the hardest jobs of all his life were being obliged to deliver three long inaugural addresses and then again when he made a twenty-word speech in accepting the nomination for Governor.

Cortelyou or Fairbanks?

Outside of Massachusetts not a single delegate to the national convention has declared a preference for Guild, and not a leading Republican newspaper has advocated his nomination. The only avowed newspaper support comes from Boston, so that the vice-presidential boom is not taken very seriously outside of the State.

From present indications it appears that if the ticket is not Taft and Fairbanks it will be Taft and Cortelyou, for the Republican party will need funds, and Cortelyou would be the man of the hour in that crisis. Then again the electoral vote of New York State is essential, and quite necessary, while Massachusetts is safe for the ticket under most any old conditions.

CATCH WANTED MAN AFTER SWIFT CHASE

Hub Detectives Outrun and Capture Alleged Pickpocket in South End.

Police Inspectors Rooney and McCauley arrested John McQuaid on railroad tracks near the Berkeley street bridge yesterday after an exciting chase, and he is being held awaiting the action of New York authorities, a bench warrant charging him with grand larceny in the first degree having been issued against him in that city.

The police say that he is known under the alias of John Emmett and is a clever pickpocket. He was arrested in New York more than a month ago on the charge of picking the pocket of John Ross at Thirty-second street and Eighth avenue, but did not appear for a hearing May 8 in a court there, after being given liberty under $1,000 bonds.

The New York police heard he had come to Boston and notified Boston detectives. They got track of him in the South End and yesterday Inspector McCauley saw him coming out of a South End house and followed him to Castle Square, where he met Inspector Rooney.

McQuaid and two men with him got on a street car and was followed by the officers. He saw them and jumped from the front platform, ran to Appleton street and thence into Berkeley street and the railroad bridge, where he climbed down upon the tracks. The inspectors kept at his heels and caught him.

Investigate!
Investigate!

The Alveolar Method of Dentistry is different and better than ordinary dentistry. It will accomplish things for you that ordinary dentistry cannot.

We know that this is so, but we do not expect that you will know it or believe it unless you have investigated. Therefore we propose to give you an opportunity to investigate the Alveolar method, and we shall try to make that investigation as complete and as easy for you as possible.

Now for your investigation. If you will drop us a line giving your name and address we will send you by return mail the names of people living in your vicinity who have had work done on their teeth by the Alveolar Method. See these people and talk to them. Ask them what they think of Alveolar Dentistry.

G. GORDON MARTIN, Inc.

I am pleased with the dental work you did for me a few months ago, which was all my upper row, and although I spent some time and money trying to get them done by one who called himself a first class dentist, he certainly failed in my case. He made me a partial plate, one I could never use with any kind of comfort. Now that I am able to eat everything and [illegible] the taste of my food, thought it right to tell you of the facts. I do not think there could be any one more skeptical than I was when I thought of having you do my work for the reason I had lost faith in ever having anything done for my teeth again, but it was a case of must. They were in an awful bad condition, but are all right now. Wishing you much success, respectfully

(Signed) MISS D. McNAMARA.

After you have seen the work, and know what the patient has to say about it, call at our office and we can then explain to you what can be done for your individual case, and you will understand it.

We have perfect confidence in our method and our work, otherwise we would not offer to assist your investigation in this way.

In this advertisement we do not attempt to explain the Alveolar Method of Dentistry, but only suggest how you can investigate and find out for yourself how to have firm, solid, natural-looking teeth without recourse to cumbersome bridge-work or plates.

Write for our illustrated book on Alveolar Dentistry, which contains more valuable information about the teeth than any book of equal size ever published. No charge.

DECLARE LAY-OFF OF TROLLEY EMPLOYES BLOW AT NEW UNION

Twenty Discharged Rhode Island Car Men All Joined Organization, They Claim.

Providence, June 6.—The action of the Rhode Island Company in laying off twenty of its motormen and conductors has stirred the city. While the company denies that the move by which the employes lost their positions is a result of the formation of a street car men's union in this city, the men believe that they have been discriminated against.

Superintendent Roscoe Anderson claims that all the men laid off have violated rules of the company. When asked if more discharges would follow he would not say.

Some 200 employes of the Rhode Island Company met Thursday night at the Labor Temple and organized a local branch of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes of America. At the door of the Temple four men were posted by order of the company, the union men claim. These pickets are said to have reported the names of seventy-five or more men who entered the Temple. All of the men laid off attended the meeting.

Pickets Turn Men Away.

Some men who asked the pickets if they would be reported if they went to the meeting, on being answered in the affirmative turned away.

Officials of the railway company say that the men who have been laid off were new at the time of the strike some four years ago and at that time they signed an agreement not to agitate against the company.

The men at the several barns to-day were not inclined to make statements for fear of dismissal, but those who would talk seemed to feel that union men were being discriminated against. The railroad officials claim that the majority of the men in their employ are against a union.

George Love, who was connected with the Olneyville car barn, was named for secretary of the new union. He is among those laid off. He is quoted as saying that he signed the paper at the time of the car strike in 1904, but does not think that the agreement is binding at the present time as the corporation has changed hands.

Union Meeting Called.

Organizer Resin Orr said that he did not believe that the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company would stand behind the action of the company, as the New Haven was willing to discuss grievances with its men. Another meeting of the new local railroad union has been called for Thursday night.

Local trolleymen dislike the new fare collector which has been put in use on the lines. This fare collector is not used in Massachusetts, and on the lines running from Rhode Island into that State the conductors are obliged to discontinue its use and collect fares by hand.

LEAGUERS DISCUSS FIELD DAY PLANS

Saugus Members to Seek Co-Operation for Outing at One of the Beaches.

The Independence Leaguers of Essex, Middlesex, and Suffolk counties are considering the holding of a big field-day and clambake at one of the near-by beaches soon after the National convention—probably on Labour Day.

The idea originated with the members of the Saugus Independence League, and has been approved by the members of the Lynn League. Clarence I. McIver, president of the the Saugus League, is arranging a program on behalf of his town committee, which he will submit to the committees of other cities and towns in the three counties.

At the next meeting of the city committee of the Boston Independence League he will explain his idea in detail and ask for the co-operation of the party in this Saugus League, is arranging a programme calls for a clambake, a baseball game, sports of various kinds, and speeches by prominent League leaders.

The Saugus committee will explain their plans to the Leaguers of Cambridge, Malden, Chelsea, Revere, Lowell, and Lawrence for the purpose of securing their co-operation after they have been passed upon by the Boston League. It is then proposed to hold a general meeting of delegates from the leagues in the three counties for the purpose of appointing the various committees to arrange for the affair.

PROFIT-SHARING AT M'DONNELL'S

Management Will Step Aside for a Week to Make Way for Employes.

This week is the anniversary of Employes' Week at MacDonnell's Tremont Temple store, it being five years since S. A. MacDonnell inaugurated this event. All who knew him will well remember his pleased expression when speaking of this occasion.

Mrs. MacDonnell, who is now carrying on the business along the same lines, considers it most fitting that Employes' Week at MacDonnell's should be a yearly happening in the future as in the past.

This week, therefore, the management will step aside and the employes will run the store and do all in their power to make the week most successful in every way. Needless to say they will be more alert than ever during this period, although it was their faithful attention to the interest of their employer that first suggested this novel profit-sharing plan.

It is exceedingly pleasant to the many customers at MacDonnell's to note the cheerful and prompt manner in which the clerks perform their various duties. In fact, the clerks at this popular establishment have often been compared with a little family, so united do they all seem.

One of the unusual results of the policy at this store is that the employes never ask for an increase in salary. They have often found this increase offered when least expected, and at all times feel assured of having merit properly rewarded.

ROMANCE OF PHOTO TO END IN WEDDING

Artist Sees Picture; Seeks Introduction; Will Marry Talented Vocalist.

Following a pretty romance of one year, announcement was made yesterday of the engagement of Miss Lilla Marie Osgood, horsewoman and vocalist, and the talented young daughter of C. F. Osgood, a prominent Boston business man, and William Mather Crocker, artist and illustrator of this city, and son of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis C. Crocker of No. 11 West Baltimore street, Lynn.

Cupid in this case directed his arrow through one of Miss Osgood's photographs and it hit straight. Crocker was visiting at a friend's home and in the drawing room noticed the photograph of a beautiful young woman. This began the romance.

Captivated, he asked who the young woman was. Then he asked for an introduction. There was a social gathering at the friend's home one evening later, and by secret arrangement of the host both Miss Osgood and Crocker were there. Miss Osgood, a contralto, sang.

Crocker was quick to recognize the young woman as the original of the photograph and after they became acquainted the friendship quickly ripened and now the wedding arrangements are being made. The date has not been announced.

Miss Osgood has attended fashionable schools for girls in Washington, D. C., and Castle-on-the-Hudson and received her musical education in Boston. Mr. Crocker is a graduate of Brighton High School, class of '95.

LACKED CASH; TRIED TWICE TO END LIFE

Despondency Over Inability to Pay Debts Caused Portland Youth's Suicide Attempts.

Despondency over his inability to meet pressing financial obligations is said by friends to have been responsible for the two attempts Harry S. Boonheur, formerly of Portland, Me., made upon his life in Boston. The young man is now recovering at the City Hospital.

Boonheur is the son of a wealthy farmer at Swanton, Vermont. Four years ago he went to Portland. He was popular, spending money freely, and was prominent in athletics, for two years being left guard on the Portland A. C. football team.

Boonheur, after coming to Boston early last week, took carbolic acid, but the dose, the physicians say, was either too large or too small. It failed to accomplish his purpose. Then the young man slashed his throat and wrists Thursday at the Revere House, Bowdoin square.

OUTDOOR MASQUE TO AID FRESH AIR HOME

An outdoor masque in aid of "Richland," the fresh air home conducted by the Newtonville Methodist parish, was held yesterday on the grounds surrounding the church at Walnut street and Newtonville avenue. The home gives vacations to 2,000 poor children each Summer.

Failure as Overseer, Kills Oldest Shaker in Enfield Community

Elder Levi Shaw Dies at 90, After Lifetime in Ranks of Quaint Connecticut Settlement.

Springfield, June 6.—The funeral of Levi Shaw, the oldest Shaker in the Shaker settlement at Enfield, Conn., was held this [illegible]. Elder Shaw was within a few months of ninety years of age and had never had a sick day until a week ago.

Those near to him say he died of a broken heart because of the first failure he had met with in his long life. He was made overseer of the farm of the Society at Enfield three years ago, and the task proved to be more than he could handle, the balance showing on the wrong side of the ledger.

This, it is said, worked upon his mind to such an extent that he contracted a fatal illness. He was born in Pennsylvania in 1818 and in 1828 joined a community of fifty people, who went from Valley Forge to unite with the Shakers at Lebanon, N. Y. For eighteen years he lived at Canaan, a branch community, and for the next sixty years was at Mt. Lebanon.

PLAN TEMPERANCE WORK FOR FUTURE

Leaders of the Holy Family League Meet This Afternoon at Boston College.

With a record of three years in spreading the principles of temperance among children of the several parishes in the diocese of Boston, the Holy Family Temperance League spiritual directors, secretaries and promoters will meet this afternoon in the music room of Boston College to map out a plan of action for the [illegible].

As has been the custom in the past, the convention will be opened with religious exercises in the Church of the Immaculate Conception at 1:30 in the afternoon. There will be singing by the [illegible] choir and sermon by the Rev. [illegible] Richards, S. J., followed by benediction of the Blessed Sacrament.

Following the exercises in the church there will be a meeting in the music room of the college on St. James street. Mrs. [illegible], the diocesan secretary, will give her yearly report as will also the [illegible] secretaries. Supper will be served at 6 o'clock.

In the evening there will be a grand [illegible] rally and lecture in Boston College Hall at 7 o'clock. Rev. John [illegible], pastor of St. Michael's church, [illegible], who is spiritual director of the [illegible] Total Abstinence Union of the Diocese of Boston, will be the presiding officer. Rev. Mortimer E. Twomey, pastor of St. [illegible] church, South Boston, will be the principal speaker. He will be followed by Rev. Thomas I. Gasson, S. J., president of Boston College, Mrs. Augustus [illegible], Dr. John M. Connelly and National Secretary Edwin Mulready of the [illegible] Total Abstinence Union of America.

Henry Gaughan of Dorchester will be in charge of the musical programme. The soloists will be Miss Mary T. Wallace, [illegible]; Miss Emma E. Ecker, contralto; Miss Lucy C. Phillips, soprano; Mr. Charles S. Hill, tenor, and John B. Whoriskey, baritone.

Just Think! Newport Set Now Calls For Ice Cream For Breakfast

"More Invigorating and Far More Refreshing Than Fruit," Say Fashionables.

Newport, R. I., June 6.—You wouldn't guess it in a thousand million years, but Newport has got something absolutely new.

Isn't it just the cutest?

All the folk in our set have put the Indian sign on the sawdust stuff for the [illegible]. Everybody who is anybody [illegible] the day on ice cream.

[illegible] is blamed on a Miss Millicent [illegible] from Philadelphia. The young lady's present engagement is with a high-browed freshman at Jefferson Medical. Young Sawbones is said to have written the breakfast ice cream prescription. His lady love told all her dearest friends. It spread about it, and they told all their dearest friends. Newport confectioners expect to clean up 22 per cent on the season.

"More invigorating and far more refreshing than fruit," is the finding.

Other near breakfast foods are a drug on the market.

He belongs to the Hasty Pudding Club and the Institute of 1770. He is a member of the well known Crosby family of New York City and has the entree to the best social circles.

Miss Coolidge first met [illegible] the families had long [illegible] of [illegible] she cheered him on to greater [illegible].

Among those who will be present at the wedding [illegible] Mrs. Ernest Crosby, mother of the groom; Mrs. Maurice [illegible] and his sister, [illegible].

[illegible] his classmate, will be best man, and Miss Bertha Coolidge, sister of the bride, will be maid of honor. There will [illegible] bridesmaids and little [illegible].

Honeymoon in Europe.

Miss Coolidge has spent many months in Europe completing her education, having only recently returned from Munich. She is a skilled musician and speaks several [illegible].

[illegible] will be spent on the [illegible]. After three months the couple will return to America, taking up their residence in the "Grassmere," Mr. Crosby's beautiful mansion at Rhinebeck, overlooking the Hudson River.

MORAN GETS A TOSS; M'LEAN WINS RACE

Hugh MacLean won the twenty-five mile [illegible] at the Revere track last night, Moran getting a nasty toss in the fifteenth mile and being forced to withdraw when he was [illegible] with MacLean. As a result Nat Butler came in second about a mile in the rear of MacLean.

It was a terrible battle between Moran and MacLean till the tire on Moran's motor exploded and the [illegible] Rosiers, who was riding, and Moran and his wheel were hurled across the track in a bunch. Moran was badly bruised and [illegible] recovered sufficiently to leave [illegible].

MacLean went out at a fast speed and at ten miles he had [illegible] laps on Moran, who fought [illegible]. MacLean tried to pass [illegible] MacLean lost his pace for a spell and Moran tore around the saucer and got on even terms with him.

EX-MAYOR FITZGERALD REBUKES HIBBARD FOR VETOING APPROPRIATION.

Former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald last night expressed his regret that George A. Hibbard, his successor, had not seen fit to provide a large appropriation for the celebration of the 278th anniversary of the founding of Dorchester.

From the steps of his home in Welles avenue he addressed a large gathering, including over 700 children, who were [illegible] received by Mrs. Fitzgerald and her daughters, Rose and Agnes. The former Mayor said:

"I regret exceedingly that Mayor Hibbard did not approve of an appropriation of a few hundred dollars with which to have the usual display of fireworks on [illegible] to commemorate Dorchester [illegible] should ever live in the hearts of the people of this historic [illegible]

"With fireworks and band concerts the [illegible] of this [illegible] would know that [illegible] the patriotic men [illegible] make the locality bigger [illegible] better.

"I am pleased to say that in a short [illegible] we shall have a celebration that will be in keeping with your ideas."

CHILI'S FLAG FLIES ON MYSTERY SHIP

WESTERN PARTY ABOARD

Where? Why?

None aboard will tell.

The captain of the Olga [illegible] Krauss [illegible] of the seas whose [illegible] Mrs. Krause the [illegible] navigator. She [illegible] at the wheel, regardless of [illegible]

[illegible] was not very recently when the Olga [illegible] Nicholson and Boston was her home. Then she was a [illegible] fisherman and the Stars and Stripes fluttered at her masthead.

The Stars and Stripes [illegible] In place the emblem of Chili flies defiantly.

In Readiness to Sail.

The 100-ton boat, loaded to the water edge, is ready to sail. The entire water front wonders what [illegible] her cost [illegible] and why her air of [illegible] mystery. Yesterday morning found her tied up [illegible] wharf. Then she moved to South Boston and in the afternoon was towed to Chelsea.

Catch one of the crew ashore and ask him what it means.

"No spik English," he will say.

Go aboard and ask for Captain Krause.

"Don't know."

"I'll tell you," says the engineer, Charles Duebel, "you come [illegible] Monday morning. The captain surely will be here then. He'll tell you all about us."

On board the Olga are four Western business men, about to bid farewell for an indefinite term, perhaps forever, to the land they love. The four are George W. Lockard, mining engineer; John W. Davis, Engineer Duebel and John Creedon of San Francisco. [illegible] Benson [illegible] Next in charge to Captain Krause is Duebel, who calls himself the treasurer, and Davis, who says he is "secretary" of the expedition.

Why a treasurer? Why a secretary? Why an expedition?

You do not learn.

"Treasure Island," May Be.

"Treasure Island?" Lockhard repeats [illegible] in apparent amazement, and looks [illegible] the inner circle for confirmation. "We don't know anything about a Treasure Island, do we, boys?" And the "boys" say "No."

"[illegible] of the Chilian crew," says Lockard, "we comprise a $1,000,000 company organized in California and [illegible] under the laws of Oklahoma. [illegible] well, we're going to [illegible] a general freight and trading business, maybe [illegible] the Pacific side of Chili. We [illegible] a coastwise steamship company. The [illegible] trading will be in furs, with [illegible] I guess that's all."

"And the placer mining?"

"Why, yes, some, but that will be independent of the general plan."

The Olga's first stop will be at Buenos Ayres.

WARD ISLAND PLANT MENACED BY FIRE

Fire, the flames from which rose high in the air, and above which a dense cloud of darkest smoke hung as a mighty pall, destroyed the three-story refuse house of the N. Ward Co.'s plant on Ward's Island, Boston harbor, yesterday afternoon. Several [illegible] buildings on a neighboring [illegible] were [illegible] by the flames, when they were at their fiercest, and before they were sold [illegible] caused a loss of many thousands of [illegible]

The blaze was [illegible] a spectacular one and visible from every part of the broad expanse of Boston harbor, caused the Boston fireboat to [illegible] from its moorings and dash [illegible] at top speed toward the scene of destruction.

Before the island was reached workmen had [illegible] the flames and saved the main building, where large quantities of expensive materials were stored.

The fire broke out sometime after 4 o'clock and caused great [illegible] the harbor [illegible] was not known exactly what was burning.

[illegible] passing Nantasket and other excursion boats crowded to the rail with Saturday half-holiday throngs of merrymakers, afforded splendid vantage points from which the great [illegible] could be viewed.

As soon as the fire broke out the workmen of the garbage plant [illegible] began to fight the fire. [illegible]

There are six [illegible] the Ward Company [illegible] island [illegible] manufacturing [illegible] soap and other articles [illegible] saved because of the work [illegible] the men and the shifting of the wind to a [illegible] direction.

TO FIX BLAME IN TENNESSEE'S CASE

Metcalf Orders Inquiry and Even Courtmartial If Deemed Necessary.

Washington, June 6.—Instructions were telegraphed to Rear Admiral Dayton, commanding the Pacific fleet, by Secretary of the Navy Metcalf late to-day to appoint a board of inquiry at once to make a prompt and complete investigation of the steam pipe explosion on the cruiser Tennessee.

The secretary directed that the report of the board be acted upon without delay by Admiral Dayton as to whether a courtmartial of any responsible officer should be ordered, and that the report be wired to Washington for action by the department. The secretary directed that everything be done to allay the suffering of the injured men.

Several accidents of this nature in the navy within recent years has led Washington authorities to believe that they may some time be traced to criminal negligence. The Secretary is determined to know where the blame, if any, rests and to see that punishment is administered.

At first it was thought that the pipe which exploded may have been in the lot of steel tubing which was manufactured for the department two years ago by a Pennsylvania company, some of which was said to have been falsely stamped approved after it had been condemned by government inspectors. It developed that the tubing was provided by another concern.

While the cause of the explosion was not stated in Admiral Dayton's dispatches nor in those from Rear Admiral Sebree, the belief is expressed by officials of the Bureau of Steam Engineering that it must have been due to failure to keep them free from mud.

HOBSON INSPECTS NEWPORT STATION

Newport, R. I., June 6.—Congressman Richmond P. Hobson of Alabama, a member of the House Committee on Naval Affairs, to-day inspected the Naval Training Station and the Naval War College. He was escorted through the training station by Commander Fullam and through the college by Rear-Admiral Merrill. The Congressman has promised to be at the Naval Training Station next Tuesday to review the parade of the apprentice seamen and on next Friday he will deliver a lecture before the class in the Naval [illegible] Congressman and Mrs. Hobson [illegible] their Summer here and are stopping at Putnam's Hotel.

4 HURT IN WRECK OF SPEEDING AUTO

CAR TURNS SOMERSAULT

Four Boston men were badly hurt, one of them perhaps fatally, in an automobile accident [illegible] Andover [illegible] yesterday afternoon when they were returning to this city after the Andover-Exeter baseball game. Coming down Andover Hill at high speed, a big touring car, No. 27,262, New York registry, said to be owned by the [illegible] Motor Company of New York, struck a wet [illegible] skidded and turned completely over, crashing [illegible] dragging the [illegible] over it and then partially righting itself.

The injured are:

B. W. Hall, clerk at the Hotel Commonwealth, may die; [illegible] bone broken in two places, two scalp wounds, one of which caused a serious hemorrhage, flesh torn from his chin to his neck, suffering from [illegible] of the brain.

Mr. Hall was [illegible] hour after the accident and is now [illegible] Dr. [illegible] No. 107 Main street, Andover.

All of the other men were able to return to Boston on the train arriving here at 10:47. Dr. Goulding at once was hurried to his home [illegible] street, while Mr. Nute was driven to Cambridge. [illegible] Goldberg, was taken to No. 1,200 Massachusetts avenue, Cambridge.

At the time of the accident Mr. Nute was driving the car.

The two rear tires burst and the car vaulted into the air sidewise, tipping over and burying the four men beneath it. [illegible] almost instantly rounded back and dragged the [illegible] the heavy tonneau. Nute and Hall were picked up unconscious and taken in a wagon to the office of Dr. C. W. Scott in Main street, while Dr. Goulding and Chauffeur Goldberg walked to the doctor's office.

THREE AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENTS IN CHELSEA AT ABOUT SAME HOUR.

With a series of automobile accidents at about the same time the Chelsea police yesterday had their hands full in caring for the wounded.

Moses Glassberg, thirteen years old, of No. 6 Milbury street, was knocked down by a car driven by F. R. Mitchell on Broadway, near the Chelsea bridge. He received a number of bruises, and bled profusely from the mouth. He was taken to the Marine Hospital. The other occupants of the machine included Mr. and Mrs. George W. Bliss of Lynn and Mrs. Colt, wife of Dr. Colt of Lynn, the owner.

W. J. McCormick, a boy who was riding on the back of the automobile No. 6,308, was knocked into the street by the machine colliding with a furniture van driven by H. J. Angos. The boy was taken to the Marine Hospital, where it was found he was suffering from multiple injuries.

An auto owned and driven by Mrs. Jessie Gould of Chelsea, knocked down Alexander Fox, [illegible] years old, of No. 78 Addison street, who was playing near his home. The boy received a bad cut over his right eye. The police took him to his home.

WOMAN IS KNOCKED DOWN BY AN AUTO IN COMMONWALTH AVENUE.

While crossing Commonwealth avenue, near Beacon street, Miss Mary Lynch, aged forty, of No. 45 Dale avenue, Roxbury, was knocked down by an automobile about 10 o'clock last night. The auto was owned by W. P. Fowle of the Hotel Westminster and operated by L. E. Blake of No. 65 Capitol street, Watertown. The injured woman refused to go to the hospital and was taken home in the automobile.

KNIFE TAFT, URGES BISHOP OF NEGROES

Presiding Officer of Providence A. M. E. Conference Cries for Revenge on Brownsville.

Providence, R. I., June 6.—President Roosevelt and Secretary Taft were sharply scored for the dismissal of the negro soldiers in the Brownsville shooting in the annual sermon which Dr. Alexander Walters, presiding bishop of the African M. E. Church in New England, delivered at the sixty-fourth annual conference in Zion Church here to-day.

The bishop declared the President had changed his attitude toward the colored race in an effort to smash the solid South and win Southern Senators over to the support of his policies. He added that there were thousands of negro voters who would never vote for Taft. He said in part:

"I believe that the hasty dismissal of the colored soldiers without trial was a part of a well laid plan to discredit the race, for the purpose of breaking up the Solid South and winning the support of [illegible] Southern Senators to aid the administration in carrying through the President's policies.

"My reason for this belief was founded months before the dismissal of the soldiers. During a visit to the White House I discovered that the policy of the President had changed as regards the colored people. I found he was more disposed to placate the South than to give justice to the negroes.

"It is generally conceded that an outrage was committed, not only against the South, but against the race by the President and his Secretary of War. The question is: Shall the negroes of this country resent this outrage? I believe we should resent it to the extent of doing everything in our power to defeat the perpetrators.

"Thousands of negroes will never vote for Taft. With us it is a question not of policies but of principle.

TWO WORLD'S RECORDS MADE AT OLYMPIC TRYOUTS.

Yale Atnlete Creates New Figure for Pole Vault at Franklin Field.

Philadelphia, Pa., June 6.—Two Olympic records were equalled and three were broken on Franklin Field to-day, when the eastern Olympic elimination games were held in the presence of 10,000 spectators.

Gilbert, of Yale, smashed a world's record in the pole vault, doing 12 ft 7½ in. The former record was held by Dray, a team mate whom he defeated. Robertson, of the Irish-American A. C. sprang a big surprise in the 100 metre dash by whipping all the college cracks in 10 3-5 seconds which is a new Olympic mark. Jarvis, of Princetown, held the old record, which he made in 1900.

J. V. Rector, of the University of Virginia, who has been credited with 9 2-5 seconds for 100 yards, was second. He was penalized a yard for a false start. Cartmell, of Penn, the college champion, was third, and Sherman of Dartmouth was fourth. The judges admitted they disagreed on the result. It was a matter of inches between the first three.

Shaw, of Dartmouth did not appear for the 110-metre hurdles and Howe of Yale won easily. Robbins was second and Cortistine of Pennsylvania a close third.

Sheppard Beats Collegians.

The college athletes fell by the way side in the 800-metre run, and Sheppard, of the Irish-American A. C., won in 1.56, which equals the record made by Lightbody, of Chicago in 1904. Jones, of Penn who was third, came from last place in the final one hundred yards and landed the position by a wonderful finish.

Eisele, of the New York A. C., ran off with the 3,200-metre races, as Cohn, of the Irish-Americans quit. Carr and Root fought it out for third and the Penn runner was beaten.

N. J. Carmell of Penn ran his last race on Franklin field in the 200-metre dash and, closely pursued by J. D. Witham, a teammate, he won.

Harry Hillman, of the New York A. C., was whipped by Bacon in the final stride of the 400-metre three-foot hurdles in 54 seconds, a new record.

In one of the strongest finishes ever seen on Franklin Field J. P. Halstead of Cornell, captured the 1,500 run in 4:01 1-5, a new mark. The old record was 4:05 2-5 and was held by Lightbody of Chicago. Sullivan and Riley of the Irish-American were fifteen yards in the rear of the college star. Spitzer of Yale was fourth. By a gallant rush at the tape John B. Taylor of Penn won the 400 metres dash. Atlee of Princeton, two feet in the rear, was second, and he just nosed out Prout of the Boston A. A., who made a sensational bid to beat Taylor.

Fred Bellars of the New York A. C. won the five-mile event easily. Gallagher of Shannahan was second, and Tewanina, an Indian, was third.

Coe Wins Shot Put.

W. W. Coe of Boston A. A. won the shot put easily. Kruger, the college champion, was second, and Horr of Syracuse third.

With a lad of 6 feet 2 inches Porter of the Irish Americans won the high jump. Ewry, of the New York A. C. won the standing high and broad jump.

Dearborn, of the New York A. C. won the discus with 139 feet 11 inches, a new world record, the old one being 136 feet 1 3 inch, made by Sheridan. But Sheridan won the the discus "Greek style." Cook, of Cornell won the broad jump. Kelly, the alleged Western wonder failed to try and will not go abroad with the American team. Talbot, of the Irish-Americans won the hammer throw and Folwell of Penn was second. Corr of Syracuse, third.

Providence Team's Twirler Not in His Usual Form and Is Easily Solved.

Providence, June 6.—The fast University of Pennsylvania team defeated Brown at Providence by the score of 4 to 1. One of the largest crowds of the season, including a whole section of the grandstand of Penn Alumni, witnessed the game.

In the first inning Penn scored two runs on Regnier's error and a slow throw by Minnerly to Raymond. In the second inning Londrigan's pretty catch of Badlong's fly over second base prevented Brown from scoring.

Penn scored two more runs in the fifth inning. Londrigan, the first man up, singled and Spring, who followed, sent a hot liner to Hennessey, who fumbled it. Wood sacrificed to Minnerly, who made a bad throw to Hennessey and allowed Londrigan and Spring to score.

Brown scored her single tally in the fifth inning. McGurty hit a two-bagger to deep field and scored on Raymond's single. In nearly every inning Brown had men on bases. Nourse, the Brown pitcher, plainly showed signs of overwork and at no time was he in his usual form. Simpson pitched a fine game for Penn allowing only five hits and striking out seven men. Raymond and Porte both caught a good game. To-night the Pennsylvania Alumni of Providence entertained the baseball team by a banquet and sightseeing at Vanity Fair. Score:

ANDOVER UPSETS EXETER, 5-3, IN THE ANNUAL BALL GAME

BY DYKE CLARK.

Andover, June 6.—A big upheaval in form made it possible for Andover to down her great rival, Exeter, in the annual diamond battle on the home campus by the score of 5 to 3. As the score denotes it was no cinch for Andover to take the game, but the win was all the more consoling considering the small margin.

A hot favorite and having a brilliant preliminary season back of it, the Exeter nine came on the field confident that the game was theirs, and it certainly looked like it during the early stages of the struggle as the Andover pitcher, "Bugs" Brown was wild as a hawk and seemed unable to locate the plate. But it was a way he had for he made up for the deficiency at the start and kept getting more effective as the game advanced with his teammates fighting every inch of ground.

It was a fitting climax to his twirling when he fanned the last three batters who faced him, and helped to deepen Exeter's gloom.

Where Exeter Fell Short.

Exeter should have won had she taken advantage of the many opportunities offered, having no less than seven left, but she fell short when it came to the point where some good hitting would settle things in her favor.

Andover, the short end at the start, proved game, never letting up in her persistency to make Exeter extend herself to gain the diamond laurels and wrought a victory by showing superior stamina.

Though erratic at the beginning Brown, Andover's pitcher, kept pegging away till he got steady and when the game was over he had eleven strikeout victims and seven hits made the total against him. Of the six passes which he issued not one scored, as he was aided by some clever fielding behind him.

It was Baine's weakening in the seventh inning which helped Andover to get its fourth straight game from Exeter, as he made two wild pitches which, with the three hits that came in succession, put the game on ice for the Blue.

Batteries Take Their Time.

The game itself was a long drawn out affair, lasting two hours and a half because of the slowness in action of the batteries, who took all the time they wanted and a little bit more.

But the length of the contest only gave the school supporters on both sides a chance to bellow, their lungs out of commission and there will be plenty of calls for a soothing gargle in both Exeter and Andover to-day.

From the time the five hundred Exeter students arrived on the field there was a perfect din of noise with never a let-up. The coachers on the sidelines were compelled to use megaphones to direct the play, as there was another contest in the stands for first prize in vocal thunder.

Exeter, full of confidence, ripped out its yells as soon as its team went to bat in every inning and did their best to rattle Brown. When Andover tied the score in the sixth pandemonium broke loose in the Blue stands, while a mighty roar swept across the field and the students danced and hugged each other in ecstacy.

Andover's Steady Play.

It was a gruelling game on the players, one which brought out all the nerve they possessed, and Andover proved the sturdier under the extreme pressure, coming to the scratch at the proper time and when the Exeter pitcher had a temporary flight. It needed all their power to counteract the tight positions Brown got into at the outset, but the steady working of the whole team was a source of support which satisfied Brown, and he came out of the fray with flying colors.

Snell, the Andover backstop, worked like a beaver from the first bell, catching Brown's speed perfectly and always on the alert to get in every play. Captain Reilly was the life of the team, covering the in-

WANTS BURNS TO MEET KETCHEL

Chicago, June 6.—Jimmy Coffroth, promoter of the Colma fights in San Francisco, has cabled Tommy Burns in an effort to arrange a match between Burns and Stanley Ketchel for Labor Day. This announcement was made following the departure for the East of Ketchell, Coffroth and Joe O'Connor, Ketchel's manager.

While the party is in the East Coffroth will try to sign up Jack O'Brien for a match with Ketchel to take place on the Pacific coast. Failing in this he will seek a match with Sammy Langford.

PRINCETON HANDS YALE A BEATING

Special to the Sunday American.

Princeton, N. J., June 6.—Princeton added another victory to her list by defeating Yale, 3 to 2 this afternoon. Students and old grads and their home friends who had planned to see the game to-day felt gloom this morning when there were signs of another day such as last Saturday. But their anxiety was relieved by ten o'clock, for then the clouds began to break and evidence of a fine day appeared.

The usual large crowd was on deck. Even last night many an under-graduate felt the sting of the privelege of "Old grads" to use the rooms they occupied while undergraduates themselves, and by [illegible] o'clock this morning the campus was [illegible] with the sons of "Old Nassau" [illegible] their friends. The various classes were fixed up, dressed with their respective costumes for the annual parade. The classes were arranged according to year of graduation, first place being yielded to the oldest class. In the rear the ranks were full and there seemed no limit to energy, but the beagers of the banners of the sixties and fifties walked with a feebler step.

Ten Thousand on Hand.

With ten thousand people filling the stands the teams began promptly at 3 o'clock. Yale played snappy and the men were retired without getting beyond first and in fact only three got that far. Van Vlick had the Tigers guessing, but the evil began in the fourth when an error by Philbin allowed Vaughn to reach third. The next three men were retired in order, but when the fifth inning came they were not to get off so lucky.

Heyniger was an easy out, but Dawson singled and got third on Philbin's error. Fish got to first on a third strike and Dillon walked, stealing second. Vaughn came along with a three bagger and cleared the bases, making the score 3 to 0.

Yale Comes Back.

The very next time at the bat Yale came back for two runs. Clifford beat out an infield hit to Sides, who handled it cleanly but was too slow. Wheaton got a two-single. Fish muffed the throw on Fels's grounder and both Clifford and Wheaton scored.

Clark yielded two more hits in the seventh. Van Vlick, the first man up, got a single, but was caught trying to steal second. Dines fanned. Jones plucked a three-bagger, but by trying to streech it into a home run he was caught at the home plate. After this neither side got a man on bases.

Of the two pitchers VanVlick had a shade the better of the deal, although both men pitched excellent ball. Fels put up a wonderful game at short stop for the visitors. Score:

CUBS SLAUGHTER THE DOVES WITH 19 HITS AND 14 RUNS

Four Boston Pitchers Sacrificed But All Are Alike to the World's Champions.

By A. H. C. Mitchell.

[illegible] around the bases until their tongues hung [illegible], swatting the curves of four Boston pitchers for nineteen safeties with a total of 28, scoring fourteen runs and blanking the locals, the Chicago Nationals held a field day at the South End grounds yesterday. It was [illegible] slaughter of Doves, but it was [illegible].

A big Saturday crowd turned out to see what they hoped would be [illegible] with the home team winning out in the ninth inning there being, of course, two out, a man on third with two strikes and three balls on the batter at the moment that Boston's most popular ball player slammed out the [illegible] that won the [illegible] amid delirious cheers.

Alas, nothing of the sort happened. The fans got a chance to make merry early [illegible] the game [illegible] player was [illegible] at the plate, but after that there [illegible] the grounds [illegible] started [illegible] the third [illegible] runs off the pitching of Dorner and Young. Then they [illegible] the fourth [illegible] and wound up [illegible] for a final tally in the eighth.

Nothing But Goose Eggs.

[illegible] with a great regularity [illegible] Reulbach went in the box in the eighth, just to get some exercise to keep him over Sunday, and kept up the shutting [illegible]

[illegible] but, set the Cubs just had their batting clothes on. If the [illegible] over [illegible] wide ones and passed everything to the four quarters of the earth. Steinfeldt picked off a couple of two-baggers and Kling poked a home run over the fence with the bases full. Everybody took a good whack [illegible] and when the game ended [illegible] looked as though they had just finished a six days go-as-you-please race outside the money.

Some Star Plays.

Little Slagle got back in the game, playing a star performance in left garden. Dahlen pulled off a beauty play, stopping a hot one high in the air and nipping a Cub at the plate. Beaumont was there with a fine catch and Schulte got much applause by pulling down a liner on the dead run. But these were mere incidents. The feature of the game was the terrific slugging of the Chicago champions. All four Boston twirlers looked alike to them and it is likely they broke the season's record in the way of base hits.

In the third inning Fraser singled and Evers beat a bunt in front of the plate. Hoffman laid down a bunt and was thrown out by Dorner. Schulte singled past Sweeney, scoring two runs. Chance singled. Steinfeldt singled to right, sending Schulte across the plate.

Dorner is Canned.

Dorner was canned at this point and Young came in. Slagle walked, filling the bases. Right here Kling connected with a low one, drove it over the left field fence and four men cantered around to the plate. Tinker followed with a double over Kelley's head, but he was out trying to steal third. Dahlen threw out Fraser, who came up for the second time and the agony was over for the moment, Chicago having tallied seven times.

Young wouldn't do at all as he lacked speed and control so Kelley sent him to the stable and brought Frank Pfeffer to the limelight. It was Frank's first appearance this season on home grounds and it was hoped he would shut off further scoring, but he didn't. With one down, Hoffman walked. Sweeney fumbled Schulte's grounder and Chance was hit by a pitched ball, filling the bases. Steinfeldt drove a two-bagger to the left field fence, scoring two [illegible] to Beaumont, [illegible] Pfeffer [illegible] Kling [illegible], forcing in another run.

[illegible] the [illegible] the [illegible] Evers scored [illegible] Reulbach [illegible] and Kling in the eighth. Score:

Notes of the Game.

Young couldn't have broken an egg with the speed he showed while in the box.

WESLEYAN WAS EASY FOR HOLY CROSS

The Worcester boys struck a batting streak and scored enough in the first inning to win. Shay started with a single, was sacrificed to second and scored on Larkin's hit to left. Barry hit to short and reached first on an error. Mansfield hit to Benton who threw too late to catch Larkin at plate, Barry scoring as the ball got by Day. Dowd singled, scoring Mansfield.

Holy Cross scored three in fourth when Dowd, Stevens and O'Rourke came home on Larkin's double.

Wesleyan scored their runs in the fifth when Dresser was walked to first, stole second and scored on Connelly's safe bunt and Van Tassel's hit, which got by Stevens, Connelly also scoring.

Holy Cross fielded rather poorly to-day but made up in the line of stick work. Larkin was the bright star with the willow for Holy Cross, making three hits in three times at bat.

Wright fielded exceptionally for Wesleyan, accepting eight of nine chances. O'Rourke's stop of Van Tassel's liner was phenomenal. Mansfield was steady in all except the first. The score:

JOHNSON BROTHERS LOSE TENNIS TITLE

A big surprise was given the talent in tennis when Beals Wright and F. S. Sulloway won the State championship doubles on the Brae Burn courts, defeating the Johnson brothers, the holders of the championship, by the score of 6—2, 6—1, 6—0. The victory was won easily by the veterans, who did not give their opponents much chance and ran the string out in a love match.

GLENVALES, 10; FRANKLIN, 5

The fast Glenvales of Jamaica Plain defeated the Franklins of West Lynn yesterday afternoon at Lynn by the score of 10 to 5. This is their fifth straight victory. The features of the game were the hard hitting of Aspacher and Ruskins, and the catching and base throwing of Smith. The score.

DON'T BE A READY-MADE MAN

BOSTON'S OPPORTUNITY.

AN UNEQUALLED CHANCE TO TEST THE VALUES OF MERCHANT TAILORS' MISFIT AND UNCALLED-FOR GARMENTS.

Not since we originated in 1879 the sale of merchant tailors' misfit and uncalled-for garments have the tailors experienced such a disastrous season. The financial conditions were bad, and this, with the backward Spring, caused thousands of made-to-order garments to be refused or uncalled for. [illegible] of New York, the CLEARING HOUSE for 1800 tailors, are receiving so many garments that, overstocked, Boston has been selected as the outlet for the disposal of nearly 800 suits, custom made for $40, $45, $50 and $60, and originally marked $15, $20, $25 and $30. They have been consigned to us to sell

AT $15, $18, $20.

These Suits are the richest values we have ever offered in our long business career. To the men of Boston our offers afford an exceptional opportunity of getting acquainted with our rich values in merchant tailors' uncalled-for garments and contrasting the fit, workmanship and wear with ready-made.

SAMPLES OF OUR VALUES.

Sack Suit, in light gray worsted, nobby three-button long roll effect; extremely swagger; made to order for $45 by Dogert, 34th st. and 5th av., New York. Our price, if it fits you, $15.

Blue Serge Suit, conservative three-button sack, half silk lined, tailored to perfection; a new arrival. Made to order by Wicks, 29th st. and Broadway, New York, for $50. Our price, if it fits you, $18.

Sack Suit made to order by Boston's renowned tailor, Brooks, of Milk street; color, dark brown, with invisible stripe, the very latest, will appeal to any good dresser. Brooks' price, $65. Our price, if it fits you, $20.

THOUSANDS OF OTHER GARMENTS.

Overcrowded with Suits and Spring Overcoats, Cravenettes, Full Dress and Tuxedo Suits, which were custom-made for $40, $45, $50, $60, $75 and up to $100. We are forcing sales by such exceptional prices for them as $15, $16, $18, $20, $25 and $30. WEAR TAILOR-MADE and pay less for it than you do for ready-made. If alterations are necessary to improve the fit, we make them free of charge.

HECLAS HIT BALL HARD AND OFTEN

By batting the ball hard when hits meant runs, besides playing a star fielding game, the Hecla A. C. of the West End succeeded in defeating the strong Andrews team of South Boston at McNary Park yesterday afternoon by the score of 9 to 4. The Heclas found Meehan for fourteen safe drives, five of them going for extra bases which, sandwiched in with a couple of misplays, netted them nine runs; while the best the Andrews could do with Countavay's delivery was four hits for as many runs. The features of the game besides the batting of the victors were the pitching of Countavay, who fanned ten men and a one hand stop and throw by Cronin in the eighth inning. The score:

GAME DISPUTED AT WOBURN

Woburn, June 6.—It took ten innings of good baseball for the Russell Company team of Cambridge to get one run ahead of the North Woburns at Liberty Park, Woburn, yesterday afternoon, and when the home team was at the bat in the tenth with two men out a dispute arose and the Russells, thinking they were in right, left the field, the game unfinished.

Excitement was intense in the tenth, and North Woburn had a man on first and second, when Caswell, the twirler for the winners, struck out McDonald, but the catcher dropped the ball, which rolled into the crowd, and somebody picked it up and threw the sphere back into the diamond. In the meantime McGowan, who was on second, ran to third, and when the ball was returned to the diamond started for home, crossing the plate safely, but a ground rule had been made in the beginning of the game that one base only could be taken on a passed ball. The umpire, however, favored the home team, calling the man safe at home, so the Russells left the field with the best game played in the city this season unended.

NEW IRISH CLUB AFLOAT.

The Gerald Griffin Club, one of the latest and most active of the numerous Irish clubs, was recently organized. The following board of officers was elected: President, F. J. Donohoe; vice president, Mrs. H. Cotton; financial secretary, E. J. Davis; recording secretary, Miss Mary A. Burke; treasurer, Miss M. Meade; sentinel, H. Burton.

This club is composed of former residents of Limerick and their descendants, and takes its name from the great Irish author, Gerald Griffin. Meetings are held on the second Thursday of each month in Commercial Hall annex, No. 694 Washington street. A large number of applicants will be received at next meeting, June 11.

FORESTDALES WIN OUT.

The Forestdales of Malden defeated the Allston A. A. of Brighton at Brighton by a score of 13 to 9. The features of the game were the work of Hinden, whose pitching was effective, and the batting of Gibson and Brown for Forestdales, Kelly and Ring for the Allstons.

NEWTON TAKES TENNIS.

In the suburban tennis league yesterday, Newton Centre took three out of four matches from Brae-Burn on the latter's courts. In singles, Hall, B. B., beat Wilbur, N. C., 6—4, 6—8; Plimpton, N. C., beat Leonard, B. B., 3—7, 6—1, 6—1. In doubles, Wales and Speare beat E. F. Woods and Leonard 6—4, 6—1; Hovey and Blakemore beat E. Woods and Hall, 6—0, 6—2.

REGATTA HELD IN DORCHESTER BAY

The Dorchester Day open regatta, given by the City of Boston and held under the management of the Dorchester, Savin Hill and Boston Yacht Clubs, took place yesterday afternoon in Dorchester bay. The races were given in connection with the celebration of the 278th anniversary of the settlement of Dorchester and open to all yachts.

At 2:30 the preparatory gun sounded and five minutes later the gun for Class A., but as there were no entries, Class B. started and was followed by Class C.

The wind at the start of the first race was a light Easterly swinging around to a brisk South wester before the boats had rounded the first mark. The summary:

MEDFORD H. TURNS TABLES ON RIVALS

Medford, June 6.—In a game full of uncertainties, Medford High turned the tables on their old rival, Malden, this afternoon, in the Suburban League, by defeating them at baseball by a score of 5 to 3.

Malden High was in the lead, 3 to 0, until Medford came to the bat in the last half of the fifth inning and made four runs with two hits. The runs were made on two clean hits, a passed ball and a wild pitch, in each case the runner coming home from second base. Medford increased their lead by another run in the eighth inning on a single by Whalen, the Medford left fielder, which let in Swenson from third base.

One of the features of the game was a relay throw from Whalen, Medford's left fielder, to Twombly, shortstop, to Munroe, catcher, which prevented Otis, the Malden right fielder, who made the only three-bagger of the game, from scoring. Clark came in on the hit, scoring the first run of the game for Malden.

Swenson, the Medford first baseman, was the star batter of the game with the exception of the three-base hit made by Otis, the Malden right fielder. Captain Smith played a great fielding game for the winners, as did also Munroe, the catcher. For Malden, Leatherman, the third baseman, and Moran, the shortstop, were especially good in fielding hits.

TIMELY HITTING WON GAME

The speedy Marathon A. C. defeated the Prescott A. C. at Forest Park, yesterday afternoon, by the score of 7 to 5. Timely hitting with men on bases was the reason for the victory. The Prescott A. C. had six errors, while the Marathon A. C. played an errorless game. The score by innings:

DORCHESTER HIGH WINS INTERSCHOLASTIC TITLE

One of the most exciting games of ball ever witnessed on a Dorchester field was played between Dorchester High's strong team against the equally strong English High combination on the Dunbar avenue grounds, yesterday afternoon, Dorchester High winning 1 to 0, and thereby clinching the championship flag of the Interscholastic League, having already tucked [illegible] Boston [illegible] League trophy.

[illegible] crowd [illegible] ever attended a school game was present, the grounds being roped off, necessitating ground rules. President Dovey of the Boston Nationals sat on the players' bench with Coach Woodcock, and after the game presented the winning team with tickets to see the game between the Doves and Cubs, next Monday, at the South End grounds.

English High seemed to have luck against her all through the game, outbatting Dorchester, seven hits to three. In the eighth inning Halligan connected with Spaulding's curves for a beautiful hit. Green, the second man up, was out on a slow grounder, Spaulding to Cavanaugh, sending Halligan to second. Roberts fouled to Charley Hoernle. Kenney, the next man up, hit a corking single to centre and Halligan raced from second for home. While turning third station his feet became tangled with W. Hoernle's, Dorchester's third sacker, and both went to the ground. The whole English team surrounded Umpire Sliney on his not allowing Halligan to score, claiming Hoernle tripped him intentionally, but his decision stood.

In the ninth inning with two men on bases and two out Spaulding, purposely passed Halligan, English High's heavy batter, filling the bases, striking out Green the next man up, retiring the side and pocketing the champ flag for Dorchester.

English High went out in one, two, three order for the first six innings. Spaulding pitching fine ball, striking out eight men.

Dorchester's winning score was made in the fourth. Daly, the second man up met one to his liking, smashing the ball for two bases. Charley Hoernle, the next man up, flied out, making the second out. Fraser, then made good with the crowd by connecting for a single, Daly, racing home with the only and winning tally.

The game abounded in sensational plays, three doubles of [illegible] Kelley and Kenney [illegible] the crowd [illegible] W. Hoernle and Cavanaugh [illegible] the same kind of a play in the seventh. Green, English High's second sacker, caught a hard liner off Abbott's bat in the fifth, leaping high in the air. Roberts, English High's star center garden man, made a most sensational one hand catch in the seventh after a fifty yard run at full speed of a Texas Leaguer, off Sullivan's bat. In the fifth, Fraser, Dorchester's second sacker was accidentally spiked by Kelley. Fraser, receiving a severe cut on his left leg, he pluckily finished the game. The score:

TEAZER EASILY FIRST IN MOSQUITO RACES

The Mosquito Fleet Yacht Club held its open regatta off the clubhouse yesterday afternoon, under the rules of the Y. R. A. of Massachusetts and Inter Club.

At 3:25 the preparatory gun was sounded, and five minutes later Class C of the Inter Club got away with the gun, the Thiala getting a pretty start and adding her start to the finish line.

The wind, which up to this time had been light and easterly, swung around to the southwest and covered the bay with whitecaps. The rest of the classes followed at five minute intervals, the best positions being secured by the Alpha in Class A, the Emeline in Class D, Mirage II. in Class I and the Teaser in Class X. The Teaser of the X class sailed a very pretty race, beating the rest of her class from three to fifteen minutes.

Forty-one boats started and thirty-seven finished. Summary:

CALLAHAN FANNED TWENTY-FOUR MEN

The Notre Dames of Roxbury defeated the strong Merrimac A. C. of Somerville yesterday afternoon on the Marcella street play-grounds, by the score of 4 to 3. The game was one of the most spectacular ever played on those grounds, and although each team contributed several hair-raising plays the main feature of the game was the phenomenal pitching of Leo Callahan, who established a new amateur record, fanning 24 of the Merrimacs. The game was witnessed by 1,500 people.

SCRIVEN'S PITCHING TOLD.

Somerville High defeated Brockton High yesterday afternoon on the Broadway Athletic fields, West Somerville, by the score of 10 to 0. Scriven was in the box for Somerville and pitched a great game, allowing no hits and giving but one passed ball, and struck out eight men. Only 28 men faced him in the nine innings, the extra man in one inning being due to Somerville's only error, a poor throw to first by Garland. Somerville batted hard and safe and Brockton's poor fielding and the first and second bases cost them the game. Roland, at shortstop, played a star game for Brockton. Score.

RED SOX IN RIOTOUS GAME; UMPIRE CHASED BY A MOB

Special to the Boston American.

Detroit, June 6.—In a wild and woolly contest, lasting two hours and a half, the Red Sox trimmed the Tigers, 10 to 5. The game was full of turbulent incidents. Manager Jennings, Pitcher Donovan and Outfielder Jones of the Tigers and Pitcher Burchell of the Red Sox were ordered off the field at various stages by Umpire Sheridan. Manager McGuire, who was indefinitely suspended by President Johnson for some trouble with Sheridan yesterday, saw the boiling warfare from a seat in the grand stand.

The "Umps" got in bad with the crowd for his decisions and as the game ended a delegation of excited fans made a rush at him. They chased Sheridan to the groundskeeper's house, smashed the windows and then "laid" for him outside the grounds. The police showed their weapons and finally dispersed the crowd and Sheridan went to his hotel by the back alleys.

Five Hits For Sullivan.

Both Mullin and Willet were marks for the demon sluggers from the Hub who thumped them for no less than seventeen hits including several for extra bases.

Sullivan and McConnell had a field day with their sticks, the first mentioned hitting cleanly in all of his five times at bat while the Tigers managed to put out McConnell only once in the entire contest.

Mullin, who started the game for Detroit, did some of the most terrible fielding feats on record, all of Boston's first four runs being traced more or less directly to breaks by the young gentleman from the banks of the Wabash.

Morgan, who pitched most of the contest for Boston, was wild but effective. He was benched at the conclusion of the sixth inning to allow Cy Young to go in and cinch matters. This order was given by Acting Manager Unglaub, who will take charge of the Red Sox until McGuire's suspension, news of which was received to-day, has expired.

Mullin's Errors Start Things.

Two errors by Mullin and Lord's sacrificing second, followed by McConnell's first single gave Boston a run in the first. In Detroit's half, Wagner duplicated his four base error of yesterday by throwing the ball to the bleachers and Crawford made the circuit. Cobb and Rossman walked, and then Wagner made another error. Criger came along with a passed ball and the Tigers had two runs without so much as a hit.

Crawford's clean homer in the third put the Tigers 3 to 1 to the good. Mullin weakened in the fourth and allowed Boston to score three runs on hits by Unglaub, Sullivan and Wagner, an lined out and another error by the irrepressible Mullin.

Red Sox Cinch the Game.

Boston cinched matters, however, by hitting Willett, who had relieved Mullin for four singles and three runs. Thereafter the game was never in doubt. In the last three innings which Young pitched the Tigers failed to get a man past second.

The fielding feature of the game was a triple play turned off by Detroit in the third inning when, with Lord on second and McConnell on first, Cravath hit a line drive into Schaefer's hands. Both runners had started to advance on the drive and both were easily out, Schaefer to Killifer to Rossman.

The teams meet again at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon. Score:

TANNEHILL LOST GAME.

Chicago, June 6.—Jesse Tannehill lost the first game he pitched for Washington to the Sox to-day by the score of 5 to 4. It was a wild and wooly contest, Manager Jones sending seventeen men to the field. Tanny held the Sox safe until the eighth inning, then he faltered and the Sox scored two. Tannehill got in the hole in the final inning. He was pulled out with a man on first and second. Tom Hughes was sent in and the second ball he pitched was a wild one, Jones scoring from second. Donahue singled and the game was over. The score:

BURKETT'S TIMELY SINGLE WON GAME FOR WORCESTER

New Bedford, June 6.—In the best played game of the season, Worcester defeated New Bedford to-day by 5 to 4. Both teams put up a fast article of ball and it was anybody's game up to the ninth when Worcester scored the deciding run on McCune's double and Burkett's timely single. Umpire Murphy's execrable decisions, coupled with Bradley's triple gave Worcester four runs in the sixth, but New Bedford tied the score as the result of some free hitting. Burroughs struck out nine men, but his fine work was spoiled by a liberality in passes. Moorehead and Adler contributed fielding features. The score:

BROCKTON, 8; FALL RIVER, 1

Fall River, June 6.—Brockton again trimmed Fall River's unhappy bunch of ball players this afternoon by a score of 8 to 1. O'Toole had the local players dazzled with a spit ball. Only one man found it and that was Norris and he got two bases off the crack he gave it. This two-bagger figured in the only score which the home team made, for after Norris reached third on a put out, Messenger got on first with two men out, drew the throw and dodged along the line long enough to allow Norris to cross the plate. That's all Fall River did except make errors at the wrong time. With Brockton it was hit and run. Bannon figured gloriously in the hitting with the home run inside the grounds. Catterson was there with the wallop, too. Umpire O'Brien made one raw decision that got the crowd down on him good and hard. It made Manager O'Brien of the home team so hot that he said things, and as a consequence Umpire O'Brien ordered him off the field. The score:

NO HIT GAME AT LYNN.

Lynn, June 6.—The Haverhill club was shut out at Lynn this afternoon at Ocean Park before 3,500 fans, 2 to 0. Harry Moore won the distinctive honor of scoring a no-hit and no-run game over Hamilton's men, thereby equaling Mike O'Toole's record in Worcester last week. Behind the big Lynn twirler the locals put up a fast fielding game. Haverhill, too, did some sharp fielding. They prevented Lynn from scoring in the third inning, when the bases were filled, with only one out. They again shut the locals out in the sixth, with two on bases and none out.

Lynn got their runs in the first inning. After Lovett fouled to Perkins, Moore rapped a hot one, of which Templin made a brilliant stop, but Fullerton could not get to first so as to make the out. Daum sent him to third on a clean drive to right. Moore flied to Boardman and Tansey got in a lively dinkey to Sylvester, beating the ball out by a close shave. Miller scored and Daum went to third. O'Hagan walked. Ort hit to Sylvester who made a costly fumble, and Daum crossed the rubber. The score:

AMHERST WON AT WEST POINT

West Point, N. Y., June 6.—Amherst defeated the Cadets here to-day by a score of 8 to 3. In the ninth the Cadets made a grandstand finish and bunched four hits, scoring three runs, and but for poor base running, allowing three men to be put out at second, might have added a number of more runs. In the ninth, with two on bases, a fly to right field was juggled long enough to allow Washburn to stretch his hit into a home run and send two in before him, Danahey following with a home run. HARVARD NINE WALLOPS DARTMOUTH TEAM 9 TO 1

BY ALECK SULLIVAN.

Harvard showed its best ball of the season on Soldiers' Field against Dartmouth yesterday afternoon, and won by a score of 9 to 1. Although many of the spectators went to the contest expecting to see the Crimson triumph over the Green, nobody had the faintest idea that it would win by such an overwhelming score.

The Harvard team certainly was in the game all the time. They fielded perfectly, some of the plays performed being of the sensational order. Then, too, they batted the ball the hardest that a Harvard team has hit the leather in years, and everyone, except a few Dartmouth rooters present went away from the game in a happy frame of mind, and with hopes of victories over Yale when the two rivals clash.

Hicks Pitched Great Game

The feature of the game was the twirling of one Hicks. He is rather small in stature, but the things that he did to the Dartmouth batsmen was enough to make him a giant in the estimation of the Harvard followers. Only three hits were made off his delivery, two of these being infield hits by Emerson. The only real swat made by the team came in the ninth, and coupled with a passed ball by Carlisle, who replaced Currier, resulted in a run.

Hicks had lots of speed. He fanned seven and only gave one base on balls.

The Crimson batters got after Glaze in the very first inning, and scored four runs, which was enough to send the Dartmouth team up in balloons. He remained on the rubber four innings, and in the fifth was replaced by Mitchell. If the visitors had had any more first string pitchers on hand Mr. Mitchell would soon have been chased to the woods, as he got worse treatment than his predecessor.

In the seventh Currier and Simons each knocked a home run, one coming after the other. A little later Leonard got a three-bagger. In the eighth Aronson met the sphere on the nose and sent it many feet out of the reach of the Dartmouth outfielders. He crossed the plate many seconds before the ball was returned from the outfield.

Speedy Work by Hicks.

One of the interesting things of the game was a stunt by Hicks on Emerson in the seventh. The Harvard pitcher delivered the ball like a shot over the pan, while the Green man was swinging his bat around. Then he sent two more over the plate in rapid succession, the batter not having a chance even to aim at the ball, and he was called out on strikes.

Harvard had men on the bases in every inning while Dartmouth went out in order in every inning except the second and ninth innings. The score:

BY ED COGSWELL.

[illegible] the Dorchester Driving Club offered for the celebration of Dorchester Day over the Franklin Field Speedway yesterday, and the biggest crowd of the season was in attendance to see the event, but as a contest filled with excitement Czarina won far too easily to thrill the spectators.

In the initial heat B. S. Dillon, whom his owner, T. A. Winslow, had Eldredge drive, was in the lead till into the turn, when he made a break and Czarina had it handily the rest of the way in 29 seconds, equalling the track record for the course. In the two following heats B. S. Dillon was [illegible] for about an eighth of the [illegible] but it was all the [illegible] for the remainder of the distance. The time of the last two trips was 30 and 31¼ seconds, which was close to the three-heat race record for the speedway.

While Czarina had it so easily in winning, it was evident to those who had seen B. S. Dillon several weeks ago pace the course in 29 second that he was far from being in the same good condition as at that time. Quite probable it is that in the pink of shape he could not defeat the mare, with her right, but he would most certainly put up a much better battle than was the case yesterday.

After the race Winslow said that B. S. Dillon had hit his knee in the first heat, but he wished to meet Czarina again some date later than June 17.

Rondo Won Good Race.

Rondo, Billy Wilkes and Captain Hall made really the best contest of the card. Rondo was returned the winner in straight heats, but each heat Billy Wilkes was right to his neck till nearly to the wire. The time was fast, also, in 30½, a couple of heats and 31¼ in the third.

Quite another good race was between Wilkesbrino, Miss Ormond and William T. The two last named took turns in driving out the winner, though Miss Ormond gained the odd second, and the time was right up to the notch, three heats for Wilkesbrino in thirty-two seconds and better.

Fred H. Bellows had rather a soft time getting the blue ribbon over George K. with Helgamite, as with the exception of the third heat the gray gelding was too unsteady to do much racing. Bellows expected to race against [illegible] but J. M. E. Morrill was reported to have taken his mare where they hung the money up for the contestants.

Struggled Through Five Heats.

Joe Thomas and Robert struggled through five heats before the former was successful in getting the verdict. Baron Patch won a good race over La Gazelle and Prince of Monica. Russell B., Joe Knox, Mutineer, Harry Wilkes and Ginger had some to spare in beating the majority of their respective events. Sunrise was kept going all the way to defeat Matt M., the latter making the second between the two a dead one.

Before the races there was a parade of fine horses belonging to members of the several driving clubs in Greater Boston, which was a success in every way. Summary:

LYNN HORSES GET INTERCITY MEET

In Match Against Quannapowitt Club They Win Eleven Races to Six.

Reading, June 6.—Winnings were about evenly matched at the inter-city matinee meeting at the Wakefield-Reading track today when the Quannapowitt Driving Club raced against the Lynn Gentlemen's Driving Club, even though the visitors captured eleven of the seventeen races with their horses.

A new track record was established by Al Ray, owned by E. B. Phillips of the Lynn Club, he pacing the oval in 1.05½ in the second heat. The previous track record, 1.05¾, was held by Directumwood, owned by J. B. Wilkinson of the Quannapowitt Club, the opponent of Al Ray.

In a majority of the races the winning horse took two straight heats, but the other animals were well up to the victors and made easy wins impossible.

In class G Debeesa took the first heat by a neck but Rose Mack then came strong and captured each of the succeeding heats by very narrow margins. The same results were true in classes B and C.

There was a record attendance at the track, special cars conveying the Lynn horsemen to the grounds. The track was in excellent condition.

Fred Churchill of Melrose was starter, and the judges were W. E. Carter and G. A. Seaman of Lynn, Dr. F. P. Sturgis of Melrose and G. B. Mellen of Lawrence. Following are the results:

BELLEVUE WON CLUB MATCH FROM ISLAND

In an eighteen hole foursome team match played on the Bellevue Golf Links at Melrose yesterday, the home club defeated the Island Golf Club of Haverhill two matches and took the third one by default.

The Melrose players had little difficulty lowering their opponents, taking the first 1 7 up and the second round 5 up.

KATINA FIRST IN FOUR-HEAT RACE

South Weymouth, June 6.—George A. French carried off the honors in two of the six races decided to-day by the Old Colony Driving Club in the weekly matinee, India Panis, his old reliable, and Katina, a young green trotter, turning the trick.

The latter's victory was very creditable, as it was not till the third heat that she was able to finish in the lead, while in all four of the heats raced the three contestants raced nearly heads apart.

Lassie stepped the fastest heat of the day in 1.09½, but was beaten out of the race by Kalanos. The regular starting judge and other officials were missed in the stand, the substitutes not being strictly on to the correct methods of conducting affairs. Summary:

Bonnie Bell equalled the race record of the Fellsway Driving Club held jointly before by Sir George and Norvet in 31 seconds in the matinee yesterday over Mystic Park in the event in which she defeated Journeyman and Independence. The track was very fast, resulting in the average time made by the horses being the best of the season. A big crowd was out to watch the sport, filling the bleachers, while teams lined the course from the start to the finish post.

Axtelloid won a very creditable race, losing the second heat to Major P., one of the Charles River Speedway cracks, but after that the chestnut trotting gelding was boss over the pacers opposed to him. In the initial and third heats Axtelloid was only a quarter of a second short of the track record.

John O'Connell was a new comer to the course, and he won many admirers by the style he won over William L. The comment was frequently heard that were he driven to his limit there would have been a new mark set for other stars of the club to shoot at in the future.

Congratulations were extended by phone last evening to Secretary F. E. Morrison in his gelding Billy M., having finally succeeded in turning the tough luck that has followed him during the past three weeks. The officials of the day were: Judges—G. M. Davis, A. E. Jones, C. Cooper and H. Brown. Starting judges—Rance D. Wentworth. Summary:

NEWTOWNES BLANKED

Plymouth, June 6.—The Plymouth Cordage team defeated the Newtownes from Cambridge by a score of 2 to 0. It was a pitchers' battle with the honors about even. Mack, the Plymouth shortstop, was badly spiked in the second inning and was carried from the field. The score:

HARVARD CREWS OFF FOR RED TOP

Oarsmen Go To-Morrow, but the Launch and Shells Have Already Gone.

To-morrow afternoon at 2.20 p. m. the Harvard University crew, both varsity and freshman, will leave Harvard square by special car in order to catch the three o'clock train for Red Top, where the crews will remain until the day of the Harvard-Yale race at New London.

The launch John Harvard was sent ahead last Tuesday in charge of Engineer "Freeme," and the shells were shipped late yesterday afternoon.

Three eight-oared shells were taken: the English boat which has been in use all Spring and in which the crew will probably race; a Ward and Davy creation which is a composite of the ideas of Coach Wray, Capt. Richardson, and Davy, the Cambridge boat builder, and another Ward and Davy product. Besides the eights three four-oared shells made the trip; the entire shipment being under the supervision of Charles Hart.

Accompanying the oarsmen Coach Gray, Managers Howes and Denny of the Varsity, and Manager Winsor of the Freshmen will take complete charge of the trip and attend to the men's physical welfare.

A mass meeting at 2 p. m. in Harvard Square will give the crews a send-off.

THREE CORNER TIE IN SUBURBAN LEAGUE

Melrose High defeated Everett High at baseball on the Malden High school field yesterday afternoon, 4 to 0 in the Suburban League series. McMullin was the hero of the game.

In the same league Medford defeated Malden High at Medford, thus making a three-cornered tie between Malden, Melrose, and Everett, for the championship of the league.

Last night, in celebration of her victory, a crowd of Melrose rooters paraded through Malden and Everett, tooting horns and displaying red fire along the route of march.

McMullin pitched for Melrose. His performance holds the record for the Suburban League this season, for he held the Everett nine down to but one hit and gave but one base on balls. The opposing pitcher, Rosenthal, while Melrose found him for eight hits, did not allow a man to walk to first. The battle was not between the High school teams so much as between the two pitchers.

In crossing the home plate in the last inning, Dike of Melrose, turned his ankle and failed to rise. He was picked up by members of the team and carried to the bleachers, and later taken to his home in a team. An examination showed he had a bad sprain of the left ankle and will be out of the game for the rest of the year. The score:

TEMPLETON A PUZZLER.

Williamstown, June 6.—Templeton shut out the Trinity team here to-day, 7 to 0. He struck out twelve of the opposing team and allowed but four hits. He was fine style. Two fast double plays, one after Smith had doubled with none out and stolen third, cut off Trinity's hope of scoring. In the second Williams had three men on but could only score one run. Woodle and Cook were both wild giving six and four passes respectively. The score:

New Hampshire Youths Start Off in the Lead, but Andover Lands in the End.

Lewis's Three-Bagger.

Lewis, who entered the game in the eighth inning batting for Craig, got the longest hit, a triple to right, but he was put out trying to lengthen it into a four-bagger.

White, the first baseman, made a startling play when he took a line drive close to the ground off Pierce's bat in the first inning.

It looked like runs for Exeter at the outset when Brown walked the first two batters, but he steadied down in time and favored the next couple, and Reilly, by a good stop, got the third out and the Andover supporters heaved a sigh of relief.

But there was something doing in the second inning for Exeter. After Lynch lifted a fly to Murchie in left, Kiley came up with a Texas leaguer to centre that Burdett just missed getting. Craig laid down a nice sacrifice and Pitcher Baines set the Exeter stands on fire by slamming out a beauty to centre, the ball skipping past Burdett. Kiley scored and Baines landed on second, though he could have easily taken third. Orr, the next batter, could not bring Baines in, going out on strikes.

Exeter Has a Fine Chance.

It looked like more runs for Exeter in the third, for with one down, Captain Loftus was handed a ticket to first, and White knocked out a nice single to right, sending Loftus to third and jaunting up to second on the throw in. Then Dunn reached first on four bad ones, and all the bases were occupied. Lynch popped a foul to Snell, but there was still hope of Kiley getting in a hit. He hit to E. Burdett at short who touched second, forcing out Dunn, and it was a tight hole Andover got out of.

Andover came up strong for its half of the third, and Merritt led off with a single to left. He stole second and kept on to third, as there was nobody on second to take Dunn's throw, the ball sailing out to centre, where Loftus fozzled it, and amid the wild cheers of the Andover stands, Merritt crossed the plate, tieing the score.

Exeter went ahead again in the fourth as Baines made his second hit. Dunn ran for him and stole second and went to third on a strikeout. Grattan bumped out a single to left, putting Dunn over the plate.

Andover Busy in the Sixth.

It was not till the sixth that Andover succeeded in pulling even with her rival, and then the deed was done with two out.

Snell, the first up, was thrown out at first, but Captain Reilly singled to left. He was forced on Murchie's hit to White, who threw to Bennett. Murchie got a second on Craig's misplay and scored to right Burdett stole, but was forced at third on Merritt's hit to Kiley.

The seventh was a nightmare for Exeter. E. Burdett took second after swinging on a wild third strike and scored on Pierce's rattling single to left. Bennett laid down a bunt and got to first safely, as he evaded White's reach when he went after the ball. Snell drove a fine single to centre, scoring Pierce. Baines made a mighty heave over his own catcher's head and Bennett scored the third run. Snell was out at the plate trying to score on Reilly's hit to Kiley, and Murchie fanned.

Exeter tried hard to break Andover's lead in the last two chances at the bat in the eighth with two down, Lewis was called in to bat for Craig and it was a proper move as he smashed out a triple to right, scoring a man ahead of him. Lewis tried to stretch his hit into a homer but was nailed at the plate.

In the ninth it was three strikeouts in a row for Brown. The score:

AUTO RECORDS ARE SMASHED IN WORCESTER HILL CLIMB

BY J. C. KERRISON.

Worcester, June 6. — There was a great gathering of records in the motor climb of Dead Horse Hill held under the auspices of the Worcester Automobile Club this afternoon. Not alone did some three or four machines get several seconds under the previous record, established some two years ago by that daring amateur driver, Sammy Stevens, but the club made a new record for itself in seeing that the course was in admirable shape and well protected.

Throughout the period for the running of the contests, sixteen regular and one special event, not a soul was on the course but what had business there. Then again, the course itself was in admirable condition, never excelled nor even equalled. All this was possible as a result of the legislation adopted a few weeks ago by the Great and General Court of Massachusetts.

Baldwin, who drove to the world's mile competitive record at Readville last Fall, won distinguished honors in the exhibition class by making the mile in 55 3-5 seconds, almost seven full seconds below the mark created by Stevens two years ago. His work was the admiration of all, and naturally enough when he reached the final post he was given a rousing cheer. This piece of work is really remarkable, as the hill has a 420-foot rise in the mile, with an average grade of 8 per cent. At times Baldwin was forced to cut off his power and take the pumps with throttle closed.

Other Class Records Broken.

The record for the course naturally enough is the one great achievement, and although not so officially announced, there is every reason to believe that other class records were broken. There was but one protest entered against a car, that by Mr. Snow, against the Stevens-Duryea Big Six, which protest barred that car out of three different events. The protest was based on the ground that the car was equipped with a runabout body, and the protest seemed to hold, and the car was not driven in three events, although the events were the same as those in which the car competed with signal honors at both the Fort George and Wilkesbarre hill climbs. However, it was noted by its sponsors that the time made by the Little Six-Stevens, the unprotested car, would have been sufficient to capture those events had it been eligible for competition, and further, that the time of the Big Six in the only event in which it drove, the free-for-all, was several seconds better than the times made by the cars winning the events in which it was protested.

The Stevens captured two first prizes. The Thomas outfit was the greatest prize winner, capturing, with the two Detroits entered, no less than four events and finishing second in three classes. The Peerless captured two events, in one of which it had a walkover, the Buick and Baldwin each walked away with two events. The other prize winners were the Jackson, Chadwick and Maxwell, they taking one each, while the Indian captured the entire list of prizes in the motor cycle event, they being the only make entered.

There was certainly some great work accomplished on the hill, the drivers as a whole showing an ability to keep to the middle of the road and drive as straight as an arrow. Their work was exceptionally good and it was this that brought the day to a close without a single accident.

The class for cars of from twenty-four to forty horsepower was about as well contested as any, there being no less than nine starters and the battle here was waged most fiercely. The Stevens Little Six won with the two Thomas cars second and third, Hancock and Lorimer were the only two to get below the 1.20 mark in this class.

Boston Amateurs Beaten.

In the class for amateurs, Harrington of Worcester beat out Snow of Boston two-fifths of a second for first place, while Frank Wing, in the Marmon, finished in third position. In the event open to all types Baldwin, with his steamer, climbed the hill in 57 3-5 seconds, he being the first man to get under the old record for the hill, although it had been generally expected that the Stevens mark would go.

Houpt, in the Chadwick, with which he did such good work at the Wilkesbarre hill climb, romped home in second position, being one and three-fifths of a second slower than the man from Providence. E. P. Blake, with his little Jackson, showed the way home in his class, being thirteen seconds faster than his nearest competitor.

Director Gilmore smiled all over his face when he saw Light walk away with the event open to all stock gasolene cars, and this smile broadened a few minutes later when Lorimer won out in the class selling from $2,000 to $3,000 inclusive, with his team mate Light, in second place less than two seconds away, these two being the only members of that class to get below the 1.20 mark.

The speediest work came in the hill record climb, which was won by the Chadwick, with Grant in the Berliet second, these two cars defeating the famous Flying Dutchman driven by that fearless operator, Charles Basle. Robinson in the Stevens-Duryea Big Six, in his only ride of the day, recorded the climb in 1.05 4-5, several seconds better than the time recorded by the cars in his own class. There was a repetition of fast work in the exhibition class, when Baldwin gained the distinctive honors of the day, followed by Houpt in the Chadwick and Grant in the Berliet, the first two being below the previous record and the latter just two-fifths of a second outside the best previous mark.

The story of the afternoon's work is best told in tabulated form, giving the performance of each car, which is appended.

Cadillac Cars Successful in Novel Test in London

London papers are filled with the comments on the recent remarkable test to which the three Cadillac cars were subjected under the immediate direction and supervision of the Royal Automobile Club.

It will be remembered that in this test three Cadillac cars were taken from the show rooms in London and driven to Brooklands and given a 25 mile run, making a 50 mile non-stop run for each car.

They were entirely dismantled, 721 parts being removed from each car; and the parts from all three cars thrown into one heap hap hazard and thoroughly mixed up together, so that the parts from one car were unrecognizable from those of another.

From this heap of parts the cars were gradually built up again, until, at a certain stage of the test, all the remaining parts were discarded and new parts brought from the Cadillac salesrooms, and the work of rehabilitation continued to a perfect completion.

The cars were then given a 500 mile non-stop run on the Brooklands track, completing the distance with marvelous regularity at a speed of thirty four miles an hour.

Such an extraordinary amount of interest and admiration was aroused in English and Irish automobile circles by this remarkable showing that it was decided to carry the test still further. As a result, the same three cars are to be entered in the 2,000 mile trial, to be conducted under the auspices of the Royal Automobile Club. The three cars are now locked up under the Royal Automobile Club surveillance, and on the eve of the trial one of them will be selected to run in the event just as it finished in the test at Brooklands.

AUTO MAKERS UPHOLD A. A. A.

Thomas Henderson, president of the National Association of Automobile Manufacturers, attended the meeting of the racing board of the American Automobile Association held in New York on Tuesday last and authorized the release of the following statement, which was made by him at this meeting:

"I appear here as the president of the National Association of Automobile Manufacturers and will say that the American Automobile Association has been discussed before our executive board and I am here with authority representing all the automobile manufacturers of America to state that we will stand by the rulings of the American Automobile Association and the rules that are made by its racing board for the Vanderbilt Cup contest, which the manufacturers of this country will abide by.

"The manufacturers believe—and the fact is—that any other ruling would be detrimental to the interests of the manufacturers, as many of them for a long time have been working on racing cars and trying to win the Vanderbilt Cup.

"We shall uphold the American Automobile Association and the policies which it has outlined as represented through its central conference committee, which is representative of the entire American automobile industry, and I might add that many of the manufacturers requested me to surely attend the meetings and to stand by the American Automobile Association."

BELGIUM AUTO RACE.

Belgium has decided to hold its annual automobile race on the fast Ardennes circuit under the international rule limiting bore of four-cylinder engines to 155 millimetres. This makes complete the acceptance, in Europe at any rate, of the Ostend rule, France, Italy and Belgium having adopted it and no high power car races being held under any other conditions. The Belgian meet has been set down for Aug. 12 on the fast Bastogne circuit, the scene of many a record-breaking race.

MADE AN AUTO IN 14 MINUTES

On Thursday, May 28, a party of out of town men were being shown through the factory of the Ford Motor Company by Master Mechanic Wills, and as they went through the assembling department one of them asked how long it required to assemble a car.

"Never timed it, but will show you how fast it can be done." Calling the foreman, Mr. Wills instructed him to build a car from the ground up as quickly as possible.

Picking a man for each operation, the start was made at 4.30. One group of men assembled the frame; another got the wheels and tires; then the engine, the transmission and the differential were mounted, the radiator placed in position, the body bolted down, the coil placed, the oiler and gasolene tank filled and the car started. Time fourteen minutes.

Mr. Elwood E. Rice, a prominent Dayton manufacturer, witnessed the test and rode in the car at its completion. It was a convincing demonstration of the absolute uniformity and interchangeability of parts. Not a minute's preparation was made, and if each part had not slipped into place no such time could have been made.

BIG RACE AT SAVANNAH.

The announcement that Savannah would hold an international race under the auspices of its local club and the Automobile Club of America, under the international rules on Thanksgiving Day, with twenty-five entries guaranteed, makes it necessary for the American manufacturers to come to a decision as to which of the organizations they will support. The American Automobile Association came back at the Automobile Club on the date of the signing of the Savannah contract by issuing the entry blanks for the Vanderbilt race which is to be run Oct. 24 on Long Island. From this time forward there are likely to be war conditions without cessation or the asking of quarter.

WINNINGS OF STEARNS STOCK CARS

No automobile of American or Foreign manufacture has ever made so many winnings in such a short space of time as has the STEARNS car. Repeating its many victories of last year, when several world's records were broken, DECORATION Day of this year was a STEARNS calendar.

BRIDGEPORT HILL CLIMB—STEARNS cars won 1ST, 2D, and 3D in the regular price stock car gasolene class, and 1st, 2d and 3d in the Amateur Drivers' Class.

BALTIMORE-PIMLICO TRACK MEET—A STEARNS car, driven by an amateur, won the 5, 10 and 100 mile events.

OTHER RECENT VICTORIES ARE:

CINCINNATI HILL CLIMB—J. J. Ryan, an amateur, defeated all other entries, including special racers, making the best time at any Cincinnati Hill Climb.

NEW HAVEN—At the Yale Auto Club Hill Climb a STEARNS won the regular and free-for-all events.

IN EVERY CASE THESE WERE STEARNS STOCK CARS.

The owner of an automobile does not, as a rule, care to engage in racing. A car which will develop the speed to get through road dust when necessary, and which will take any hill or mountain readily and easily while touring, possesses the most desirable qualities a motorist can ask for.

Stevens-Duryea Light Six Wins!

TWO STARTS — TWO FIRSTS

Event No. 3—Time, 1:15. Event No. 14—Time, 1:15

At Worcester Hill Climb, June 6,
Distance 1 Mile, from 8 to 12% Grade

There were no cars that made better time except the high-powered cars in the stripped event "free for all."

The Big Six Was Protested,

which barred it in events Nos. 2, 12 and 15 by entry No. 8, a 57 H. P. $6000 six-cylinder car. Since the time of the Big Six was better than that made by any car in these events it would have won all of these in a walk.

And we want to particularly call your attention to the fact that the 57 H. P. six-cylinder car that protested the Big Six had four trials at the hill. Times, 1:15 3-4, 1:16, 1:18 4-5, 1:16 1-5.

Time of the 35 H. P. Light Six Was 1:15

In the free-for-all event, in which the fastest cars in America were entered, including gasoline and steam racing cars, the Big Six Regular Stock ran Fourth. Time—1:06 3-5.

In another trial it made 1:05 4-5.

GOOD DEMAND FOR FARMS

By the Investigator.

S[illegible] has been in steady demand [illegible] week. People who are [illegible] ing [illegible] proper, are more likely at this [illegible] of the year to make inquiries about suburban property and many important [illegible] are recorded.

The young married man of a family wants to get into a quiet neighborhood at a short distance from the station, where the railroad fare will not average more than 20 cents a day. His work is in the city proper and altogether he concludes that he can save on the rent if a house by locating in some suburban district. Boston is well [illegible] with towns and villages that [illegible] directly appeal to such persons.

You can always get more for your money in a suburban house. This house is generally [illegible] with [illegible] modern improvements and the small towns [illegible] better for [illegible] cheaper conveniences for housekeeping [illegible] the large [illegible] ing [illegible] and [illegible] with the advantages of a city. They find that nearly all suburban houses are equipped with electricity, and the telephone service is reasonable, as well as the water rates.

Suburban Sales Good.

The family in a suburban residence are not then deprived of the advantages of the city, and the chief obstacle in the way is the lack of cheaper transportation. If this could be more systematically improved there would be a greater exodus from the city proper. The day is not far distant when this defect will be remedied. The sale of building lots in the suburbs keeps constantly improving and the land [illegible] [illegible] and Boston [illegible] people [illegible] purchasing lots to-day than ever before in the history of realty. No one quarter is popular. The way that lots have [illegible] is a [illegible] now [illegible] this section for sale. To [illegible] this [illegible] the Edward F. Harrington [illegible] this [illegible] to-day of 5,000 feet [illegible]. It is the [illegible] in a very desirable [illegible] a few minutes from [illegible] or electrics and it is an [illegible] figure which will double its value in a year.

[illegible] land has been carefully examined by the Investigator. It is high and sightly, just the spot for homes, and the rapidity with which this whole section has been sold is sufficient evidence of its popularity.

Property in Winthrop.

Take a stroll over Winthrop. Go along Johnson avenue and through Court or Cottage Parks, and what territory within easy access of this city is so attractive, especially at this season of the year? The prices of dwellings necessarily vary here by reason of location. Those overlooking the harbor with a large shore frontage are much in demand, and they command good prices. They combine a Winter home with numerous Summer opportunities. It's no wonder that Winthrop, on account of its unexcelled transportation [illegible] to be so popular.

Point Shirley is only five miles from the State House, and here seventy-eight lots have recently been sold, bringing anywhere from $410 to $2,500. Here is the last large tract of land in Boston harbor. It has two miles of shore, and the greater part of it is near deep water, making a good harbor for yachting.

At Charles River Heights.

The public here witness to what extent the projectors of this land [illegible] have gone to make the lots attractive. It is costly work, but it pays in the long run. The concrete block house [illegible] at No. 103 on Beacon street in this section is already under way. This will be an attractive home, with a variety of stone facings and ornamentations, and will be complete with spacious rooms, cemented cellar floors and cemented roof. Sand and gravel are here given free to all who contemplate building this [illegible] of dwelling house.

The [illegible] which are visiting Charles River every day for boating are attracted to this improved property, which is a few minutes away from the bridge where the electrics [illegible] stop. The sale of the lots continues brisk and those who were fortunate in securing a choice of lots are to-day holding them at an increase from twelve to thirty per cent on their investment.

Dorchester property is always in demand. Real estate men are always glad to get control of it, as there are constant inquiries from their customers about it. Now is the time to buy in this section. Very desirable [illegible] dwellings bring good [illegible] in several instances many good [illegible] maybe had. There is no [illegible] buying here and the apartment houses along the best streets are good investments. Those who have bought within the last six months will tell you with pride of their good deals along Virginia street, the upper end of Melvale avenue as well as Bradlee, Algonquin and Lyndeaurst streets.

Good Bargains in Market.

Different causes throw good property into the market and often a house can be bought for less than it costs to build it. This is due to the unsettled condition of many families who are anxious to sell, because their interests have been transferred to other States where they are obliged to live. Then for the past year, many have gone farther out into the country and bought farms.

Farms are always popular and will continue to be so for obvious reasons. A man who can make a comfortable living on a farm is more willing to undertake to-day the task than five years ago. This moving of households from the city to the country has been going on steadily for a year or more past and it is showing itself in many ways. Many houses are made vacant in consequence. These houses are offered for sale at prices that are very attractive. The owners want the money for other enterprises and are often willing to make a sacrifice in prices.

Then again, people who have lived in a house for five years or more, want a new home with more modern improvements. They have read something about what can be done in the way of improved construction of dwellings and in order to carry out their ideas they are often willing to sell their dwelling at a reduced price.

Rage for Bungalows.

There is more general interest displayed in building by the average person than ever before. Everyone to-day has some idea of architecture and wants an opportunity to prove it.

Some are carried away with bungalows. In fact, after living in one, they will tell you blandly they wouldn't live in anything else. This in itself has prevailed with so many owners that they are willing to sell their former house at a price for which this same house could not be built to-day.

It is no depreciation in the value of real estate, it is merely an indication that people having ideas in building houses, want to see them carried out and often will go to the extremity of selling their former property at a low figure to gratify their hobby.

Chance for Country Home.

The country lying about Natick is becoming popular and the Investigator in his trips around this locality saw not a few places which must appeal to anyone seeking a country home at a remarkably low price. In company with James McFigue, the agent of properties in this section, he was shown a four-acre farm with a seven room house, where a man of any ingenuity with all that is at his command here in the way of a barn and poultry can make an excellent living and this can be bought for a mere song.

It is just the place for a man who wants a little patience in getting results and is willing to work hard for them. There is no use of tackling a place like this in the country unless you are willing to work hard, put attention to the details of small farming and persistency in overcoming some [illegible] will eventually make a man better satisfied with what he can do, than to spend all his life behind a desk in a city office.

What do you think of a man down in Duxbury clearing $4,000 off a farm nearly every year that he is now willing to sell for $4,400? Why does he sell it? He says he is tired of it and wants to give some other man a chance.

Cucumbers for Living.

Not every man can do this, but every man on a farm to-day can make a living, if he will put a little keen business judgment into it and test accurately what pays him best to raise and stick to it till he succeeds. The Investigator found a farmer last week twenty-five miles out of Boston in a district over two miles and a half away from a railroad station and cross-examined him.

"How do you make a living in this lovely spot?" was asked.

"I raise cucumbers," he replied, and he had two large hothouses full of them and knew enough to keep a hive of bees in each house. "I make a good living and find a good market for my products. I'm now old and no one cares to employ me, so several years ago I bought this farm and these hothouses, and I make a comfortable living. I raise nothing else but cucumbers. I did try pinks, but they didn't pay me as well."

Lynn Real Estate Boom.

"Property in Lynn is up to concert pitch," said a real estate agent recently in that city. Between Swampscott line and Newhall street land is selling from fifty cents to one dollar a foot. Up towards Peabody, in the section known as Wyoma, land is bringing twenty-five to thirty cents a foot. Around Lynnfield station, where land brought a few years ago four to five cents a foot, it has now gone up to twenty-five and thirty cents. There are several good pieces of investment property in West Lynn paying ten per cent net, and in some instances in Lynn fourteen per cent is realized.

Tenements are scarce and it is difficult to get any at all in some sections. Realty shows a decided advance in the shoe city and its environments.

Wayland is one of the prettiest towns within a half hour of Boston. There are a few desirable places here for sale, costing from $5,000 to $7,000, and situated on high ground, commanding a view of the Sudbury River.

Around this country are scattered a number of old estates, which will sooner or later come into the market and be sold for building lots.

Building in Norwood.

Norwood maintains its real estate boom with no houses to rent and a number of pretentious ones are being built along several new streets. The town is putting in a sewer.

New York people are buying up farms in Rochester, Vermont, where seventy acres of land with five-room house as well as barn sell for $550. In Randolph, the same State, forty acres, with five room house, barn and sheds, sold for $400. These farms make delightful Summer homes and the automobile has made them accessible and increased the demand for them.

REALTY SALES REPORTED BRISK

Despite the fact that the warm weather generally witnesses a slump in realty transactions, brokers report that business of the past week was practically brisk, the demand for desirable suburban property being lively. In the Back Bay, South and West Ends, a large number of sales were recorded and the indications are that the demand for suburban realty will continue.

Singularly enough, though there is a brisk demand to buy and sell suburban property, almost all the dealers report an unusually dull season for the renting of flats and residences. The fact that there is little renting being done in the suburbs has induced a number of property owners in the suburbs to materially reduce rents. This is particularly true in Dorchester where desirable tenants can procure at [illegible] $3 to $5 less than one month [illegible]. Following are the latest sales recorded:

A[illegible] have been signed for the sale of the property No. 565 Newbury street, belonging to David P. Kimball. There is a three-story brick [illegible] with 1,657 feet of land. The [illegible] assessed is $7,500, of which $2,000 is on the land. Henry W. Savage is the broker in the [illegible] and the purchaser's name will be given when the deed is recorded.

Through the office of Codman & Street the property Nos. 108 and 110 Myrtle street, West End, owned by the John J. Day estate has been transferred to Catherine Levingston for investment. It is on the corner of Grove square, and consists of a five-story and basement brick structure with 2,000 square feet of land, all taxed for $25,500, of which $5,000 is on the land.

The Electric Welding Company, Limited, has sold to George E. Leonard a three and one-half [illegible] 2,720 feet of land [illegible] taxed for $7,000 [illegible] buys for improvement. The lot is assessed for $6,100.

Two three-story brick apartment houses, Nos. 31 and 33 [illegible] street, near Albany, in the South End, owned by David Gelman et al, have been sold to Nathan Ginsberg et al. There is 1,772 feet of land taxed for $5,200.

Percival A. Evans reports papers recorded in the sale from Joanna Merrill et al., to Samuel L. Dana of the property No. 878 Massachusetts avenue. There is a four-story brick house, besides 1,950 square feet of land, the whole taxed for $9,000, of which $3,000 is on the land. The price [illegible] made public.

Brookline and Brighton.

Atwood & Pattee report the sale by auction for the Faneuil Hall National Bank of a desirable piece of investment property located in Brighton, consisting of a mansion house containing fifteen rooms together with a large stable and about 139,000 square feet of land. The land fronts on three streets, Market, North Beacon and Faneuil. The property is assessed for $23,7[illegible] [illegible] bought the property and bought under assessed valuation.

Henry F. [illegible] to record from his office in the sale for Arthur H. Fray of Brookline of the lot [illegible] 10,100 square feet [illegible] a bungalow for the [illegible] $8,[illegible] [illegible] was the purchaser.

A lot of land [illegible] W. D. [illegible] the Crowninshield heirs and is purchased by Oscar Johnson, who will erect a single house of English design. The land is taxed for sixty cents per square foot.

The Bonnelli Adams Company has closed the purchase of another large tract of land in the Brighton district through the office of Callan & Tabor. The [illegible] 0,790 square feet [illegible] on Commonwealth avenue and facing other streets. The company will begin development at once.

Henry W. [illegible] have passed through his office on the sale of a residential property at No. 173 Naples road, Brookline, belonging to Frederick F. Baldwin. There are 6,400 square feet of land and a two and one-half story frame house. The total tax value is $9,000 and of this $3,600 is on the land. The purchaser, Frederick W. Wood of Brookline, will occupy.

Charlestown.

W. W. Stall, president and manager of the Factory Exchange, reports that he has relocated the Travis Osburn Company, manufacturers of [illegible], which was obliged to abandon Chelsea after the fire. ELEVEN BADLY HURT BY GAS EXPLOSION

Indianapolis, Ind., June 6.—Eleven persons were hurt, several seriously injured, when the Prestolite gas pumping station, adjacent to St. Vincent's Hospital, blew up to-day, wrecking one side of the hospital and demolishing a fire house next door. There were four distinct explosions. The plant was completely demolished and the debris took fire.

The iron door of the pumping plant was blown against one side of St. Vincent's Hospital and demolished a portion of the hospital. There were 100 patients in the hospital at the time and several deaths from shock are feared.

A large gas tank was hurled high in the air and came down on the engine house next door to the hospital, wrecking the building.

The injured are: Lieutenant Foulois and William Steinhause of the fire department, Otto Hoffmeister and John Van Garden, employes at factory; William Hutchinson and Albrink Hust, patients in hospital; Nellie Connolly, Lillian Ryan and Jacob Demeriline, all employes of St. Vincent's; Sister Cephas of hospital staff and Lena Dawler, hospital employe.

The explosion broke windows and shook buildings all over the city. This is the third explosion at this plant in a year.

SPREAD PANIC IN HOTEL; IS JAILED

Manchester, N. H., June 6.—Because he terrorized the occupants of the famous New Boston Tavern, a hotel kept by Will Averill at New Boston, fifteen miles west of here, William Bowers, aged thirty-eight years, was brought here to-day and locked up in the county jail to serve a term of ninety days and to work out a fine of $18.40, which will keep him in jail 147 days.

Bowers was charged with attacking Edward Munhall, a clerk at the New Boston Tavern. Munhall refused to sell liquor to him, and when he became boisterous had him put out of the bar.

Drawing a knife and standing outside, Bowers challenged anyone in the hotel, particularly Munhall, to come out and fight him. Then when no one paid any attention to him, he rushed into the hotel.

Panic resulted and many fled. A. D. Campbell, a lodger, rushed to Bowers and knocked him down, disarming him. Several of the by-standers helped Campbell overpower the man. The Selectmen locked him up and to-day Justice of the Peace Robert Bunton heard the case and sentenced Bowers.

RATS AND MICE
The Damage They Do and How to Prevent it

Rats and mice cost the country millions. They may carry disease into your home, damage your merchandise, eat your chickens, grain, vegetables and fruit. Many a dangerous fire is caused by rats gnawing electric light wires. Every woman, every storekeeper, merchant or farmer should exterminate them.

RAT KILLO
Trade Mark.
Two rats, if unchecked, will in 3 years multiply to two million.

DRIVES THEM OUT AND KILLS THEM AWAY FROM THE PREMISES.

Rats and mice seek it eagerly in the form in which you buy it. It doesn't harm your dog, cat or child. It's the greatest exterminator of the rodent. Agents wanted everywhere. Big profits. Ask your dealer for RAT-KILLO. It is put up in three size boxes, small, medium and large, at 15 cents, 25 and 50 cents.

If your dealer hasn't it, send money for amount wanted. Address Dept. 1.

FIGHT BEGINS TUESDAY

Night sessions will be ordered in the Massachusetts House of Representatives this week to rush the New Haven's merger bill to the desk and pen of Acting Governor Eben S. Draper. Merger managers in the lower branch seek to avoid such a prolonged battle and harmful publicity as came to the railroad bill in the Senate.

The seven Senators who voted for amendments on Thursday and against the same amendments on Friday were asked by the Boston Sunday American last night if they cared to say anything in explanation.

One of these amendments provided that the bill was not to be construed as affecting Attorney General Malone's anti-merger suits in the Supreme Judicial Court. The other provided for an examination of the New Haven and Boston & Maine finances to determine whether a merger of the corporations is in the public interests. Both were defeated when the seven flopped.

Fisk's Defiant Reply.

"I vote as I d—n please," was the answer of Senator Charles D. B. Fisk, Brighton district, Boston.

The merger bill will be received in the House to-morrow. There will be no discussion. The bill will go into the orders of the day for Tuesday. On Tuesday, the question will be:

"Shall this bill be ordered to a third reading?"

Then the fight will be on.

The reason to be advanced in corridors and smoking rooms, for putting on the high speed, sitting at night and "sending her along," will be that seven honorable Senators want to attend the Republican National Convention on June 16 at Chicago.

"In Hurry For Convention."

Shaw of Manchester and Schuster of Douglas are "Big Four" alternates. Keith of Bourne and Faxon of Stoughton are District delegates. Treadway of Stockbridge, Richmond of North Adams and Johnson of Fitchburg hope to be spectators. Every one of the seven was with the Railroad Control bill in the Senate from first to last. Richmond voted for the leave-it-to-the-courts amendment on Thursday, to be sure, but on Friday, under the direction of Ring Master Laxon, double somersaulted to the other side.

The merger crowd will urge the anti-mergerites to produce all their amendments on Tuesday. They want the [illegible] ed at once. Pro-merger amendments, like that of Potter of Worcester, were not shown to the Senate until the eleventh hour. In the House, however, this will not be regarded as an argument against a display of the anti-Merger cards.

House Now Anti-Merger.

It will not be denied that the present temper of the House is anti-merger. The adoption of the Mitchell amendment in the Senate on Thursday, and its prompt rejection on Friday, has spread revolt up and down the State. Representatives are hearing from their constituents. Wherever they turn, the people are discussing Mellen's absolute control of affairs in the Senate on Beacon Hill. A cry is going up for the return of Governor Guild to the Executive offices. Some of the Governor's warmest admirers are beginning to suspect that the will-o'-the-wisp he is chasing is an artificial, and not a natural, light.

The House will be given an opportunity to put back into the law of Massachusetts the old provision that not more than 11 per cent. of the stock of any railroad may be voted by a single interest. This was the provision accidentally dropped out when a Recess Committee revised and recodified the railroad laws a few years ago. William F. Dana was chairman of that Recess Committee. Mr. Dana is now a Justice of the Superior Court.

The Senate turned down the 10 per cent. suggestion with a jeer. That was early in the week, before the people began to sit up in astonishment and take notice.

White to Offer Bill.

Representative Norman White will offer to the House the Anti-Merger League's anti-merger bill, produced in the Senate by the Hon. Edward A. Cowee of Worcester and kicked one side. Cowee is the Republican Senator who talked to empty chairs on the other side of the capitol. He is a Worcester grain merchant and a member of the Boston Chamber of Commerce. Cowee's stand against the railroad power has made him a conspicuous figure in the Republican politics of Massachusetts. He typifies the Roosevelt idea.

Senator Mitchell's why-not-leave-it-up-to-the-courts? amendment will also be offered to the House.

The dominant party will find it hard work in the House. The anti-Merger fight there will be led by Representative Luce of Somerville, Representative Charles H. Brown of Medford and Representative Norman White of Brookline, Republicans, and Martin Lomasney of Boston, experienced parliamentarian.

House Stars for Merger.

The lawyers and practised stump speakers will be on the Railroad Control side. The old spectacle of a fight between the lawyers, the "stars,"—and the back seats, will once more be on view. There are cases on record where the back seats have won.

Some plain every day common sense business man, for instance, a man like the Hon. Edward A. Cowee of Worcester, might win this fight in the House, where a Senate would laugh at him, as this Senate laughed at Cowee of Worcester.

Representatives Walker of Brookline, Schoonmaker of Ware, Garcelon of Newton, Washburn of Worcester (a brother of the Congressman) and O'Connell of Fitchburg, all orators and all legislative old timers will speak right out in favor of the Railroad Control Committee. They are members of the Democratic-Republican Committee on Railroads, which unanimously reported that the bill ought to pass.

Some members of the House would like to hear the merger case argued, for and against. They suggest that now might be a good time to adopt the custom of olden days and invite a Merger champion to address the House and an anti-Merger man to answer him. They mention Charles S. Mellen against William B. Lawrence, or Charles F. Choate, Jr., against Louis D. Brandeis, Esq. The House will not be satisfied, as the Senate chose to be, with the mere say-so of the Committee on Railroads.

SENATORS EXPLAIN WHY THEY FLIP-FLOPPED TO MELLEN SIDE OF MERGER

Seven Massachusetts Senators have been telling the Boston Sunday American why they voted for certain amendments to the merger bill on Thursday and against the same amendments on Friday. In each case the flip-flopping Senator voted as Charles Sanger Mellen would have had him vote.

Senator Gideon B. Abbott, Boston:

"I came to the conclusion that the amendment was unnecessary."

Senator Nathaniel P. Cowle of New Bedford:

Senator Charles D. B. Fisk, Boston (Brighton District):

"I vote as I d—n please."

Senator Francke W. Dickinson, Springfield:

"Because the amendment placed me on the wrong side of the question, a stay of proceedings. That's what I think we want. This amendment threw the situation into the courts. If I had fully comprehended its purpose I never would have voted for it."

Senator Joseph Turner, Fall River:

"I was mystified on Thursday, clear on Friday. Concluded after hearing what was said that the financial condition of the roads calls for no investigation."

Haven't Time to Explain.

Senator Charles F. Jenney of Hyde Park:

"It was wise for me to make the change. I became convinced of that. I haven't time now to make more of an explanation."

Senator Clinton Q. Richmond of North Adams:

"The Mitchell leave-it-to-the-courts amendment was unnecessary. A previous section takes care of the matter."

Senators Abbott, Jenney, Sowle and Turner voted on Thursday in favor of a thorough investigation of the financial condition of the Boston & Maine Railroad and the New York, New Haven & Hartford, for the purpose of determining if a merger would be in the public interest. The amendment was adopted, 20 to 17.

On Friday, they voted against this amendment and it was taken out 20 to 17.

Senators Abbott, Dickinson, Fisk, Richmond and Sowle voted on Thursday that the Attorney-General and the Supreme Court might continue the pending [illegible] against Mellen and his railroad, regardless of this bill.

On Friday, having changed their minds, they voted against the Mitchell amendment, so that proceedings stop with the concurrent action of the House in adopting the "Railroad Control" bill.

Brown Senior Who Eloped with Chorus Girl Cut Off by Father

Providence, R. I., June 6.—Redmond P. Conley, member of the senior class of Brown University, son of a wealthy business man of Phenix, R. I., and his bride, who was Miss Sue C. Wilhelm, of Akron, O., and one of the beautiful chorus girls with "Rogers Brothers in Panama," until a few weeks ago, are awaiting the cooling of the anger of Mr. Conley's parents.

At present the young couple, who so sensationally eloped from here last Tuesday and dashed away to Revere, Mass., where they were joined in wedlock by the Rev. [illegible] of the Methodist Episcopal Church of that town, are cut off from the parental blessing.

"I think my parents will relent," said young Conley, who is of the ideal type of college athlete man of the day. "They were furious, though, when they learned that we had been married, for I am a member of St. Peter and Paul's Catholic Church, in Phenix, and my bride is a Protestant.

"I thought that we could get married and keep it a secret. Then we could tell our folks about it later and they would become reconciled, for Miss Wilhelm thinks highly of the church and is willing to become a member. I suppose I am excommunicated just now, but I hope to have that straightened out after awhile."

College Boy's Romance.

The love story of the college boy, son of a rich man, member of the senior class of old Brown, one of the Zeta Psi fraternity and popular athlete, and the beautiful chorus girl, who was a prime favorite with the theatregoers in Boston recently when "Rogers Brothers in Panama" showed there, reads like a romance.

Young Mrs. Conley is a charming girl in both appearance and conversation. She has a will of her own, though, and original ideas. She says she prefers to be a wife than a chorus girl, for the lives of chorus girls are not all sugar and roses.

The bride, who was Miss Sue C. Wilhelm of Akron, has been on the stage for several years although she is hardly more than out of her 'teens. As a singer she won no little distinction and favor. Last season she was a marked member of the company of "Rogers Brothers in Panama." Before that time she won a name for herself in the "Little Johnny Jones" company.

Last Winter she came here with the Rogers Brothers. Of course, the college boys of Brown went to the performance in the Providence Opera House. Conley went more than once, for he soon singled out the beautiful young singer as one of a thousand girls.

Met Her at Dinner.

Then came a dinner at which the heir to a fortune met the pretty Ohio actress. The Brown senior's heart was taken captive at once. Meetings were arranged and one engagement followed another.

The days were [illegible] college recitations [illegible] and the [illegible] spring of the [illegible] were [illegible] other touch of the [illegible]. Conley told the Boston Sunday American reporter that it was a case of love at first sight, so far as he was concerned, and the denouement of the affair shows that his bride was badly smitten by Cupid.

The college student is an ardent automobilist and his father gave him a car of his own. "My parents gave the automobile for all of [illegible]," said [illegible]. "They think that it [illegible] auto [illegible]. But we will show them differently. Our marriage would have been kept a secret as we desired, had not Rev. Mr. [illegible] at the Martin [illegible] given the whole thing away to the [illegible]."

While the former Miss Wilhelm was singing in Providence with her theatrical troupe, there were auto trips galore by moonlight and during the long afternoons.

Courted Her by Mail.

After the Roger Brothers' Company left Providence, Miss Wilhelm wrote regularly to Redmond Conley, and his letters were as frequent, bulky and ardent as were hers. They met in the different cities at which the company tarried. At New York, Boston and New Haven the courtship was continued, no one in the world being aware of the fact for they kept their counsel closely and well. Finally the love-smitten girl left the company and came to Providence where she secured lodging not far from the university. Then came the plans for marriage and the elopement of last Tuesday.

"I knew just as well as I was alive that the church and my parents would not permit me to marry the girl of my heart," said Conley. "She was not of my faith, but we just eloped; that's all there is to it.

"I went home and told my parents after it had taken place and—they were frantic—there were reproofs and all that. But I am going to live with my wife and she with me no matter what happens. My wife loves me truly and devotedly and, while she does not wish to go back to the stage, she will do so if we are obliged to keep things going in that way."

Postpones Graduation.

Mr. Conley was to have been graduated this month from Brown. Now, he proposes to stay another year in college and finish next Summer. Then he plans to enter the bar at Washington and become a patent lawyer.

He met the parental upbraidings because of his course with braveness and quiet. He does not believe his parents will disown him. In fact, another marriage license has been secured in Phenix for the young couple, but the Conley family will not say at this time, what their intentions are.

At the university, where Conley stood high in favor with students and faculty, the boys, his mates, were dumfounded at the news of his marriage. Even in his fraternity he had breathed not a word of his attachment for the beautiful chorus girl and singer.

Stagnation Rules in Local Transactions; Union Pacific Leader in Advance.

The smallest attention was paid to the movements of the New York stock market yesterday, and during the two hours there [illegible] a steady tendency [illegible] was noticeable and starting with [illegible] gains at the opening [illegible] advanced until at the close the leaders were up on an average of a point.

[illegible] less from an absence of any trading in [illegible] [illegible] the fears of quite a few market followers and kept the [illegible].

Opened With Gains

At the start there were gains averaging from an eighth to a half point registered throughout the list. The market was even then in a state of quietness and later [illegible] showed a tendency to advance [illegible]. The [illegible] upward movement, however, [illegible] under way until after [illegible] had even passed and then [illegible] and Reading started to move up [illegible] of the list followed in [illegible] wake. At the close prices were at top for the entire two hours and [illegible] was a feeling prevalent that the [illegible] It is pointed out that the uncertainty which was most noticeable during the week has to all appearances been disposed of and that the movements of the market from now on will be more determined.

There was one exception to the general strength which prevailed in the market, and that was the weakness in the Missouri Pacific shares. At a meeting of the directors it was voted to stop paying dividends on the stock. The closing price on the stock on Friday was 49 and the first price quoted yesterday was 46⅛. A decline to 46 was later seen, but in the general rally which came later in the day the stock sold up to 47¼ and closed at that price.

Setback in Gould Properties.

The decline in this stock is the result of a series of setbacks which the Gould properties have received lately and the [illegible] movement in Missouri Pacific [illegible] forward to by quite a few [illegible] who appreciated that the company will not continue to pay even scrap dividends.

Union Pacific was the stock which caused prices to go to higher levels. At the start 146⅛ was quoted on this stock, off ⅛ from the preceding close, and soon after 147 was touched. The upward movement stopped at this point, but in the last three quarters of an hour a pronounced "bullish" sentiment was seen, which did not cease until just before the close there were quite a few sales made at 148⅝.

Reading, the next in line on the upward movement advanced approximately as much as Union Pacific, and there was some good buying of this stock by traders in New York. The first price, 112¾, was up ⅛ over the close of the previous day and 113 was soon crossed. When the list was going higher at the end this stock was one of the principal leaders, and 114⅛ was the top and closing price.

Amalgamated, while not active, was strong at 67⅜, up 1; St. Paul did not join in the movement to any great extent and the best that could be done was an advance of 1⅛ points to 134⅛. There was quite a bit of talk concerning the Steel stocks, and the common was well taken at 38 and thereabouts, with the preferred selling at 101½.

Local Market Stagnant.

Stagnation ruled in the local market. Contrary to New York, there was not even a single stock in the entire list that could be termed active, and the only approach to such a condition was that made by U. S. Oil, which advanced two points on buying which looked as though it came from the inside.

The copper shares were the dullest on the entire list and even Amalgamated was unable to do more than a smattering of business. The rank and file of the copper shares were intensely dull, and the closing prices on the majority of them were within a small fraction of those that prevailed at the start.

There is next to nothing doing in the copper metal market and this condition is finding a reflection in the copper shares. Optimistic talk is heard on all sides of a demand soon to come, but as yet this demand has not materialized and there seems to be a very scant possibility of it doing so for some time. The market is immune to all outside influences and movements of stocks in New York are practically ignored.

The bank statement yesterday was rather disappointing, but as was shown by the action taken by the market on the currency bill, the money market has almost ceased to be a factor. There is more than enough money in the vaults of the banks and bad bank statements are not taken seriously.

White House News Helped the Market

By Thomas C. Shotwell.

NEW YORK, June 6.—Reassurances from President Roosevelt that he would not be a candidate [illegible] but did [illegible] market [illegible] to-day. Gains of from one to three points were recorded throughout the entire list, with Union Pacific, Steel common and Reading the leaders. The feature of trading was the heavy transactions in United States Steel common.

Missouri Pacific was prominent for its weakness. Persons in a position [illegible] that Can[illegible] [illegible] of [illegible] and [illegible] with no stock forth[illegible] forecast an upward movement in this issue this week.

Owing to the Whitsuntide holidays, the London stock market was closed to-day, and will be closed on Monday, owing to a bank holiday.

Wheat and cotton were slightly high.

BANK STATEMENT.

	June 6, 1908.		Changes.
Loans	$1,211,[illegible]	Dec.	[illegible]

Surplus	[illegible]	Dec.	717,800

FINANCIAL NOTES.

Brokerage offices yesterday were almost deserted, and the slow movements of the tape caused quite a few of those that did gather there to leave after the first hour.

* * *

The Union Pacific flotation, although it was looked forward to for some time, did not cause much of a stir yesterday, but there are quite a few people who were long on the stock on Friday that will remember the way it sent prices down.

* * *

If when the demand for copper metal comes it will be as large as has been predicted, it is likely that State street will wake up and possibly there might be a real "copper" boom such as was experienced the earlier part of last year.

* * *

The buying of U. S. Oil, which was by far the most prominent feature of the Boston market, could not be accounted for. All of this stock that was offered from 24¾ up to 26¼ was readily snapped up.

* * *

A report was current in the financial circles yesterday that an offer of 13 cents a pound for 3,000,000 pounds of copper had been refused by one of the largest producers of copper in this country.

* * *

The sedate manner in which Canadian Pacific crossed 160¼ yesterday, after opening at 158¾, resulted in rumors that the stock was scarce and that there were quite a few short accounts to be taken care of.

SAVED AGED WOMAN AS BRIDGE BREAKS

Kingfield, Me., June 6.—By the breaking of a bridge railing, Mrs. Martha Landers, an aged woman of this town, was precipitated into the river and sustained injuries which may prove fatal. It was through the bravery of her daughter-in-law she was rescued from drowning.

CREEDS FORGOTTEN IN TRIBUTES TO PASTOR.

Rev. Dennis J. Wholey Honored as No Other Pastor in [illegible]

LEAVES NEWTON POST

Protestants [illegible] Tender Him [illegible] and Others [illegible]

In [illegible] the Catholic [illegible] of Boston the Rev. Dennis J. Wholey, P. R., until recently the rector of the Church of the Sacred Heart, Newton Centre, and now pastor of St. Joseph's Church, Roxbury, who was tendered a reception last Wednesday night by 400 Protestants of Newton including the leading business and professional men of the city, is to be still further feted in appreciation of his many virtues, his high ideals and his unceasing endeavors for the moral, social and material improvement of the Garden City.

Last Wednesday night the Protestants of Newton Centre gathered to pay homage to this dearly beloved clergyman at a reception, and to-morrow night in the same hall the Catholics of his former parish and others of the same denomination in the city will [illegible] their appreciation of his work in their midst for the past seventeen years [illegible] a public reception.

Lauded by Archbishop.

But while the citizens of Newton are regretting the leaving of Father Wholey, who has won the hearts of all, irrespective of creed or denomination, the members of St. Joseph's Church, Roxbury, are preparing a [illegible] welcome [illegible] the form of a [illegible] Wednesday [illegible] Roxbury.

[illegible] the history of the [illegible] of the [illegible] gathering of Protestants [illegible] Father Wholey's last work in Newton and in his letter read at the reception Archbishop O'Connell expressed his heartfelt joy that the "misunderstandings and misconceptions on the part of those outside the fold of this church which have unhappily diminished the usefulness of the priest's labors are passing, that the affectionate regard of the citizens at large [illegible] whose life is dedicated [illegible] ing will not henceforth be limited to the circle of his own parish."

In November, 1890, Father Wholey, who had been a curate at St. Joseph's Church, West End, was assigned to organize the Church of the Sacred Heart at Newton Centre, and during the past seventeen years he has built up a constantly growing parish, erected a handsome edifice on Centre street, Newton Centre, and taken an active interest in all that pertained to the public moral and social betterment of the community.

Surprised at Tributes.

Encomiums of praise have been heaped upon him, but Father Wholey with modesty says that he has done nothing more than any other man in a like position would do, and he has been surprised at all the loving tributes that have been paid him.

Expressions [illegible] Protestants as to the cause of Father Wholey's popularity have been many. Mayor George Hutchinson, who was unable to be present at the reception last Wednesday, said of Father Wholey: "On every side I hear only commendation for his faithful and [illegible] service [illegible] community [illegible]"

Judge Robert R. Bishop, testifying to the influence of Father Wholey's labors, said: "I think his long service in Newton Centre has [illegible] first that he [illegible] fluence in the whole community, Protestant and Catholic alike, has been a constantly aggressive force for our improvement and elevation."

William C. Bray [illegible] business [illegible] said: "We all have our individual lives to live, but it is well that there are occasions which bring us together [illegible] contact [illegible] high [illegible] and a duty [illegible] such as [illegible] No word [illegible] to the record he has made for himself [illegible] I could wish with all my heart that it was a reception to welcome Father Wholey into our midst rather than one to wish him God speed because of his departure."

In Newton Seventeen Years.

Alfred E. Alvord, president of the Newton Centre Improvement Association, under whose auspices the reception last week was carried out so successfully, said: "For seventeen long and fruitful years he has stood [illegible] village [illegible] beyond the confines of his own immediate parish, and acted as a leaven to the whole community. That is why we honor him."

Rev. Edward T. Sullivan, rector of Trinity Episcopal Church, said: "His main endeavors were for his own people, but after all he is best known and marked by his incidental ministries, by the people outside [illegible] and a larger sphere, it is not a life which is marked by unrest or discontent, he has lived a life among us of simplicity, gentleness. The legacy of Father Wholey to this community is his own simple, quiet and genuine self." Rev. Mr. Sullivan has known Father Wholey ever since each came to Newton seventeen years ago, and a close personal friendship developed between them.

Benefited Community.

Rev. Edward M. Noyes, rector of the First Congregational Church, said of Father Wholey: "There are three reasons why we honor Father Wholey. The first because of his diligence in his own work, but he has not been so absorbed in his own work to which he was called that he has been unfaithful of other movements. Second, because he has not been so absorbed as not to be interested in things that are going on in the city, and the third reason is that spirit of helpful co-operation in anything for the good of this community wherein he has always been ready to take his part. We honor him because while he has been a good Catholic and loyal to its creeds, he has been ever ready to help this community, to make it more rich, more faithful, more useful."

Charles E. Kelsey, president of the Civic Federation of Newton, said: "The broad scope of Father Wholey's activities outside his own church has influenced the life of the community toward a more generous attitude of each church toward the other. We have been taking down the denominational fences around the church fields in Newton Centre, but in taking down the fences we do not take away the necessity of service, the lower the fences the greater the necessity of activity in service and of a self-sacrificing life. Our regrets at Father Wholey's leave-taking are sincere because he has not only been a good Catholic, but a patriotic American citizen and a broad-minded Christian gentleman."

Two More Receptions.

Though the reception to Father Wholey last week was announced as public, the greater number of those present were Protestants, as the Catholics of the parish will tender him a farewell reception to-morrow night in Bray's Hall, Newton Centre.

Following the death of the Rev. Thomas [illegible] P. R., pastor of St. Joseph's [illegible] Archbishop O'Connell [illegible] Father Wholey to assume the pastorate. The transfer was made a few weeks ago and Father Wholey, inspired by the testimony of his good works in Newton, has taken up his new duties with [illegible] their appreciation of his [illegible] pastor and to formally welcome [illegible] new work the [illegible] under the direction of the Rev. T. J. Fahey, senior curate of St. Joseph's Church, are completing their plans for the public reception to Father Wholey next Wednesday night in Intercolonial Hall, Dudley street.

Father Wholey, who as a curate was associated for four years with Archbishop [illegible] himself as curate at St. Joseph's [illegible] West End, was born in Lawrence, [illegible] 1854. After a few weeks his [illegible] moved to Boston [illegible] the South End and Father Wholey made his home there until he was eleven years old. He attended [illegible] Grammar School. His parents then returned to Lawrence and Father Wholey completed his early education in the schools of that city. He went to St. [illegible] College, Ellicott City, Md., for four years, after which he took a one year's course at Nicolet College, Nicolet, Canada.

Ordained in Canada.

He then entered the Grand Seminary at Montreal, and was ordained from there on January 22, 1877, by Archbishop Fabre [illegible] His first assignment was as [illegible] to the Very Rev. P. F. Lyndon, pastor of St. Joseph's Church, West End, on January 2, 1878. Vicar-General Lyndon died six months later and the Rev. [illegible] was pastor for six years. The Very Rev. William Byrne then succeeded to the pastorate and Father Wholey served under him for seven years. During four years of this time Archbishop O'Connell was also stationed at the church as a curate.

In November, 1890, Father Wholey was sent to Newton Centre to establish the Church of the Sacred Heart and that he succeeded well is testified by the honors that have come to him now on his departure.

He established various church societies, and was chaplain of the Newton Centre court, M. C. O. F., the local division of the Ancient Order of Hibernians and the Ladies Auxiliary of the same order. These many duties kept his time well occupied, but three months ago he was persuaded to accept the position of trustee of the Newton Hospital that was offered him. He always interested himself in public charities and the hospital work had a special appeal to him.

Through all the tributes paid him he has remained the same modest clergyman, unaffected and genial, and in the words of one Newton citizen, "Newton's loss is Boston's gain."

RESTAURANT MEN AT MERCY OF CHEFS

FEE SYSTEM IS IMPOSED

Many Stewards Profit by Repeated Hiring and Discharging of Help.

Fairly thousand hotel and restaurant workers of Boston are absolutely at the mercy of a powerful combination of leading chefs, who dictate who shall and who shall not be employed.

This is the charge of officials of the newly organized Order of Culinary Workers, who also declare that the "Chefs' Trust" seeks to kill their union.

"If a cook or a waiter at one of the leading hotels joins our union, he loses his job," says Paolo Contestabile, organizer of the new order. "The chefs have formed the International Culinary Club, with an employment bureau attached. If you want to be 'in right' and get a job, you have got to join this club and pay a fee. When you get the job, there is another fee."

Unites Independents.

"What is more, the chefs have the power to discharge whole crews of cooks, waiters and kitchen help and put others in their places."

Believing that thousands of his fellow workers in this city are oppressed by these kings of the kitchen, Mr. Contestabile, who is himself one of the best known chefs d'cuisine in the East, started the independent union, which supplies help without fees for all kinds of hotel, restaurant and house work.

Mr. Contestabile also declares that hotel and restaurant proprietors are mulcted out of thousands of dollars every year by stewards who purchase inferior and in many cases unsuitable foodstuffs.

"The stewards and the chefs are in league with each other," he asserts, "and rotten meats are dished up by clever cooks and served as delicacies to the unsuspecting public. If a cook refuses to prepare these supplies he is thrown out of his position by the chef. I have suffered myself because I wouldn't cook the meats bought by the stewards."

Chefs Get "Rake Off."

"The combination among the leading chefs, called the International Culinary Club, really amounts to a conspiracy against the freedom of employment in the hotels, restaurants and clubs. It is so powerful as to hold culinary workers in slavery. Why, the frightful servile conditions of these employes can hardly be believed except by one who has had experience in this line.

"The Chefs' Trust has done its utmost to prevent the organization of chefs, cooks and other culinary workers for their own protection, and thus there is the greatest difficulty in securing the ordinary rights by contracts that are common to all other classes of work in Boston.

"The International Culinary Club is nothing but an employment bureau, the members dictating who shall be hired. A fee is always exacted from the one employed. But unlike the licensed employment agencies, no fee is collected from the employer. This leads to the impression that the hotel owners must be ignorant of the conditions in their kitchens. The chefs are paid large salaries and are not supposed to get a take-off from the hiring of their subordinates.

"In numerous cases I have known of whole crews being hired by the chefs and soon discharged, new help being employed, these in turn being discharged and others being put in their places, the employes paying 8 per cent to the club run by the chefs themselves.

"Afraid to Protest."

"These evils are well known among the workers themselves, but they don't dare to protest, because of their lack of united action. This is the reason I urge all culinary workers to join our union, which also acts as a free employment bureau.

"The State has established a free employment bureau, too. So why should cooks and waiters have to march up to the International Culinary Club and pay tribute?

"The Boston American can do a great good to the thousands of workers who are being opressed by showing up the evils I speak of."

Mr. Contestabile also advocates the licensing of all employment bureaus by the State. They are now under the supervision of the Police Department.

Trained to cuisine work from boyhood by masters of the art in Italy, France and Britain, Contestabile has been in the service of European nobility and of well known hotels and clubs in America. He was chef in charge of the banquet menu at the dinner tendered by the Home Market Club to the then Vice-President Roosevelt in Mechanics Building on April 31, 1901. He has been chef, also, of the Nantasket Hotel, of the Oxford Club of Brooklyn and of the Turf and Field Club at Morris Park, N. Y. He worked with the famous chef Dominico Peretti of the Park Avenue Hotel, New York city, and has been employed at the Vendome and other Boston hostelries.

Told of Conditions.

Walter L. Sears, superintendent of the State Free Employment Bureau on Kneeland street, said yesterday to a Boston Sunday American reporter that he had received several complaints from hotel and restaurant employes about the working of the International Culinary Club, but that he had no supervision over any other employment agency.

"This concern does not differ from many other agencies which have a second class license," said Mr. Sears. "Personally, I have been long in favor of further regulation of the private intelligence offices. Very many complaints come into this office of abuses.

"There is really no need of any private employment agency in Boston, such as the International Culinary Club. We are amply able to supply all the help required by hotels and we make no charge for the service rendered to either employer or employe. Mr. Contestabile came to me and complained that hotel and restaurant help were practically compelled to register with the International if they wanted to get jobs, and that the favored members of the club showed partiality in the filling of vacancies.

Should Change Laws.

"I am informed that the police officials are powerless to remedy existing abuses. Several bills were introduced in the Legislature with a view to correcting these conditions, but only one, which prohibits fraudulent advertising, was passed, and that in amended form. The rest of these bills were stifled in the Legislature.

"They were along the lines of the laws in other States. We have no law in Massachusetts defining what an intelligence office is, and such a law ought to be enacted. A bond should be required of all these employment bureaus—a sufficient sum to insure their proper operation.

"In Missouri, Wisconsin, Michigan, Illinois and Iowa the State has supervision over all intelligence offices."

FOREMAN DROWNED IN THE SACO RIVER

Biddeford, Me., June 6.—Napoleon Couture, a night foreman in the York Mills at Saco, was drowned in the Saco River today. He was with his eleven-year-old son in a rowboat, which capsized. Couture was an experienced swimmer, but his foot was caught in the anchor rope and he was unable to free himself. The boy was rescued. Couture leaves a wife and nine children.

LOCATES BROTHER ABSENT 20 YEARS

WOMAN'S APPEAL HEEDED

Others Ask for Help in Finding Friends Who Have Disappeared.

Oren Crowell, missing twenty years, has been found through the Bureau for Tracing Lost Persons of the Boston Sunday American, and reunited with his brother and sister-in-law at Brooks Station, Mass. One week from the day the Tracer Bureau called public attention to Crowell's disappearance and the fact that his relatives had given up search for him the much-sought man was heard from.

His appearance at Brooks Station brought untold joy to the Crowell household. Tears of joy trickled down the bronzed cheeks of the two brothers as they met in fond embrace for the first time in almost a quarter of a century, and now they are whiling away the time recounting to each other their experiences since they last met before their separation.

It was Mrs. Effie Crowell, Oren's sister-in-law, who appealed to the Tracer Bureau after all other means of search had been exhausted. She did it unknown to her husband, too, therefore the husband's surprise when his brother walked in upon him brought double joy to Mrs. Crowell.

Was Given Up as Dead.

Oren Crowell, thirty-three, at one time was a restaurant waiter. Also he worked in Atlantic avenue, Boston. It was reported that at one time he had joined the navy. For years his brother thought he might be [illegible] but unable to obtain any clew to him, he finally gave him up as dead. The joy of the Crowells at the missing man's return can best be judged by the following letter of thanks to the Tracer Bureau from Mrs. Effie Crowell:

"To the Tracer Bureau of the Boston Sunday American—I wrote you a short time ago in regard to finding a brother of my husband, and just one week from the day you advertised for him I heard from him. We had tried to find him for twenty years, and you do not know how thankful we are, for as it was, it was not only for your kindness and your paper he might never have been found.

"Your paper will be in our home now in preference to another paper which we have taken for many years. Let me thank you again for your kindness and trouble. Best wishes to you.
Respectfully yours,
"MRS. EFFIE M. CROWELL."

Wants Nephew to Return.

Gustav Schaeffer, twenty-one, has been missing from No. 736 South street, Roslindale, since Tuesday, May 26, and the Tracer Bureau has been asked to help find him. He left after a trivial dispute with his aunt, Mrs. Regina Justhien, who now wants him to return. Schaeffer was a bookbinder and printer in Norwood and comes from Germany. Mrs. Justhien is his only relative in this country.

Miss Ellie Glavin has asked the Tracer Bureau to search for her uncle, John Broderick, who, she believes, may be living at present in New York. Broderick is a native of Ireland, the County Waterford, and came to America about twenty-five years ago. He lived at one time in Lynn. Miss Glavin, also of Ireland, came here expecting to find him, but on her arrival learned he had moved away. Miss Glavin is now at the home of Mrs. Johnson, Bar Harbor.

Schaffer, Gustav.—Missing from his home in Roslindale since May 26, disappeared after a dispute with his aunt; bookbinder and printer by trade, neat dresser, twenty-one years old. Information wanted by Mrs. Regina Justhien, No. 736 South street.

Broderick, John. When last heard of he was living in Salem, Mass., [illegible] country twenty-six or twenty-eight years ago; home in Ireland was in County Waterford; may now be located in New York City. Information wanted by his niece, Ellie Glavin, who has been here two years from Ireland, care of Mrs. Johnson, Villa Mars, Bar Harbor, Me.

Punch, James. Left County Cork, Ireland, [illegible] sixty-seven years of age when last heard from he was in Hartford, Conn. Information wanted by his sister, Mary Punch, No. 95 Lowell street, Manchester, N. H.

Coughlin, Mary Ann.—Was taken from Pawtucket, R. I., when a child and placed in an almshouse at Howard, R. I.; was taken from there on February 12, 1884, by an unknown woman. Information, dead or alive, wanted by her sister, Mrs. Nellie Trainor, No. 93 Newark street, Providence, R. I.

Green, Gustave Adolph.—Lived in Sweden and disappeared eleven years ago. Four years ago he was a sailor. Last known residence with a Larsen family, Water street, New York City. He has not been heard of since June, 1904. Information wanted by Miss Thelin Ohlsen, No. 11 Boyd street, Newton, Mass.

Gowans, George Archibald. Last heard from in [illegible] England. Was born in Liverpool on July 7, 1852. A tailor by trade. Information wanted by his sister, Mrs. Agnes Baker, No. 25 Schuyler street, West Manchester, N. H.

CATHOLIC SOCIETY FEDERATION URGED

With instructions to vote for affiliation with American Federation of Catholic Societies, the delegates who were elected at the convention of the Suffolk County Board of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, in South Boston, on Friday, to attend the biennial session of the national body in Indianapolis next month, will do their utmost to bring such a proposition about.

In the selection of the Rev. Philip J. O'Donnell, John J. Curley, John D. Fon, William Fleming and John J. Dailey, Boston Hibernians will have able representatives on the floor of the convention of the national body. All of them have had years of experience in the affairs of the organization. Fr. O'Donnell is chaplain of the order.

National President Matthew J. Cummings, who is to preside at the coming gathering, is also a Boston man. He will receive the united support of the Boston delegation in his fight for re-election to the office he now holds.

$25,000,000 TO IRRIGATE MEXICO

City of Mexico, June 6.—The bill providing for an appropriation of $25,000,000 for the initiation of irrigation works throughout the Republic has been passed by the Senate. This makes the measure a law.

Congress took another step in the protective tariff policy by raising the import duty on iron and steel one per cent. per 2-1 5 pounds.

PROHIBITIONISTS HIT OLD PARTIES

Auburn, Me., June 6.—At the county convention, held here to-day by the Prohibition party, resolutions were adopted denouncing the two great parties and urging all Christian people to stand by the principles of prohibition.

Star Who Created 'Merry Widow' Role May Become 'Grass Widow'

Ethel Jackson, Who Scored Tremendous Hit In Play Sues Her Husband For Divorce.

New York, June 6.—Ethel Jackson, who made name and fame for herself as the original "Merry Widow" in the title role of the play by that name last Winter, may indeed become a grass widow, for she is pressing her suit for divorce brought against her husband, John Frederick Zimmerman.

The greatest secrecy is maintained in the preliminaries of the suit and former Judge M. Linn Bruce, of No. 18 Wall street, who was [illegible] referee was not even told of his [illegible] with the case until after Justice Guy, in the order filed with the County Clerk, appointed him.

And so the "Merry Widow" is merry no longer as a wife and is trying to have the courts sever the marital ties which have bound her to Zimmerman since the Spring of 1902.

It is even declared that a pretty chorus girl is named in the suit which has been filed but which has not been placed on the public records. This girl in the case is said to be one of the beauties of Broadway but her name has been carefully withheld.

Both the "Merry Widow" and her husband, the well known theatrical manager, are as mum as clams when divorce is so much as mentioned to them.

"Know nothing at all about it," is all that can be got out of them by newspapermen.

About two months ago when it was rumored about that the divorce papers were actually to be filed, Mrs. Zimmerman said there was nothing to it and that she could not imagine where the report originated. She denied that there was any ground at all for the report.

She said that there had been no breach between herself and her husband and that although Mr. Zimmerman was even then at the French Lick Springs, his home was with her at the Hotel Seymour. Be that as it may, it now turns out that the couple never lived together after last March.

It was just about the time of the separation that Ethel Jackson was forced to retire from the role which had brought her such fame and the cast of "The Merry Widow" company at the New Amsterdam knew her again no more.

She fainted several times during performances. She had played the leading part, that of Sonia, a girl of the mythical Balkan principality, Marsovia, whose husband died and left her with his millions. She was then wooed and won by her former sweetheart, the Prince Danilo of her own country.

BLACKTHORN FROM OLD CLONTARF FIELD

HIGHLY PRIZED RELIC

Rev. Thomas I. Gasson, S. J., president of Boston College and rector of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, has been presented a black thorn stick which, in addition to an appearance that would bring delight to the heart of any son or daughter of Erin, has behind it a history that makes it one of the most prized relics on this side of the Atlantic.

Father Gasson, after long deliberating between the promptings of affection and sacrifice, finally gave the stick to the Ladies of St. Finbar. It will be disposed of at the field day to be held by the alumni, undergraduates and friends of Boston College at the grounds of the new Catholic University in Newton, Saturday, June 20. The funds raised by its disposal will be turned over to the new college fund.

Cut From Clontarf Field.

The back-thorn was cut on the field at Clontarf, where the great Brian the Brave met his death. It flourished at the time, fourteen centuries ago, when the archers of Brian waged their fight on the very field where the archers lashed themselves to stakes in the forefront of the battle line so that even in defeat their bodies might not be borne backward.

Every association of Irishmen in New England is interested in the stick, and a lively contest is on for its possession. It is doubtful if the next possessor of the cane will be moved by the spirit of sacrifice which prompted Father Gasson to relinquish it.

At the field day exercises Bourke Cockran of New York will be the principal orator. The orators' platform will be erected on a prominence overlooking almost the entire grounds and in the centre of a natural amphitheatre.

34 Booths and Tables.

About the grounds 34 booths and tables will be ranged representing the graduate classes of Boston College, the Guild of St. Botolph, the Guild of Loyola, the Ladies of St. Finbar, Boston College Alumni Association, Boston College Club, and several organizations connected with churches of Greater Boston.

OLD TIME BALLADS AT ROSS BENEFIT

Scotch, Irish and English ballads—songs dear to the heart of every native of the British Isles—will be among the notable features of the benefit concert to be given in Tremont Temple Wednesday night by the friends of Louis H. Ross.

For more than thirty years Mr. Ross was one of the best known music publishers in America, only lately retiring from business. He was at one time president of the Scots' Charitable Society. The present head of that organization, Alexander McGregor, is one of the leaders in organizing this entertainment.

The strain of "The Harp That Once Thro' Tara's Halls," "Annie Laurie," "Loch Lomond" and "Bonnie Bessie" will awaken patriotic echoes in the breasts of the Scotch and Irish present. The first named song will be played as a harp solo by Miss Barla, a celebrated artiste from San Francisco, never before heard in Boston.

A special feature will be an organ recital from 7.30 to 8 o'clock by J. Frank Donohoe.

IN RACE IN SWAMPS SHE WINS HER LAND

Crookston, Minn., June 6.—On a race to save her claim in the vicinity of Fram Postoffice, about twenty miles inland east of Middle River, Minn., and burdened with heavy grips, Miss Eva Johnson, the assistant postmistress at Vining, in Otter Tail County, plunged on foot through eight and one-half miles of the heaviest bogs of the north country, and arrived in time to appear in court and save her land. Contest had been brought against her by parties who were not acquainted with her location, and she was scheduled to appear at Fram Postoffice to answer the contest or it would have gone by default to the contestant.

Was a Suggestion That America Should Do a Noble Deed in Preserving Them.

BY NATIONAL SUBSCRIPTION

Special Cable to Boston American.

Dublin, June 6.—There has been so much misunderstanding concerning Richard Croker's so-called proposal to remove the imperilled ruins of Philae from Egypt to New York that an American correspondent called on the former Tammany chieftain and asked him for the facts.

"The facts are," said Mr. Croker, "that I did not make any 'proposal' at all; I simply made a suggestion. When I was in Egypt the most interesting and pathetic thing I saw was the submerged island of Philae with its ruins—among the finest in the world.

"As a result of the present barrage, or dyke, at Assouan, the waters of the Nile reservoir inundate the ruins to the depth of about ten feet. When the new barrage is completed, in three years, the ruins will be drowned forever, unless some one saves them.

What Croker Suggests.

"My suggestion is that the United States should be the savior. Of course, if New York will do this, so much the better. Let a committee be started. Let the Historical Society aid. Let there be a popular subscription. I should think that any one would be willing to give a nickel just to say they had helped bring these wonderful ruins to America. As a 'show' there is nothing in the world to compete with them."

Asked what help he would give, Mr. Croker said that he would subscribe willingly, but could not undertake to serve on any committee. The main cost, he said, would be that of transportation. The blocks of stone, properly numbered according to photographed plans, could easily be rafted to Alexandria and taken direct to New York.

No International Difficulties.

So far as any international question went, Mr. Croker held the opinion that the English government would assist most willingly in a transfer that would mean the preservation of the wonderful ruins.

The Island of Philae was originally only a heap of granite boulders, but the Ptolemys built retaining walls round, and the space inside these, filled up with Nile mud, became beautiful groves of palms and mimosas. On this rocky island marvellously beautiful palaces, temples—masterpieces of the architecture of that time—and pylons were built, the generally accepted date of their construction being 250 B. C.

To provide a water storage for Lower Egypt a dam was built across the Nile at Assouan, but the extent of the reservoir is to be increased by 1,000,000,000 cubic yards of water, and to do this the Assouan dam is to be raised twenty-three feet.

Improvement vs. Antiquity.

This elevation, it is calculated, will add 350,000 acres to the cultivable land of Egypt and add $15,000,000 to the annual revenue.

When the present dam is filled the floors of the temple of Philae are already under water; but the structures were underpinned when the dam was made and Professor Maspero believed the precious relics of Philae were safe. The new scheme, however, threatens the buildings more seriously, for, when the dam is filled, the level of the waters of the Nile will be about twenty-six feet of the level of the temple courtwards.

KAISER DISMISSES INVOLVED NOBLE

Was Compromised by Inquiry Into Prince Eulenburg's Perjury Case.

Berlin, June 6.—The Taegliche Rundschau to-day publishes a statement to the effect that the inquiry into the conduct of Prince Philip zu Eulenburg on perjury charges has compromised a great nobleman who until lately was a high official at court.

When the Emperor learned the particulars of the case he dismissed this nobleman from all his offices and requested him to leave his official residence.

15 GIRLS PERISH IN VIENNA FIRE

Vienna, June 6.—Their escape cut off by the rapidity with which the flames darted through the building, fifteen young girls met death to-day in a fire following an explosion which destroyed a celluloid factory. In the mad rush to escape scores were trampled upon and others were seriously burned. It is feared that many of the injured will die.

Seven girls were incinerated trying to rush through the blazing doorway, while the others met death trying to escape by the windows.

TITLED GRAND OPERA SINGER KILLS SELF

Milan, June 6.—Overcome with grief because he lost his beautiful voice on the eve of his entry into grand opera, where brilliant visions of success were promised him, Count Maxinoff, a Russian nobleman, yesterday took chloroform with suicidal intent.

His dead body was found in his apartments. Count Maxinoff had a fine tenor voice, and a high place in grand opera had been promised him.

MONTENEGRO AND SERVIA IN CLASH

Vienna, June 6.—Despite the denial of the official Servian news agency that the evidence adduced at Cettinje in the trial of a number of revolutionaries tending to connect Crown Prince George of Servia in a conspiracy against Montenegro is absolutely without foundation, the trial continues to compromise the Servian authorities.

Several of the conspirators have confirmed the previous testimony to the effect that bombs have been manufactured by Servian artillery officers at the direct instigation of Prince George, the intention being to use them against Montenegro in an effort to overthrow the existing regime there, and the Servian representative at Cettinje has been recalled to Belgrade on a three months' leave of absence, and a definite rupture of the relations between Servia and Montenegro is believed to be imminent.

SPAIN TO RESORT TO ALGECIRAS PACT

Objects to France's Attitude in Regard to Casablanca Clash.

Madrid, June 6.—At a meeting of the Cabinet the Prime Minister, Senor Maura, gave the King an account of the recent collision at Casablanca between French troops and Spanish police.

The Premier declared the moment had come for Spain to adopt a more energetic policy, since the punishment of those guilty of previous disorders proved to be fruitless as a preventive of their recurrence. This situation, he said, cannot be viewed with indifference.

Rumors are current in political circles that Spain probably will send a note to the Powers which signed the Algeciras treaty explaining that in spite of her desire to do so she is unable to carry out the policy proposed for the Moorish ports, and hinting that this inability is due to difficulties created by another Power.

This step will be a prelude to the withdrawal of its troops by the Spanish government if any further incidents take place. The language of the Spanish officials regarding France is always most courteous and diplomatic, but things have transpired which show that Moroccan affairs may lead to unpleasant friction between the two countries.

Athens, June 6.—The latest solution of just what the statue of Venus de Milo represented in its original form—before the arms were broken off—has been found in an unmutilated terra cotta statuette. This statuette, supposed to be an exact reproduction of the Venus de Milo, shows the woman with a mirror in her right hand, while with her left she gracefully holds to her none too securely fastened draperies.

The statuette was discovered at Monemvasia, in the province of Laconia. Other statuettes have made Venus appear as holding a shield, a spear, cymbals, drapery or bow and arrow. None of these, however, seem to bear the mark of genuineness possessed by the Monemvasia discovery. What could be more natural, artists are asking, than that Venus, the most beautiful woman of her time, should have had frequent recourse to her mirror.

TWO PLAGUE CASES AT PORT OF SPAIN

Port of Spain, Trinidad, June 6.—There have been two cases of bubonic plague here, both of which proved fatal. Every precaution is being taken to prevent a recurrence of the disease.

LORD TWEEDMOUTH, CRAZED, REVEALED NAVY SECRETS

DECLARED TO BE LUNATIC

Special Cable to Boston American.

London, June 6.—It is learned that Lord Tweedmouth's mental breakdown while serious, is not hopeless. Lord Tweedmouth's mental decline dates from the humiliation thrust upon him by the disclosure of the fact that the Kaiser and he had been exchanging letters about the condition of the British navy while Tweedmouth was First Lord of the Admiralty.

His admission that he and the Kaiser had been corresponding on British navy affairs caused his retirement from his exalted position and soon after his retirement his friends noticed his mind breaking down.

Sang "I'm to Be Queen of the May"

High officials state that while not wholly himself Lord Tweedmouth communicated to the Kaiser the contents of some of the most secret documents connected with British naval plans and policies.

It is stated that Tweedmouth's insanity was first discovered by Premier Asquith. Tweedmouth burst into Asquith's office one day and began dancing and singing 'I'm to be Queen of the May, I'm to be married to-day.' Asquith promptly called in a physician. It was found that Tweedmouth was a lunatic.

He is now in the country attended by two nurses. London papers politely style his lordship's insanity nervous prostration.

Lord Tweedmouth married the daughter of the seventh Duke of Marlborough and is connected with the highest aristocracy of the land.

Stirs Hate for Germany.

His sister, Countess Aberdeen, the wife of the Viceroy of Ireland, came to London this week to take charge of the unfortunate nobleman. Tweedmouth has been peculiarly unfortunate recently. Within five years he lost his inherited fortune, including his splendid London mansion. When he was appointed First Lord of the Admiralty he needed the salary badly.

If it is confirmed and becomes public that Tweedmouth, while demented, communicated valuable naval secrets to Germany there will be another outburst of popular clamor against Germany, which is cordially disliked by the masses of Englishmen. The latter hate Germans as they are a progressive race and are rapidly annexing some of England's commerce and profitable sources of commercial revenue.

'SEX, NOT ABILITY, DETERMINES WAGES'

Paris, June 6.—After investigating Paris wage scales, Kate Schirmacher, famous woman's rights advocate and lawyer, says that sex counts with employers, not the amount of work or ability, and woman is always singled out to receive at least thirty per cent. less wages than man for the same work.

Kate Schirmacher visited factories and shops and talked with day laborers and "piece workers." It was always the same story; the male worker earned considerably more than his woman colleague, though the latter might be more efficient, more willing, more conscientious.

"Take the case of a famous chocolate factory," says Miss Schirmacher. "Men and women are employed side by side to run the same kind of machine. Both machines produce the same quantity and quality of goods. Yet the man receives 90 cents, the woman 50 cents, per day.

"At a sugar factory beets are harvested, men and women handling pitchforks with equal vigor. The men receive 80 cents, the women half as much.

"The employers' excuse is that men have families to look after. What about the women with babies and a sick, or lazy, husband at home?"

FRENCH SLAIN WITH THEIR OWN RIFLES

Paris, June 6.—The French soldiers who have been shot in Morocco were killed or wounded by French bullets, shot from French rifles bearing the stamp of the government manufacture. Scores of Lebel rifles were taken from the dead hands of the Moroccan enemies.

There was the usual outcry of treason and the war office ordered an investigation. It was discovered that certain French dealers in guns and rifles had shipped [illegible] quantities of them, not only into Morocco, but into all parts of Africa. These dealers, when questioned, declared they had bought them at the regular government sales of old materials of war, had repaired them and sold them again in whatever market offered. Every year the government sells off thousands of rifles, revolvers and other weapons which have been more or less deteriorated by use.

YOUNG AMERICAN GIRL WINS PRAISE IN PARIS

Daughter of Secretary Wilson Makes Musical Debut.

Paris, June 6.—The critics to-day speak in praise of the musical debut of Miss Flora Wilson, pupil of Jean Delteszke, who appeared last night at a concert in the Gixeau [illegible] Gardens.

American Exodus Is Heartbreaking to London's Hotel Men

London, June 6.—The return in numbers of Americans from London to the States in the last few weeks has been heartbreaking to the West End hotels. Outgoing boats have been carrying away scores of well known people like Mrs. Nicholas Brown and her immensely wealthy baby, R. C. Cooper of Boston, F. R. Appleton and family of New York, Amory A. Lawrence of Boston, Mr. and Mrs. Algernon B. Roberts of Philadelphia, Mr. and Mrs. George Coe Scott of New York, Mr. and Mrs. Webster and E. L. Welsh of Philadelphia and his family.

Most of these people have spent the Winter along the Riviera, then when the season ended there motored by easy stages through Italy and France to Paris, finishing with a short stay in London.

One hotel manager speaking to an American reporter said: "I notice a tendency growing greater each year for wealthy Americans to shorten their London stay. [illegible] London society is not [illegible] more and more in the [illegible] of spending the Summer at their beautiful places in the American mountains or at the lakes and seashore."

20 Japs Marooned for 18 Months Saved as Death Was Near

Tokio, June 6.—A thrilling rescue of twenty Japanese marooned on Wake Island was effected by the Brazilian training ship, the Benjamin Constant, which has just arrived at Yokohama.

Passing Wake Island Captain Pereira discovered a flag of distress. The dangerous coast prevented him from sending a boat, but he finally succeeded in passing a rope ashore after three days' hard work and all the men were rescued.

They proved to be survivors of a party which landed there in December, 1906, to search for albatross. They had a year's provisions, but these were finally exhausted. Wake Island is frequently almost wholly submerged. Sixteen of the men died. For months the survivors subsisted on fish only. When found they were without clothes and in a pitiable condition.

London, June 6.—A robbery 3,500 years old has been unearthed by Theodore Davis, of Newport, R. I., during his excavations in Egypt.

Mr. Davis, who is now in London, is one of the best known American Egyptologists. He was fortunate in March to discover the tomb of Hor-em-heb, the last king of the eighteenth dynasty. The tomb was reached by cutting through 300 feet of solid rock. It was then that Mr. Davis, by observation and deduction, discovered indisputable evidence that the tomb had been robbed 3,500 years ago.

Geraldine Farrar Tells of Needs of Young Singers Here

America Should Have Some Official Outlet for Her Vocalists, She Declares.

Paris, June 6.—"Some recognized official outlet for the young singer is the great need in America to-day," said Miss Geraldine Farrar during her recent visit to this city.

Miss Farrar made a hurried trip to Paris to appear in a few special performances as Zephyrine, a circus performer, in "Le Clown," a musical novel by that wealthy amateur, Comte de Camondo.

"In America," said Miss Farrar, "there is no intermediate house between the school of music and big opera. I think it might be found in stock companies. We have all the fundamental elements for a splendid education, perhaps as good as over here, but the mistake is that the student comes to Europe before he is ready for it."

DREYFUS SHOOTING MYSTERY BAFFLES PARIS POLICE

LOCATE NO WEAPON

Special Cable to Boston American.

Paris, June 6.—The shooting of Major Alfred Dreyfus by Louis Gregori at the [illegible] ceremonies in the Pantheon, Thursday, has developed into a mystery which has given rise to many rumors and which baffles the shrewdest detectives and secret [illegible] of France.

While nothing tangible has yet been unearthed by the police to indicate that Gregori was acting as the agent of a [illegible] of Nationalists, they are still at [illegible] along this line. The belief is [illegible], however, that Gregori acted alone in his individual capacity.

Gregori has been so irrational since his attempt at assassination that his friends will ask for a commission to examine into his sanity.

[illegible], despite minute probing, to locate the bullet in the arm of Major Dreyfus, the attending physicians to-day united in the opinion that it had been ejected by [illegible] of the muscles.

Friends of Gregori declared to-day that the assailant had evidently used waxen [illegible], which fired at twenty paces, produce [illegible] of the skin, but do not [illegible]. Waxen bullets were invented [illegible] years ago, and have been used to a great extent in duelling.

The Nationalists are still rather defiant, but are receiving scant consideration from the public. M. Maurras and M. Daudet, of L'Action Francaise, the Nationalist organ, seem to be greatly disappointed that their story, that a man called on them Wednesday and offered to kill Dreyfus is not being taken seriously. The police say these two are making a cheap attempt to secure notoriety.

"Dupes Incited to Crime."

Even those papers which doubted the wisdom of placing Zola's ashes in the Pantheon think that the shooting of Major Dreyfus consolidated the Republican sentiment, and they evidently desire to see the incident die as quickly as possible. Any attempt to reopen the old Dreyfus issue at the trial of Gregori, they point out, can easily be frustrated as being plainly [illegible].

M. de Pressense, Socialist member of the Chamber of Deputies, in a speech at Lyons to-day referred to the shooting in the following words: "Is the past again confronting us? Are not those who believe nationalism dead deceived? The brutal outrage in the Pantheon proved again, as has been proved before, that the Nationalists are not only preaching their nefarious sophistries, but inciting their dupes to violence and crime."

'MAE WOOD LETTER FORGERY'--MILLER

"Statement Involving Loeb Fake," He Declares in Paris.

Special Cable to Boston American.

Paris, June 6.—J. Martin Miller was having a good time in Paris until the American newspapers arrived with accounts of the Mae Wood case, in which a statement signed with his name was produced. Since then Mr. Miller has spent most of his time branding the document as a most vicious forgery and malignant fabrication. In addition, he has sued newspapers published in London and Paris for libel for publication of the reports of the case. He also wants Mae Wood indicted for forging his signature.

"She never had either a written or verbal statement from me involving Loeb or any one else. Some five years ago she came to my office in Washington asking me to print a sensational article about Senator Platt. I refused and excluded her from my office. Then she swore vengeance."

Mr. Miller says when he was appointed consul to Rheims this same story came up and he personally asked Mr. Roosevelt to investigate. This was done and he now asks the President to make public the results of that investigation.

AMERICA HAS LOST TRADE OF CHEFOO

Decline in One Year From $4,000,000 to $400,000, Says Consul Fowler.

London, June 6.—"American trade in Chefoo has decreased in one year from $4,000,000 to $400,000," said John Fowler, the American Consul at that port, who is now in London en route to the United States to the American.

"This ninety per cent. loss is not peculiar to my consular district, but is typical of the whole of China. America is not the only sufferer—the other nations, Germany and England, have suffered equally. In Chefoo during the last year fifty per cent. of the European and American business firms have shut up shop and quit business.

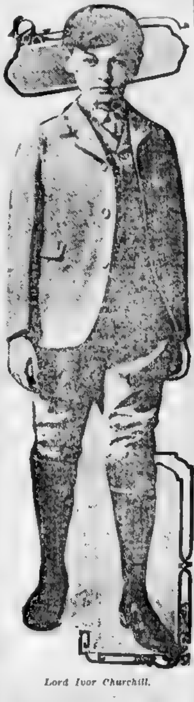
"To what cause or causes can this decrease be attributed? Frankly, I don't know. There are many reasons advanced. Some who are anti-Japanese say the Japanese have captured the trade; others claim that following the Russo-Japanese peace the Chinese market was overstocked.

"There is no doubt but what the Japanese are an alert, active business people. Japanese traders are penetrating every corner of the Chinese Empire selling their goods."

FRENCH TRAITOR'S APPEAL DENIED

Paris, June 6.—The appeal of Ullmo, formerly a naval officer, who was condemned to life imprisonment for negotiating to sell French naval secrets to a foreign power, against his conviction was to-day denied. The traitor will be publicly degraded within a week.

SAD AFFLICTION OF MARLBOROUGHS' SON MAY REUNITE PARENTS



Lord Ivor Churchill.

FEAR FOR HEALTH OF STRICKEN BOY

Special Cable to Boston American.

London, June 6.—Both the Duke and Duchess of Marlborough are very anxious about the health of their second son, Lord Ivor Churchill, and there are those who say that this common anxiety may be the cause of reuniting the divided parents.

As a matter [illegible] neither of the Marlborough boys [illegible] to be very robust, but the second [illegible] Lord Ivor, will probably have to spend all his Winters abroad for some years to come. His father, whose best characteristic perhaps is his interest in his sons, is [illegible] worried about the boy, whose ill [illegible] with adenoids and has now developed into lung trouble.

The eldest boy, Lord Blandford, has entered a preparatory college at Brighton, where the sea air will, it is expected, sufficiently strengthen him for entering Eton College.

FRENCHMAN FINDS CURE FOR RABIES

Even Advanced Cases Will Give Way to System, He Declares.

Paris, June 6.—The cure of rabies even in advanced stages will be possible if the experiments that are being conducted by Dr. Auguste Marie bear their promised fruit. Dr. Marie will not describe his cure until it has first appeared in some recognized medical journal, but it is known that by his method, which has the Pasteur treatment as its basis, immunity against the spread of the disease is obtained much more quickly than in the old method.

Such cases as that which recently caused the death of William H. Marsh, the Brooklyn manufacturer, it is announced, will be amenable to the new treatment.

AMERICANS SHINE AT LONDON FETES

Special Cable to Boston American.

London, June 6.—Americans in society have spent a busy week. With the Derby, the Oaks and the vacation festivities at the aristocratic Eton school, they've been much out-doors, while there have been dinners nightly.

Mrs. Marshall Field went to Eton to see her boys. She and Mrs. Potter Palmer and Mrs. Astor were among the handsomest women in the ancient quadrangle of the historic school. On Wednesday Mrs. Palmer gave a splendid dinner at Hampton house in honor of Miss Jean Reid and her fiance.

BIG WAR FLEET GUARDS KING EDWARD ON HIS TRIP.

WHILE PARTY IS AT REVAL

British Destroyers Will Also Protect Royal Yachts During Fetes.

Port Victoria, Eng., June 6.—Realizing that any demonstration made against King Edward by Russian subjects during his trip to Reval for a visit with Emperor Nicholas would be a serious blot on the empire, the Czar is taking every precaution to insure the absolute safety of the voyage. The King, Queen Alexandra and Princess Victoria arrived at Port Victoria at 11 o'clock last night and boarded the royal yacht, which steamed at 4 o'clock this morning.

Yachts Well Guarded.

While at Reval no vessel will be allowed within 1,500 feet of the royal yachts.

If any vessel wishes to send a boat ashore it must first signal a torpedo boat, which will escort it to the cruiser Asia, headquarters, where the boat's occupants will be searched before being allowed to land. Similar regulations will be taken with all outgoing vessels.

King Edward is expected to arrive in Reval Tuesday. The program is for him to lunch with the Czar aboard the Polar Star Tuesday and to dine aboard the Standart Wednesday. There will also be festivities on board the new British royal yacht Alexandra on Wednesday.

The King's party will start home Wednesday night.

"NO NEW ALLIANCE POSSIBLE AT PRESENT," SAYS RUSSIAN ORGAN

St. Petersburg, June 6.—The effects of King Edward's forthcoming visit to Russia are being keenly canvassed in political circles here, principally with regard to its relation to Germany, against which the broad trend of the King's recent policies is supposed to run. Serious politicians are of the opinion that King Edward's statesmanship has now to face the hardest test, the initiating of more intimate relations with Russia, on whose soil he will be the first English king to set foot. The task, however, will be facilitated by the political necessities and mutual advantages will be equally appreciated by both sides.

Take Up Morocco Trouble.

Public opinion here is ready to meet England more than half way. All political parties, except the extreme reactionaries, look upon an Anglo-Russian accord as natural to the completion of the chain of Franco-Russian and Anglo-French ties.

Matters to be discussed at the meeting between King Edward and Emperor Nicholas will take a wide range, and particular attention will be given to questions relating to Morocco and Macedonia. The imminence of Austrian succession also forces to the foreground the question of Central Europe, in which Russia is vitally interested.

An agent in favor of an Anglo-Russian understanding has been the anti-German sentiment which has been artificially stimulated by the Slavic union in St. Petersburg.

"No New Pact Possible."

Considerable significance is attached here to an obviously inspired article published in the official Rossia, which, while speaking warmly in favor of the meeting between King Edward and Emperor Nicholas, declares that the suggestion of any new grouping of the powers at the present time is impossible. This article blames a number of the newspapers of Russia for the markedly anti-German tendency of recent comment on King Edward's approaching visit.

"While Russia prizes her friendly relations with all powers, and especially with her nearest neighbor, Germany, to whom she is united by many ancient ties," says the Rossia, "she rejects the idea of any new alliance at the present time as purposeless.

"The rapprochement between Russia and Great Britain," the paper continues, "which is confirmed by the coming visit of King Edward, does not imply a weakening of our ancient and friendly relations with our neighbor."

London, June 6.—King Edward has started on his journey to Reval, where he will meet the Czar on Friday night. His majesty's visit to the sanguinary autocrat of all the Russias is not popular with the masses of England and no amount of editorial arguments in the Tory press can make it popular. The King's departure, however, relieves many worried courtiers and an army of servants at Buckingham Palace, for the King has been in bad temper since President Fallieres' visit and he has taken little pains to conceal it.

His Majesty dislikes criticism, and the outspoken Radical comment in Parliament on his proposed visit to the Czar angered him, as did the Times criticism of the premature publication of the announcement of Premier Campbell-Bannerman's resignation and the appointment of Asquith.

Suffering From Indigestion.

The [illegible], it seems, was due to incautious [illegible] by the Dowager Duchess of Manchester at the King's table, who had heard the news of Campbell-Bannerman's resignation and the appointment of the latter's successor while sitting at the King's dinner table, and she gossiped about it afterwards.

On Thursday night the King attended Lord Londesborough's garden party in Regent Park and when His Majesty started for home he found it was raining heavily. His carriage was not at the door and the King swore volubly and gutturally, not caring who heard him. It is gossiped in London that the King's ill temper has been superinduced by indigestion.

His Majesty, despite the orders of his physician, is again eating too much and smoking too much. The Queen's amiability, however, helps to ameliorate the unhappy lot of the servants of Buckingham Palace, upon whom the King vents his anger.

Grey's Attitude Resented.

Sir Edward's lofty attitude toward the Radical Liberals is deeply resented. They say he has a too high opinion of himself and demand to know why he never appears in the House of Commons except when the King needs defending.

SOCIETY UPHOLDS MEMBER

By Marquis de Castellane.

Marquis Castellane

PARIS, June 6.—The path of Ambassadors is not always strewn with roses. Prince Radolin, envoy extraordinary of His Majesty William II. to the French Republic, is discovering the truth of this trite saying to his own great discomfort.

Although his name seems to indicate a German origin, Prince Radolin is a Pole. His real name is Radolinski, but he long ago suppressed the "ski." It is easy to understand that his compatriots are none too pleased at this formal denial of patriotism. Whenever they had an occasion to express their indignation, they do not hesitate to do so. This indignation was specially keen just after Chancellor von Bue'ow forced the abominable law of spoliation from the German House of Lords. The Poles in Paris, feeling more than usually bitter over this incident, decided to humiliate the German Ambassador in Paris.

The occasion soon presented itself. The Prince appeared at a select Parisian club composed principally of Poles. With him were certain members of the Embassy. Prince Radolin undertook to present one of his attaches, a certain Mr. Hurst. The club members refused to recognize the unfortunate attache on the ground of his sponsor. Consternation, stupor reigned supreme in the Prince's party. Never has such an insult been offered to an ambassador. They protested loudly enough. But nothing could be done. The attache had to suffer for his chief's [illegible]. Society here seems inclined to side with the club members.

Celebrated Writer Gone.

Italy has just lost one of her most celebrated writers. There was never any fluctuation in De Amici's popularity. However, the critics never voiced his praise so unreservedly as did the public. And in this they did not err, for although his works were successful they lacked certain qualities that go to make up a great novelist. Like Georges Ohnet in France, he knew just how to move the public with a touch of sentimentality, a trifle vulgar, but ever contagious.

Another great cause of De Amicis' popularity was that he always made a gentle appeal to his countrymen's patriotism. His first volume (Military Sketches) had an enormous success. It appeared just after the Risorgamento wars. The National Army had became the symbol of Italy's recently acquired independence. Later he gave his attention more to social questions. Socialism had found its way into Italy and had made rapid strides. Ermondo de Amicis adopted this new cult with ardor and never wavered in loyalty until his death. He was an enthusiast with the heart open for each passing ideal.

But counterbalancing his enthusiasm, his devotion to ideals there was through his books a certain undercurrent of languor, of inertia, of weakness and this defect will eventually rob him of all claim to greatness.

Wilhelm's Tact.

Every one is aware that Wilhelm II. is especially conspicuous for his tact. He has given a new proof of it lately when he went to Vienna, accompanied by a general staff of German princelings, to offer his congratulations to the Emperor Francis Joseph upon his jubilee after fifty years of reign.

One morning the old monarch learned that Wilhelm II. had given orders for two regiments of his guards to be sent on to Vienna, to march in parade on the great day.

There was great excitement in Austrian military circles when the news was known. Evidently Wilhelm II. intended to treat Austria as though she were a vassal of the German empire or did he merely with his famous tact—wish to recall to the Austrians the fact that Prussian soldiers had more than once overrun their territory? The aged Francis Joseph was angriest of all. He sent a tart message, declining to receive the two chosen regiments, and waited to see what would happen. Nothing happened. The Kaiser Wilhelm came with his princelings, but left his troops at home.

QUEEN TO BE GIVEN THE SANDRINGHAM

London, June 6.—Queen Alexandra will have a residence of her own in the event of King Edward leaving her a widow. It has just become known that the King has settled, or is about to settle, Sandringham House, which is his private property, upon the Queen. In like manner it is believed, Barton Manor, on the Isle of Wight, is to be settled upon Princess Victoria, King Edward's unmarried daughter.

Princess Beatrice lives on that island in a charming residence, which was settled upon her by her mother, Queen Victoria, who gave her the sinecure appointment of Governor of the Isle of Wight.

PROVES MARRIED MEN OUTLIVE BACHELORS

Vienna, June 6.—The result of investigations in hospitals, sanitariums and medical reports in German speaking countries reaffirm the old truth that married men outlive bachelors.

The latter are subject to from twenty to forty per cent. more days of ill health and the great majority of these suffer from the stomach and the throat, while the percentage of insane bachelors is considerably larger than that of married men.

MISSIONARIES TO LAPLAND

Stockholm, June 6.—Several woman missionaries have started for Lapland to hunt up nomadic tribes during the Summer and to preach to the adults and teach the young.

GEMS STOLEN FROM CASTLE RETURNED MYSTERIOUSLY

REDEEMED BY A NOBLEMAN

Special Cable to Sunday American.

London, June 6.—Though Scotland Yard disclaims any knowledge of the transaction, and though Chief Secretary Birrell has diplomatically denied it in Parliament it can be stated as a fact that the stolen regalia jewels are back in Dublin Castle.

The jewels, whose theft from the office of the Ulster King of Arms in Dublin Castle was discovered in July, 1907, have been released from a pawn shop in London for over $90,000; their value has been set down at $300,000, and have been taken to Ireland by the senior member of the firm of pawnbrokers.

Nobiman Redeems Gems.

It is understood that the money for the release of the stolen regalia was put up by a newly created nobleman who has been given a household berth for the accommodation.

It was hoped that this transaction would definitely close the unhappy and mysterious affair. To the contrary, it seems to have given it new life, and now an Irish barrister, a kinsman of Sir Arthur Vicars, has applied to a magistrate for an arraignment of the Viceroy and Chief Secretary of Ireland on the charge of compounding a felony. Of course, the magistrate refuses to give the barrister a hearing, and the English papers do not even give his name.

Would Vindicate Kinsman.

Pierce O'Mahony, the half brother of Sir Arthur Vicars, has never faltered in his belief that his kinsman, in addition to having been dismissed for negligence in office, has been allowed to lie under a stigma of disgraceful and sordid conduct, and, further, that he has been made a scapegoat to shield a lot of disreputables who have brought shame to Dublin Castle circles.

Mr. O'Mahony declares that in the hubbub caused over the theft of the jewels Chief Secretary Birrell wrote to the King reporting upon the conditions and included Sir Arthur Vicars in the list of malcontents. He asked His Majesty for power to clear out the whole lot and reconstitute the office. Afterwards Birrell discovered that he had made a mistake with regard to Sir Arthur, but would not acknowledge the fact to the King. He asked Vicars to resign and got a refusal. Then he got the Under Secretary for Ireland to have a chat with Sir Arthur's solicitor, which was to be private and confidential. The object of the interview was to induce the solicitor to advise Vicars to go out. The plan did not work. Then, in despair, the Chief Secretary offered Vicars a pension if he would go, but Pierce O'Mahony refused to allow his half brother to take the bribe and insisted upon fighting the case.

Inspector a True Sleuth.

Then came the star chamber inquiry to decide whether Sir Arthur had been "negligent," and his dismissal followed.

Now it is declared that after the robbery a London police inspector visited Dublin Castle and found that a person who had access to Sir Arthur's keys had taken a wax impression of the key of the safe in which the jewels were kept. The inspector found out also that about the time of the robbery the man in question was in need of a very substantial sum of money, and the police theory was that the jewels were pawned for a loan in the hope that a certain financial deal would enable the culprit to redeem the jewels. Following this theory the inspector announced that he would locate both jewels and culprit, but the too clever policeman was ordered to halt.

Events have justified the inspector.

THEATRES OF PARIS HAVE A BIG SEASON

Paris, June 6.—Paris theatres did a record business in 1907. Interesting figures just published show that the opera houses, theatres and music halls of Paris took more money last year than in any previous year of the present century—that is, since the boom year of the 1900 exposition.

Opera Comique	[illegible] 400
Comedie Francaise	438,800
Theatre Sarah Bernhardt	283,100
Gaiete	228,400
Porte St. Martin	200,000
Chatelet	171,200
Folies Bergeres	225,000
Moulin Rouge	201,200
Olympia	200,000

"POKE BONNET" BACK IN LONDON

London, June 6.—The "coalscuttle" or "poke" bonnet of sixty years ago has been revived by fashionable women. Strangely enough, they are worn only on automobile trips, for they are pronounced to be the best type of headgear for motoring and to have superseded the motor veil.

The bonnet fits closely over the back of the head, protecting the back hair and forming an oval frame for the face which is very becoming. It is trimmed with a quilting of ribbon under the edge, with a rosette at each side, and is tied by wide ribbons under the chin. A veil is attached to the bonnet.

At present, being the latest fashion, the new automobile bonnet costs about $30. In miniature form the poke bonnet is likely to be worn generally by small children this season.

COUNT WEDEL FLEES FROM HARDEN TRIAL

Case Against Editor Who Revealed "Round Table" Intrigues Collapses.

Berlin, June 6.—What is believed to be the utter collapse of the retrial of Maximillian Harden, the German editor charged with libel by Count Kuno von Moltke, is foreshadowed in the disappearance of Count Edgar Wedel, court chamberlain of the late Empress Victoria. Wedel was counted on as a strong witness for Count Philip Zu Eulenburg in the perjury trial that was to have grown out of his testimony at the first Harden trial.

Since the Harden case was remanded for trial by the Supreme Court public feeling has turned almost wholly toward Harden and against Von Moltke and Zu Eulenburg and the other members of the "Round Table" who were so severely arraigned by Harden in his paper, Die Zukunft, for their immorality and political intrigues.

The fact that Wedel has found it convenient to take himself to parts unknown is said to be due to his fear at going through another trial, owing to the changed state of public opinion. Other witnesses are considering the advisability of such a course, and when Harden's retrial is called it is probable that many of the important witnesses against him at the former trial will be missing.

SWISS INSURANCE SCHEME SPREADS

Brussels, June 6.—The Swiss plan of securing old age insurance for young people in their teens is being adopted by tens of thousands of parents and children.

The premium amounts to 2 cents per day from the day of birth up to the sixteenth year. This secures an old age insurance of $153.20 per annum after the sixtieth birthday. If the child dies a certain percentage of the premiums is returned.

TOLSTOI'S GRANDSON TO OPEN THEATRE

St. Petersburg, June 6.—In December next the Imperial Chamberlain, Count Chittowo, a grandson of Leo Tolstoi, will open a new theatre with a stock company, the members of which are ladies and gentlemen of our highest society circles.

The theatre will be known as "Komedi Jn" and there will be but one performance per week. Count Chittowo's main object is to show "how ladies and gentlemen should be impersonated on the stage."

"THAW'S VANITY IS SIGN OF INSANITY"

French Psychological Review Comments on the Slayer of Stanford White.

Paris, June 6.—La Revue de Psychiatrie publishes an interesting essay demonstrating, with reference to Harry Thaw, that "extraordinary vanity, self-exaltation combined with contempt for others, is a sign of the beginning of mental disease and often leads to it.

"While the victims of moral insanity are often persons with well developed intelligence, those given to extraordinary vanity and love of self are, as a rule, poor, illogical thinkers, defying all efforts at education. Their main characteristics are hypersensitiveness as far as their own person is concerned and utter lack of feeling as to others, wife, child, friend or stranger. Medical science knows of cases where an extraordinary vain man cried with annoyance at finding his tobacco pouch empty, while remaining cold and untouched at the news of an accident that killed both his parents."

KAISER EATS ONLY THREE MEALS A DAY

The Emperor eats three meals daily. His breakfast, taken at 8 a. m., consists of baked fish, beefsteak or cutlets, a vegetable and mashed potatoes, hot rolls and toast, tea or coffee.

Luncheon, served at 1:30, includes soup, fish, meat and vegetables, a roast with salad and sweet fruit, ice cream or pudding and cheese rolls.

Dinner, at 6 o'clock or half past 6, includes two kinds of soup, two kinds of fish, two kinds of roast, two kinds of poultry or game. The Kaiser prefers thick soups. Trout and filet de sole are his favorite fish. He usually drinks a light Rhine wine with his dinner, but "washes down the soup," as he calls the process, with a large glass of German champagne.

Lowenbrau, a Bavarian beer, is in order after dinner. He likes pork, but etiquette forbids its use on the royal table. So he must needs go to one of the army casinos or clubs for a pork chop.

PRUSSIA TO RAISE PAY OF TEACHERS

Berlin, June 6.—The Government of Prussia has at last consented to raise the salaries of school teachers. American teachers will be particularly interested in the proposed new scale of salaries.

The bill to be placed before the Diet, divides the public teachers into four classes according to the number of inhabitants of the towns where they serve; the smaller the community the lower the salary. Here is the proposed scale:

Classes.	Male teachers. Per year.	Female teachers. Per year.
First	$337.50	$262.50
Second	337.50 to $350	262.50 to $275
Third	350 to 362.50	275 to 287.50
Fourth	362.50 to 412.50	287.50 to 337.50

The increase will commence after three years' successful service. The lowest paid male teacher will then receive 1,500 marks ($375) per annum, and the lowest paid female teacher 1,270 marks ($317.50).

COLLEGIAN SPARS AND BREAKS JAW

Some of Lady Conyngham's Gifts from George IV. Bid In at Recent Sale.

KING EDWARD LOSES THEM

He Wanted to Replace Bronzes and Famous Crystals in Windsor Castle Museum.

London, June 6.—Some of the choicest lots from the Marchioness of Conyngham's sale—rare bronzes and precious rock crystal beakers—will find their way to America; and they will take with them the breath of an ancient scandal.

Among the treasures in the collection were some that had once been in the royal collection at Windsor Castle; these were among the gifts showered upon a former Lady Conyngham by George IV., whose favorite she was.

King Edward, it is said, wished to buy some of the lots in order to replace them in the royal collection, where they rightly belonged, but they were bought up eagerly by collectors who were able to bid higher than His Majesty.

Lady Conyngham (the Georgian marchioness) is the subject of many stories in the Greville Memoirs and other candid and entertaining works dealing with the court history of that period. She maintained the position of reigning favorite with much outward dignity and discretion, for George was then an elderly and corpulent king, not the wild and gallant young prince who broke the heart of poor Mary Robinson ("Perdita").

They never appeared together in public, and even inside the palace Lady Conyngham was "chaperoned" by her daughter. Nevertheless, her will was all powerful at court, and her orders were obeyed as if they were commands of the King.

The beautiful Marchioness wore the most splendid jewels of any woman at court, and far outshone the royal princesses. At a grand entertainment at Devonshire House she made herself conspicuous by wearing in her headdress a magnificent sapphire, one of the crown jewels, which everybody recognised as a Stuart heirloom that had been given by Cardinal York to the King.

There was a curious system by which the Conyngham household was, as it were, subsidized by the King. His Majesty provided all the servants, while dinners prepared in the royal kitchens were actually conveyed to the Conyngham residence. Lady Conyngham, of course, had the use of horses and carriages from the royal stables.

In short, Lady Conyngham was as powerful an influence at George IV.'s court as Mme. de Maintenon was at that of Louis XIV. She was the moving spirit of all the backstairs intrigues of that rather disreputable reign. The King, in fact, just had to do whatever this beautiful, clever and unscrupulous woman persuaded him was expedient.

FRANCE PLANS TO STOP DECADENCE

Deputy Proposes Bill With Object of Encouraging Larger Families.

Paris, June 6.—"That the French nation may not die out," Deputy Messimy, of the Department of the Seine, proposes the following measure:

"1st. No direct taxes shall be imposed on families having more than three living children.

"2d. The State must bend every effort to stop the mortality among small babies and children, where mortality may be due to the ignorance or poverty of the parents. It is estimated that sixty thousand to eighty thousand babies could be saved annually in France if the State took the necessary preventive measures. To this end the existing maternity homes, babies' asylums, etc., must be put on a more hygienic basis and new ones must be established all over France.

"3d. Like the United States, we must make it easy for foreigners permanently residing here to become French citizens."

Last year the mortality in France exceeded the birth rate by 19,000, 793,000 deaths against 774,000 births.

FREAK PAPER FOR BRITISH READERS

Plan to Defy Libel Law and Discuss Court Cases With Abandon.

London, June 6.—London is to have a freak newspaper. What the name of the paper is going to be is a secret at present, but it might well be the "Daily Libel," for it will be characterized by a supreme contempt for the law of libel and will say just what it thinks in any way it sees fit.

The intention is to furnish the public with tid bits of society gossip and scandal which cannot now be printed legally and a city column run on the same lines of absolute frankness.

The novelty of treatment will be extended to all topics which come within the range of newspaper record and discussion. Pending cases in the law courts are to be freely discussed.

Not only will they be discussed in advance, but their progress from day to day, the demeanor and trustworthiness of the witnesses, and the conduct of the presiding judge will come under criticism.

To make the success of this sheet possible it will be edited, published and printed on foreign territory. Its office will be at some town on the French or Belgian coast, from which copies can be mailed to reach London by the first delivery. Thus the English laws will be evaded.

The price of the new paper will be high, owing to the cost of mailing to London in sealed envelopes to evade the British post-office regulations, which permit of objectionable "second-class" matter being intercepted.

AMERICAN WOMAN SAVES BABY LIVES

REDUCES DEATH RATE

London, June 6.—The School for Mothers, started in London by the Hon. Mrs. Bertrand Russell, who was formerly Mrs. Alys Pearsall Smith of Philadelphia, has been a great success.

Mrs. Bertrand Russell commenced her ambitious scheme in a most modest way. First there were nightly classes for painstaking mothers, who were permitted to bring their babies, and here they were taught by a woman doctor, Dr. Dora Bunting, how properly to fed and clothe their tiny offspring. These classes were almost eagerly attended.

But Mrs. Russell made an important discovery. Mothers as well as children require proper feeding, and many of her "pupils" were woefully ill-fed. So the night classes became day classes at which a substantial dinner is provided, at the very small charge of three cents, for those who can afford it. Those whose means will not permit of this modest expenditure are fed and instructed free.

The necessity of the school is apparent when one compares the English infantile death rate with that of America. In America during the first year of a child's life there is an average of fifty five deaths out of every thousand infants born. In England the average is one hundred and thirty-five, while in some districts the number reaches to more than five hundred.

If Mrs. Russell succeeds in helping to bring down these formidable figures she will have earned well the thanks of England.

MOTHER GIESLERN BURIED BY ARMY

Woman Sutler, Patronized by William I., Received the Honors of War.

Breslau, June 6.—"Mother" Gieslern, for sixty-six years sutler of the Sixth Field Artillery, was buried here with high military honors, the regimental band marching at the head of the funeral cortege, and the Colonel, most of the officers and hundreds of soldiers following with flags and other emblems.

"Mother" Gieslern served in four wars and was wounded several times on the battlefield. She died at the ripe old age of ninety as a pensioner of the Kaiser's privy purse, but attended to her business up to a few days before her death.

She had the habit of "thouing" everybody, high and low, and Generals, royal Princes, Kings, and Field Marshals were "boys" to her like the veriest recruit. The late Emperor Frederick, affectionately known as "Unser Fritz," was proud of "Mother" Gieslern's friendship and often wrote her letters assuring her of his good will and sending her little presents. When he ascended the throne, she sent him a telegram congratulating her dear boy Fritz and as usual addressing him by the endearing term of "thou." The telegraph office at first refused to take the wire, but "Mother" Gieslern begged so hard that finally it was accepted under protest.

The first Emperor, too, often bought frankfurters and schnapps from "Mother" Gieslern during manoeuvres or at reviews, and she left a little box full of silver and gold pieces which she had taken in payment from Emperors and Kings. She had two holidays a year, when she received at home, her birthday and her name day. Then a deputation from the regiment brought her a big bouquet of flowers with long ribbon and she received congratulations in state.

GERMANS' PLAIN UNIFORMS

Potsdam, June 6.—The Kaiser's Own Hussars, the most gorgeously dressed troopers of the German army, have now received their new field uniforms of simple grayish brown, the color adopted for the entire German cavalry. Henceforth reds, blues, greens, yellows and whites are used in times of peace only.

CASTRO DOFFS HAT TO ROOSEVELT IN UNITY MOVE

"BARRIERS BROKEN DOWN"

"Dictatorial Magistrate Unfurling Flag of Fraternity," He Writes.

Caracas, June 6.—President Castro of Venezuela has at last taken his hat off to President Roosevelt. The recent utterance of Roosevelt at the laying of the corner-stone of the Bureau of American Republic buildings in Washington has wrought the change of feeling in Castro. In his paper, El Constitutional, Castro voices himself as follows:

"We have arrived then at the hour of community of interests. Roosevelt invites us to the union, and inasmuch as this doctrine has overflowed in torrents from the heights of the capital in Caracas, expounded by our magistrate, we now understand that the insuperable barrier which the controversy had raised has been broken down, and that Roosevelt is drawing nigh and unfurling on high the flag of fraternity.

"Unity Is Necessary."

"Therefore the continental unity of America is established as an inviolable dogma; and the principle of the Monroe doctrine appears as an efficient doctrine which could be accepted in the international codes as long as it guarantees the interests placed in its care and keeps within the limits of these codes. The attitude of Castro in holding up on high the right of peoples has made the threatening 'big stick' fall from the hands of Roosevelt."

Saying that President Roosevelt used to be a "violent dictator," and that Castro has arrived, in the opinion of the world, at the "greatest heights of patriotism," the editorial continues:

"First to Jump Into Ring."

"We were the first, perhaps, to jump into the ring when we saw the demonstration of President Roosevelt's rage towards the small republics of the south, and when in the form of a violent dictator, nothing escaped from his threats and from his plans of restriction. It was during the long litigation maintained by our foreign office with that of Washington when the dictatorial tendency of the North American magistrate reached the most alarming proportions; and it was at that time that Castro, rising to a level not customary in the vehement defence of his fatherland, and of its prerogatives, obtained in the eyes of the world the greatest height of patriotism which is only obtained by men loyal to the religion of duty and of honor."

NAVAL OFFICIALS UNDER DUMA'S FIRE

Appropriations Held Up While Inquiry Into Irregularities Is Being Conducted.

St. Petersburg, June 6.—That Russia is determined that her future navy shall not be the laughing stock of other powers, and that the Ministry of Marine shall be conducted honestly, is shown in the intense interest that is being taken in the Duma's investigation of the Ministry of Marine. As a result of the attitude of the members of the ministry, particularly Admiral Bostrem, it was announced to-day that the naval appropriation would be held up unless the Ministry of Marine shows an inclination to co-operate with the Duma in getting at the bottom of certain irregularities.

There are other things beside the purchase of the ten gasoline torpedo boats from Lewis Nixon of New York and the faulty construction of the cruiser Rurik that the Duma proposes to investigate.

It is openly charged that graft has crept into the programme of naval expansion.

Since the disasters that befell the fleet in the war with Japan, there has not been much enthusiasm for naval service.

HELP WANTED—MALE.

WANTED Young men for all kinds of work on board the vessels comprising the big fleets of the United States Navy; do you want to see something of the world and at the same time save more money than most men do working at home?

The Navy wants [illegible] who give satisfaction and it will give you a chance to fit yourself for a better position and advance as soon as you are competent.

Your pay begins as soon as you enter the service; board, lodging, medical attendance if sick and a sixty dollar uniform outfit all are free. A trade is an extra, better pay to learn and quicker promotion. Musicians have the same advantage.

If accepted, you get a steady job, a chance to become manly and self-controlled. You will be sent to sea, probably on board one of the big new war vessels.

Ask anyone in the Navy, or send for free book, illustrated in colors, which tells in detail all about the life in the Navy—the useful things you learn, also about the cruises, the drills, the sports. This book tells about the number of working hours and the regular half days off. It also tells what you want to know about the wages paid, the promotions given, etc.

Send postal for it to the BUREAU OF NAVIGATION, Navy Department, Washington. Or get all the books about the navy at the Navy Recruiting Station, 60 Hanover st., Boston, Mass.

WANTED—Officers' cooks, stewards and mess attendants for the U. S. naval service; pay recently increased 10 per cent., men with experience in hotels, clubs or on board yachts especially desired, competent men will be employed at once.

In addition to the increased pay, all men receive upon first enlistment an outfit of clothing worth $60; board, lodging, transportation and medical care, if needed, are all free.

Splendid chance to save money; applicant must present recommendations showing experience and giving good character; stewards must be able to purchase necessary supplies and keep accounts; cooks must present evidence of ability; mess attendants must have worked in hotels, clubs, restaurants or families.

ARE YOU anxious to earn $150 per month? Are your future prospects as bright as you wish [illegible]? Do you wish steady, desirable and pleasant work? How is your ambition—at high or low [illegible]? Do you want healthy outdoor employment? Would you like to travel? Would you like to learn the best trade of the present day? Then call or write AUTOMOBILE SCHOOLS OF AMERICA, 20 Piedmont st., city.

PIANOS AND ORGANS.

What's the Use of Fighting If You Can't Fight All the Time?

That's the idea exactly. We would not have dared to tackle the big Piano Trust if we thought of quitting at any stage of the game. My! How the Trust did brag about putting us out of the business. But that was two years ago. We have been fighting ever since, and what fun we have had cutting and double cutting and scalping and slashing at Trust Pianos. Once when a particularly scrappy member of the Trust was fighting us for a customer who wanted to buy said scrappy member's particular pet piano we gave the customer the piano and paid the cartage to boot. It cost us a pretty piece of money to indulge in this sort of a battle, but what's the use of fighting if you can't fight all the time? Don't start anything that you can't finish. Some fine day we're going to finish the Trust, and then you'll see the prices of pianos down where they belong—where we've had them for over two years. Come up this week and get a swell bargain in any of the best makes while the fur is flying. 96 beauties will be put on the sacrifice floor.

FIRE

No commission or expense will be charged by us on the sale of pianos coming in from the fire.

$5 Down—$1 a Week

The gilded piano stores, with their costly appointments, their high-salaried sales agents, their sellers' commissions, etc., are no place for the economical piano buyer to go. Take the trouble to look around a little, go up where the rents are not so high and buy your piano right.

House of Best Values

Patronized by the Best People for Over a Quarter of a Century

JOHN BEHAN & CO.

65 Blackstone Street, Boston

A few reasons why we are able to give better values than [illegible] dealers. First, our long experience constitutes us good judges of liquors, which insures good quality; second, we buy only direct from best distilleries and wineries in large quantities, which secures lowest prices; third, we have no losses to make up for, through salesmen or credit sales, all our business being strictly cash, and fourth, our expenses are small in proportion to our business. Send us a trial order and be convinced.

Realizing the growing demand for a good low priced whiskey, we take pride in putting forward the two old favorites and the best sellers—for the price, we beat the world with these old time well known brands

CHATS ON WHISKEY.

BY STERNE BROS.

Last week we filled several hundred orders on Sterne's Extra Whiskey. It's the $4 a gallon quality which we sell in 4 full quarts for $2.85. This is a wonderful whiskey for the money. Understand, we don't compete with the "cheap whiskey", we compete with the best whiskeys at a trifle more than half the price. Every drop of Sterne's Extra Whiskey is guaranteed. Please do not confound this fine old brand with the low-priced, inferior whiskeys now flooding the market. We wish it were possible to take you through the distillery and show you how a good whiskey is made—from the cleansing of the rich, ripe grain right through the entire expensive process up to the day the whiskey is put away in casks and barrels to age. When the whiskey has properly mellowed it is bottled by us in full, honest quarts and goes to you with its full richness and purity—a whiskey that we are proud of and a whiskey that you ought to know and have if you use whiskey. Remember, we are proud of our whiskey and will stake our reputation on its value. There is no whiskey on the market to-day that is being sold for less than $4 a gallon that can touch Sterne's Extra. Try an order this week. Four full honest quarts of a superior whiskey for $2.85.

DEMOCRATS SPLIT ON COMMITTEEMAN

COUGHLIN NOW OUT OF IT

Williams is after the scalp of Colonel W. A. Gaston. Gaston, under the impetus of the Parker wave of four years ago, displaced him on the national committee.

When the delegates met at the Quincy House two weeks ago, Williams was as much surprised as shocked to find that Joseph P. Lomasney, brother of Martin, had a boom in full swing for the election of Daniel F. Doherty of Westfield, as national committeeman.

"Under the rose" it had been whispered that Williams wanted the place of national committeeman himself, although he had made no avowal of his desire to the Boston alliance, headed by Lomasney; but the Quincy House meeting adjourned without choosing a national committeeman and subject to the call of the chairman, Colonel John F. Sweeney of Lawrence.

Wait Till They Reach West.

Colonel Sweeney announces that no meeting of the delegates will be called for the election of a national committeeman until the delegates have been comfortably settled in their headquarters in the Savoy at Denver.

This will be after the Massachusetts delegates have met William Jennings Bryan on his front lawn at Lincoln, Neb., when the Nebraskan will tell the Massachusetts men just how much he thinks of the Dedham statesman.

Trouble is brewing from the discovery among friends of Dr. John W. Coughlin of Fall River that George Fred Williams only selected the doctor as his candidate for national committeeman, at the Quincy House meeting, in order to forestall the election of "Dan" Doherrty, and from further discovery that Williams did not include Dr. Coughlin in his original make-up of the "big four" to Denver.

Coughlin Out of It.

Dr. Coughlin may decline further to be considered as a candidate, and the issue will be fought out between Williams and Doherty and with just as much spirit and bitterness as last Fall, when they took opposite sides in the Bartlett-Whitney campaign for the gubernatorial nomination.

Declaring that a majority of delegates assembled can elect a national committeeman regardless of a formal call from the chairman of the delegation, anti-Williams members of the delegation and others of the delegation who have promised themselves to Doherty may assert themselves on the special train and not wait until they reach the West before getting down to business.

Led by Joseph P. Lomasney, the Boston supporters of Daniel F. Doherty will be more interested ere the Denver special has crossed the Mystic over the election of a national committeeman than over the nomination for president.

CABINET OFFICERS DODGE "LID" JOB

By Boston American Leased Wire.

Washington, June 6.—The question as to what member of the cabinet will sit on the lid in Washington during President Roosevelt's absence in Oyster Bay, during the Summer has not yet been decided owing to the desire on the part of all concerned to escape the tiresome monotony of looking after routine affairs at the nation's capital with the accompanying heat.

None of the cabinet officers wants the task and several of them are facetiously sugesting that it would be a remarkably good experience for the new member who is to enter the President's official family immediately after Secretary Taft's nomination at Chicago.

Root Will Go to Muldoon's.

Secretary Root is emphatic in his declaration that he will not remain in Washington. He is anxious to get away even now. As soon after the President's departure as possible he will go to Billy Muldoon's training quarters in New York State, where he will again take up the course prescribed for him when he was run down physically about a year ago. After remaining there about three weeks the secretary will go to his farm in Oneida County, New York.

Postmaster General Meyer has not yet made definite plans for his vacation, but he intends to spend about three weeks fishing, possibly up in Canada.

Attorney General Bonaparte probably will be in direct touch with his department longer than any other member of the cabinet. He will travel back and forth between his home in Baltimore and the department of justice till the middle of July, after which he and Mrs. Bonaparte will go to Lenox, Mass., to spend the latter part of the Summer.

Taft Anxious for Root.

Secretary Taft is anxious to get a rest, but the pleasure of golfing up in Canada will be denied him this Summer. It is probable that after the convention is over he will go away for a short time to rest and to prepare his address of acceptance.

Secretary Wilson will go to his model farm in Iowa and rest until the campaign managers wire him his speaking itinerary.

Secretary Cortelyou has made no plans for the Summer, and will not do so for some time to come. This is undoubtedly due to existing political conditions. His name has been mentioned prominently in connection with the vice-presidential nomination and in many quarters it is believed that he may carry off the palm. In any event, Mr. Cortelyou will not think about a prolonged rest until the political atmosphere clears a bit.

Shah Overthrown; Premier of Persia Installs Cabinet

Teheran, Persia, June 6.—The government of Persia has been taken temporarily out of the hands of Shah Ali Mirza and entrusted to a new Cabinet, installed today under the Premiership of Mushir-Es-Sultaneh.

The new Cabinet was formed without the sanction of the Shah, who is believed to be at the Bageshakh palace, some distance from the capital. The policy of the new Cabinet, it was announced, would be to allay political unrest and adopt a conciliatory policy toward Russia.

Under the new order of things it is believed that the indemnity demanded by Russia for offenses committed by frontier tribesmen will be paid.

A new starring vehicle for this brilliant prima donna has been written for her by Reginald De Koven and Harry B. Smith, the authors of "Robin Hood" and other successes. This will be the first collaboration, by the way, of these two men since they wrote "Maid Marian" for the Bostonians, in which Miss Van Studdiford played the chief role.

Boston, which has most kindly feeling for the talented young woman, will be interested in her return to the comic opera stage after her repeated successes in light opera. The new production in which she is to star next Fall will be under the management of Charles Bradley and will be produced by the Van Studdiford Amusement Company, a Missouri corporation.

The prima donna's home is in that famous State, whose people bear the reputation of having to be "shown." She is the wife of Charles Van Studdiford of St. Louis, whom she wedded soon after the famous rumpus of the Bostonians in Chicago. At the time of her marriage Mr. Van Studdiford was quite wealthy, but he sustained heavy losses soon after. His wife had left the stage, but she resumed her professional career then with the intention, it is said, of helping her husband recoup his losses by aspiring to a large salary.

Her aspirations were gratified and she rose to a greater fame and increased salary.

Formerly a chorus girl, she has sung Fleur de Lys in "Esmerelda," Marguerite in "Faust," Michela in "Carmen," Maid Marian in "Robin Hood," and has starred in "The Red Feather," the comic opera by Reginald De Koven and Charles Klein.

She has also posed for art pictures, one very charming pose published of her being a head and bust appearing as framed in a mirror, accompanied by some pretty verse by Aloysius Coll.

SLASHED IN KNIFE BATTLE ON STREET

Joseph Zicari, an Itlain, 30, of Dedham, lies in the City Hospital to-day in a serious condition as the result of stab wounds. He was attacked, he charged before he became unconscious, by Nicotos Parrotti, of the same age, and also of Dedham. Parrotti disappeared but was arrested in Dedham by Boston officers.

The two men boarded a Walpole street car at the Dudley street terminal of the Elevated last night at about 7 o'clock. According to Conductor R. E. Heard of the car they got into an argument while they were his passengers. The dispute continued as far as Washington and Lagrange streets, West Roxbury, a lonely spot. Here they both alighted.

Address Delivered By Ex-Assistant Attorney General Beck.

Philadelphia, June 6.—The statue of President McKinley on the south plaza of the City Hall was unveiled to-day. The ceremonies were under the direction of General Louis Wagner and a committee of Civil War veterans. Former Assistant Attorney General J. M. Beck, who served with McKinley, delivered the address. The monument is of heroic size and at the base is the figure of a woman shielding a child, symbolic of protection to the weak.

NEAR DEATH FROM STRANGE ATTACK

Unconscious and with a bad wound on the head, a well-dressed young man, about twenty-five years of age, believed to be John M. Gilman of Holyoke, was found on the sidewalk at Melrose and Pleasant streets at 9 o'clock last night by Patrolman Gallagher of the Lagrange street station. He is believed to be the victim of a mysterious attack.

Dr. Williams pronounced him suffering from cerrebral hemorrhage. He was removed to the Relief Hospital. His condition is serious, and the doctors say he man not survive.

In the young man's pockets were found a letter from J. A. Laporte, recommending John M. Gilman as a pharmacist; also a letter, signed "Annie Gilman," in another envelope postmarked Holyoke.

800 ENJOY SPORTS AT KNIGHTS' PICNIC

Quincy, June 6.—In observance of the fourteenth anniversary of Quincy Council No. 96, Knights of Columbus, the members and friends of the organization enjoyed an outing at Merrymount Park to-day. Fully 800 people were present. The day was given over to sports of varied descriptions.

Mayor William Shea was entered with a number of other Knights in a 100-yard dash. He acquitted himself nobly and came in a winner, with Dennis P. Crowley a close second. The Mayor's time was fifteen seconds.

The 100-yard handicap race was won by Timothy J. Carey, city tax collector. Dennis Crowley came in second. Grand Knight Edward J. Murphy won in the 100-yard dash for the officers of the organization. Past Grand Knight Timothy J. Carey came in second. Both received handsome prizes.

The closing feature of the day were ball games composed of picked nines. The Inagains defeated the Outagains in a close and interesting game by a score of 7 to 3. As a grand finale the Inagains tackled the Yanigans and defeated them, the score being 4 to 3.

NORMAL DEDICATION CEREMONY DAZZLING

With a pageant unprecedented in educational efforts in this country, the handsome new Boston Normal School in the Fenway was appropriately dedicated to "Learning for Service," the motto of the institution, yesterday afternoon. For nearly three hours the picturesque groups of young men, women and children, portraying with admirable regard for detail and exactness in dress and manner the various educational ideals of different epochs in the world's history, deserved the complimentary gasps of delight that were heard with frequency from the 3,000 onlookers.

When at half-past four the first peal of the trumpeters announced the procession, the graduates of the school who had spent the hour previous in inspecting the new features of the school, hushed one another in expectancy. Altogether there were twenty groups, ranging in number from six to fifty, who filed past the young woman typifying Alma Mater, and seated high in a commanding position in the centre of the stage, and then faced the audience, to teach as best a vivid picture can do, the customs in vogue from the time of Socrates to the modern kindergarten.

The Greek Sages, Socrates, Plato, Aristotle, Homer, Herodotus, Sophocles and Pythagoras were received with loud applause. Then the great Roman educators were shown by men who followed closely the picture that history gives us of these teachers.

The change from the color and gaiety of the Romans to the sombreness of the group of monks illustrates clearly that the men of that time had received new inspiration. These monks were trained for the occasion by a Catholic priest and the Tantum Ergo which they chanted made a distinct impression upon the audience.

At the conclusion of the exercises a reception was held in the large hall on the second floor, and refreshments were served. The past and present teachers of the school received their old pupils and their associates. Principal Wallace C. Boyden and Mrs. Boyden, Mrs. Larkin Dunton, wife of the former master of the school; Miss Katherine Shute and Miss Dora Williams, teachers in the school, were greeted heartily.

Mrs. Dalin, who materially assisted in formulating the plans for entertainment with Miss Elizabeth Tash, were heartily congratulated. The reunion committee consisted of Lotta A. Clark, chairman; Miss Rellem, Miss Margaret Nichols, Miss Dora Williams, Miss Charlotte Rafter and Dr. Colin A. Scott, counsellor.

The project will be repeated for the benefit of the public to-morrow evening.

PRESIDENT TO HALT WHITE SLAVE TRADE

By Boston American Leased Wire.

Washigtno, June 6.—President Roosevelt will proclaim within a few days the agreement of the Paris convention of 1902, declaring war on the "white slave" traffic between the United States and foreign countries.

The United States was a signatory to the settlement and the Senate ratified it, but because of difficulties in the way of carrying out its provisions, it was never proclaimed.

Simon Lake, Famous As Submarine Wizard, Invents New Airship

New York, June 6.—Simon Lake, the submarine inventor and builder, of Bridgeport, Ct., has gone the amphibian species one better by inventing a new style of airship, and by his own genius he can now travel in air, water and on land.

A. Holland Forbes, a member of the Aero Club of New York, has seen the new air craft and says it is the best yet turned out. It is a combination of aeroplanes and a gas bag, the aeroplanes "grasping" the air much as hydroplanes take hold of water on submarines. By the use of a helicoptre the ascent can be made in a vertical direction or at an angle. The ship, the inventor says, is perfectly dirigible.

Mrs. Archie Broulx, formerly Miss Beatrice Miller

Another chapter has been added to the romantic career of pretty eighteen-year-old Beatrice Miller, the Dorchester singer and music teacher who has figured in sensational disappearances, parental dissensions and court proceedings as the result of her love affairs.

Her sudden disappearance some months ago was explained the past week when she arrived at the home of her parents, bringing with her Archie Broulx, a former Springfield hotel proprietor whom she introduced to her parents as her husband. The couple were married a few weeks ago.

The girl, when she left home, went to Springfield, where she secured employment as a pianist at a moving picture theatre. She stopped at the Springfield Hotel, in which Broulx was interested, and the acquaintanceship was formed there which resulted in the marriage a fortnight ago.

Arrested as Stubborn Child.

On September 3 of last year Miss Miller left her home on account, as she claimed, of her mother not permitting her to receive friends at the house. Contrary to the advice of the police of Station 11, whom she went to consult about her daughter at that time, Mrs. Miller the following day swore out a warrant for her daughter's arrest as a stubborn child, and the next evening Beatrice was arrested by Patrolman Joseph F, Loughlin of Station 11.

In court she admitted that she had run away with her sweetheart, Clarence Effler, on account of restrictions at home. She was discharged by Judge Joseph R. Churchill for lack of evidence and no sooner reached the sidewalk in front of the court house when she left her parents' side with a bound and ran to the open arms of her sweetheart, who nws standing nearby. It was after a sensational scene by her parents that she was separated from Effler and went to her home.

Disappeared Mysteriously.

She lived with them until the middle of last January, when she mysteriously disappeared for the second time. About the time of Miss Miller's second disappearance her sweetheart left Dorchester for New York, according to his friends, and has not been seen since.

Mrs. Broulx is an accomplished pianist and a pleasing singer. It was while singing in the choir of St. Mary's Church that she met Effler, who was singing in the same choir. The latter was a minstrel show instructor and Miss Effler frequently appeared on the amateur stage with him. Because of their musical tastes they became friendly.

Broulx is a Springfield young man. He recently sold out his interest in a Springfield hotel and came to Boston with his young wife to engage in business here. The girl's parents are pleased with her choice of a husband, and the young couple are at present living with them at No. 10 Bird street.

"I have had enough of disagreeable notoriety and do not care to say anything about my marriage," said Mrs. Broulx to an American reporter. "My parents are satisfied, my husband is and so am I. That is all there is to say about it."

BIG CROWDS STORM CHELSEA SALOONS

Twenty-nine Arrests in City on First Night of License; Citizens to Protest.

Chelsea's first Saturday night since the opening of the saloons developed a lively carnival, with twenty-nine arrests for drunkenness up to midnight and with the patrol wagon out for more.

There are fifteen saloons now in the city, with the License Commissioners empowered to grant twenty-two more. A mass meeting will be held in the Carey Avenue Baptist Church tomorrow night to protest against any more licenses being granted at present.

The police force was kept on the jump last night, with every available regular on duty and several reserve men. Street brawls were frequent.

The trolley cars from "dry" Lynn did a rushing business in the early evening, bringing load after load of thirsty Lynnites. At eleven o'clock a grand homeward rush for Lynn and way stations was begun, starting in with two trolleys running a special trip from Chelsea square jammed to the running boards.

The saloons so far licensed are bunched in two sections, one about Chelsea square, the other back toward the Revere line.

Police Send Former Harvard Instructor's Picture Broadcast.

In an effort to locate Erich Muenter, the former Harvard instructor, who is wanted on suspicion of causing the death of his wife, Leone, by poisoning, more than two years ago, Chief Inspector Hurley of the Cambridge police is preparing to send throughout the world circulars of the wanted man's description. Muenter is thought by the police to be in Europe.

HARVARD MAN FOR CHILI CONFERENCE

Washington, June 6.—Secretary of State Root to-day invited nine scientists to represent the government at the Pan-American scientific congress at Santiago, Chili, in December. They include Professor Archibald C. Coolidge of Harvard University and Professor Hiram Bingham of Yale.

MEET ON STAGE; WILL MARRY SOON

Greenwich, Ct., June 6.—The chief topic of conversation in the Summer colony here is the coming wedding of Miss Alberta Teressa Bowman, sister of Dr. J. E. Bowman, a millionaire, to Henry Lucius Chase, a wealthy Bostonian, at one time leading baritone for the Henry W. Savage Opera Company. Mr. Chase has been a guest of Dr. Bowman for a long time, and has been much in public with Miss Bowman, but the approaching wedding has just become known, and comes as a surprise. Yesterday Mr. Chase and Miss Bowman went to New York City and procured a marriage license.

The wedding will take place Wednesday at the Manhattan Hotel, Rev. Dr. Slicer of the First Unitarian Church performing the ceremony. There will be no bridal attendant, and after the wedding tour the couple will reside in Boston.

A pretty romance is connected with the wedding. Mr. Chase, who upon receiving a large fortune left the stage years ago, was staying in Greenwich two Summers ago when an amateur company was formed to play "Priscilla," by Surrette and Coolidge of Concord, Mass. No one could be found to take the part of Myles Standish until some one learned that Mr. Chase was an intimate friend of both Mr. Surrette and Mr. Coolidge, and was familiar with the opera. He agreed to take the part, and during the rehearsals for the play became acquainted with Miss Bowman and her brother. The acquaintance ripened into friendship, and Mr. Chase became the guest of Dr. Bowman and sepent the remainder of that Summer and the following Summer on his estate.

MARINES ENFORCE PEACE IN PANAMA

Washington, June 6.—Conferences on Panama to-day and this afternoon between the White House, Secretary Root and officials of the Navy Department indicate that the Government proposes to force a quiet election in Panama by the use of marines.

Secretary Taft and the President were both anxious to know whether the two hundred extra marines ordered to be in Panama at the time of the elections will arriev on time and it was ascertained that there will be no delay.

EIGHT IN FIELD TO SUCCEED LINEHAN

IS SILENT ABOUT M'NARY

Alliances Said to Be Under Way for State and Congressional Campaigns.

Senator Frank J. Linehan has announced that he will not be a candidate for a third term and there are eight men seeking the Democratic nomination to succeed him in the Sixth District, which comprises the three South Boston wards and Ward 16 of Dorcester. The eight aspirants are Representative James F. Powers of Ward 13, Representative William P. Higgins and former Representative Patrick Shields of Ward 14, Representative Edward D. Collins and Patrick D. O'Connor of Ward 15, former Representative William Lyons of Ward 16 and two dark horses in former Congressman William S. McNary's ward. McNary also has been mentioned as likely to enter the race, but may be, it is thought, again be a seeker for the office of city clerk.

Silent About Congress.

Regarding his position, Senator Linehan said to a Boston Sunday American reporter: "I am not a candidate for the Senate, and the reputed candidacies of W. S. McNary and three Representatives does not interest me. About Congress I will not talk yet."

Senator Linehan has been very much discussed as a Congressional candidate in the Tenth District where there are a number of Democrats who are likely to fight O'Connell for the nomination. In Ward 17 Senator Michael J. McEttrick, Alderman James M. Curley and former Councillor Charles I. Quirk have also been discussed as factors in the congressional campaign.

Representative Powers, it is believed, would have the support in Ward 13 of the Jeremiah J. McNamara faction in the Senatorial fight. In Ward 14 the friends of Shields claim that he will be backed by the Ward organization. The Logan faction is expected to support Higgins.

May Back O'Connor.

In Ward 15 the politicians think McNary would be likely to back O'Connor, if the former Congressman should not seek election to the Senate himself.

Lyons counts on being able to make, it is understand, South Boston alliances in the Senatorial contest through his strength in his own ward if he should take a hand in behalf of some Congressional candidate. In fact, the Senatorial and he Congressional battles seem to have a great deal of bearing each upon the other.

HINGHAMITES GET EXCITED OVER DOG

SOME CALLED IT A 'TERROR'

Hingham, June 6.—This is the tale of a dog—a dog which, though dead, has thrown the whole staid town of Hingham into a factional fight, said fight being the sequel to a canine battle. 'Everybody in Hingham owns a dog—one or more.

Attorney S. Henry Hooper did own two dogs, where now there is but one. Fenton Thompson has just appeared from a three months' sentence in jail for killing the other. And this let loose the Dogs of War.

Hooper had two blooded Boston terriers—"terrors," Thompson's friends called 'em. And when Thompson strolled by the lawyer's home with his pet canine there was "something doin'."

There were three "G-r-r-rh-h-h-s" and Jerry and Billy made a lunge out of the Hooper yard at the Thompson dog.

Says Knife Was Used.

Miss Catherine Keaney, a maid at the Hooper residence, says she dashed out and tried to separate the canines and that Mr. Thompson stopped her, pulling out a knife and slashing Billy so badly that the animal had to be shot afterward.

Thompson was arrested, charged with disturbing the peace, attacking Miss Keaney and cruelty to an animal. On the first charge he was fined $20; for the attack on Miss Keaney $10, and Judge Kelley gave him three months for cutting the dog. Thompson appealed from all three sentences.

Then arose the trouble among the peaceful, law-abiding and justice-loving citizens of Hingham—the same who wage relentless war every Summer on speeding autoists.

Where They Disagree.

Lined up on one side are the friends of Lawyer Hooper, who declare that Billy was the best-natured, most loving and least pugnacious brute in the town.

Arrayed against them are the scores of people who sympathize with Mr. Thompson, who in turn declare that Hooper's dogs were the worst nuisances in town and never missed a chance to "pick a scrap" with others of the canine tribe.

The latter assert that everyone in Hingham who owns a dog, or dogs, has made a wide circuit to avoid passing the Hooper place, fearing a battle in which their pet would come out second best.

And when the appealed case is called, the court room is sure to be crowded.

Portsmouth, N. H., June 6.—While Portsmouth and Somersworth High School baseball teams were engaged in a hot New Hampshire Interscholastic League contest in this city to-day, the game being played on Colonial drilling grounds owned by the State, the contest was temporarily suspended and the spectators driven to shelter by the sudden and exciting appearance of Leonard Cook, an eccentric character, long known as "the Mayor of the Plains."

Cook came out of his house nearby with an American flag and two heavy pattern revolvers. Before anyone realized what he was doing, he planted the flag in the middle of the field, gave three cheers, and, it is alleged began firing the revolvers point blank into the crowd. There was a prompt scattering to points of shelter and a squad of police was summoned. By the time the officers arrived, Cook had quieted down and was secured with little difficulty. He is now held at the local police station.

House of Best Values

Patronized by the Best People for Over a Quarter of a Century

JOHN BEHAN & CO.

65 Blackstone Street, Boston

A few reasons why we are able to give better values than many dealers. First, our long experience constitutes us good judges of liquors, which insures good quality; second, we buy only direct from best distilleries and wineries in large quantities, which secures lowest prices; third, we have no losses to make up for, through salesmen or credit sales, all our business being strictly cash; and fourth, our expenses are small in proportion to our business. Send us a trial order and be convinced.

Realising the growing demand for a good low priced whiskey, we take pride in putting forward the two old favorites and the best sellers—for the price, we beat the world with these old-time well-known brands.

CHATS ON WHISKEY.

BY STERNE BROS.

Last week we filled several hundred orders on Sterne's Extra Whiskey. It's the $4-a-gallon quality which we sell in 4 full quarts for $2.85. This is a wonderful whiskey for the money. Understand, we don't compete with the "cheap whiskey"; we compete with the best whiskeys at a trifle more than half the price. Every drop of Sterne's Extra Whiskey is guaranteed. Please do not confound this fine old brand with the low-priced, inferior whiskeys now flooding the market. We wish it were possible to take you through the distillery and show you how a good whiskey is made—from the cleansing of the rich, ripe grain right through the entire expensive process up to the day the whiskey is put away in casks and barrels to age. When the whiskey has properly mellowed, it is bottled by us in full, honest quarts and goes to you with its full richness and purity—a whiskey that we are proud of and a whiskey that you ought to know and have if you use whiskey. Remember, we are proud of our whiskey and will stake our reputation on its value. There is no whiskey on the market to-day that is being sold for less than $4 a gallon that can touch Sterne's Extra. Try an order this week. Four full, honest quarts of a superior whiskey for $2.85.

DEMOCRATS SPLIT ON COMMITTEEMAN

COUGHLIN NOW OUT OF IT

Williams is after the scalp of Colonel W. A. Gaston. Gaston, under the impetus of the Parker wave of four years ago, displaced him on the national committee.

When the delegates met at the Quincy House two weeks ago Williams was as much surprised as shocked to find that Joseph P. Lomasney, brother of Martin, had a boom in full swing for the election of Daniel F. Doherty of Westfield, as national committeeman.

"Under the rose" it had been whispered that Williams wanted the place of national committeeman himself, although he had made no avowal of his desire to the Boston alliance, headed by Lomasney; but the Quincy House meeting adjourned without choosing a national committeeman and subject to the call of the chairman, Colonel John F. Sweeney of Lawrence.

Colonel Sweeney announces that no meeting of the delegates will be called for the election of a national committeeman until the delegates have been comfortably settled in their headquarters in the Savoy at Denver.

This will be after the Massachusetts delegates have met William Jennings Bryan on his front lawn at Lincoln, Neb., when the Nebraskan will tell the Massachusetts men just how much he thinks of the Dadham statesman.

Trouble is brewing from the discovery among friends of Dr. John W. Coughlin of Fall River that George Fred Williams only selected the doctor as his candidate for national committeeman, at the Quincy House meeting, in order to forestall the election of "Dan" Doherrty, and from further discovery that Williams did not include Dr. Coughlin in his original make-up of the "big four" to Denver.

Coughlin Out of It.

Dr. Coughlin may decline further to be considered as a candidate, and the issue will be fought out between Williams and Doherty and with just as much spirit and bitterness as last Fall, when they took opposite sides in the Bartlett-Whitney campaign for the gubernatorial nomination.

Declaring that a majority of delegates assembled can elect a national committeeman regardless of a formal call from the chairman of the delegation, anti-Williams members of the delegation and others of the delegation who have promised themselves to Doherty may assert themselves on the special train and not wait until they reach the West before getting down to business.

Led by Joseph P. Lomasney, the Boston supporters of Daniel F. Doherty will be more interested ere the Denver special has crossed the Mystic over the election of a national committeeman than over the nomination for president.

CABINET OFFICERS DODGE "LID" JOB

By Boston American Leased Wire.

Washington, June 6.—The question as to what member of the cabinet will sit on the lid in Washington during President Roosevelt's absence in Oyster Bay, during the Summer has not yet been decided owing to the desire on the part of all concerned to escape the tiresome monotony of looking after routine affairs at the nation's capital with the accompanying heat.

None of the cabinet officers wants the task and several of them are facetiously sugesting that it would be a remarkably good experience for the new member who is to enter the President's official family immediately after Secretary Taft's nomination at Chicago.

Root Will Go to Muldoon's.

Secretary Root is emphatic in his declaration that he will not remain in Washington. He is anxious to get away even now. As soon after the President's departure as possible he will go to Billy Muldoon's training quarters in New York State, where he will again take up the course prescribed for him when he was run down physically about a year ago. After remaining there about three weeks the secretary will go to his farm in Oneida County, New York.

Postmaster General Meyer has not yet made definite plans for his vacation, but he intends to spend about three weeks fishing, possibly up in Canada.

Attorney General Bonaparte probably will be in direct touch with his department longer than any other member of the cabinet. He will travel back and forth between his home in Baltimore and the department of justice till the middle of July, after which he and Mrs. Bonaparte will go to Lenox, Mass., to spend the latter part of the Summer.

Taft Anxious for Root.

Secretary Taft is anxious to get a rest, but the pleasure of golfing up in Canada will be denied him this Summer. It is probable that after the convention is over he will go away for a short time to rest and to prepare his address of acceptance.

Secretary Wilson will go to his model farm in Iowa and rest until the campaign managers wire him his speaking itinerary.

Secretary Cortelyou has made no plans for the Summer, and will not do so for some time to come. This is undoubtedly due to existing political conditions. His name has been mentioned prominently in connection with the vice-presidential nomination and in many quarters it is believed that he may carry off the palm. In any event, Mr. Cortelyou will not think about a prolonged rest until the political atmosphere clears a bit.

Shah Overthrown; Premier of Persia Installs Cabinet

Teheran, Persia, June 6.—The government of Persia has been taken temporarily out of the hands of Shah Ali Mirza and entrusted to a new Cabinet, installed today under the Premiership of Mushir-Es-Sultaneh.

The new Cabinet was formed without the sanction of the Shah, who is believed to be at the Bageshakh palace, some distance from the capital. The policy of the new Cabinet, it was announced, would be to allay political unrest and adopt a conciliatory policy toward Russia.

Under the new order of things it is believed that the indemnity demanded by Russia for offenses committed by frontier tribesmen will be paid.

A new starring vehicle for this brilliant prima donna has been written for her by Reginald De Koven and Harry B. Smith, the authors of "Robin Hood" and other successes. This will be the first collaboration, by the way, of these two men since they wrote "Maid Marian" for the Bostonians, in which Miss Van Studdiford played the chief role.

Boston, which has most kindly feeling for the talented young woman, will be interested in her return to the comic opera stage after her repeated successes in light opera. The new production in which she is to star next Fall will be under the management of Charles Bradley and will be produced by the Van Studdiford Amusement Company, a Missouri corporation.

The prima donna's home is in that famous State, whose people bear the reputation of having to be "shown." She is the wife of Charles Van Studdiford of St. Louis, whom she wedded soon after the famous rumpus of the Bostonians in Chicago. At the time of her marriage Mr. Van Studdiford was quite wealthy, but he sustained heavy losses soon after. His wife had left the stage, but she resumed her professional career then with the intention, it is said, of helping her husband recoup his losses by aspiring to a large salary.

Her aspirations were gratified and she rose to a greater fame and increased salary.

Formerly a chorus girl, she has sung Fleur de Lys in "Esmerelda," Marguerite in "Faust," Michela in "Carmen," Maid Marian in "Robin Hood," and has starred in "The Red Feather," the comic opera by Reginald De Koven and Charles Klein.

She has also posed for art pictures, one very charming pose published of her being a head and bust appearing as framed in a mirror, accompanied by some pretty verse by Aloysius Coll.

Joseph Zicarl, an Itlain, 30, of Dedham, lies in the City Hospital to-day in a serious condition as the result of stab wounds. He was attacked, he charged before he became unconscious, by Nicotos Parrotti, of the same age, and also of Dedham. Parrotti disappeared but was arrested in Dedham by Boston officers.

The two men boarded a Walpole street car at the Dudley street terminal of the Elevated last night at about 7 o'clock. According to Conductor R. E. Heard of the car they got into an argument while they were his passengers. The dispute continued as far as Washington and Lagrange streets, West Roxbury, a lonely spot. Here they both alighted.

Their voices rang out in angry quarreling and they were heard by James O'Neil, a night watchman over the tools and engines left there by a gang of men who are widening the street.

Address Delivered By Ex-Assistant Attorney-General Beck.

Philadelphia, June 6.—The statue of President McKinley on the south plaza of the City Hall was unveiled to-day. The ceremonies were under the direction of General Louis Wagner and a committee of Civil War veterans. Former Assistant Attorney General J. M. Beck, who served with McKinley, delivered the address. The monument is of heroic size and at the base is the figure of a woman shielding a child, symbolic of protection to the weak.

NEAR DEATH FROM STRANGE ATTACK

Unconscious and with a bad wound on the head, a well-dressed young man, about twenty-five years of age, believed to be John M. Gilman of Holyoke, was found on the sidewalk at Melrose and Pleasant streets at 9 o'clock last night by Patrolman Gallagher of the Lagrange street station. He is believed to be the victim of a mysterious attack.

Dr. Williams pronounced him suffering from cerebral hemorrhage. He was removed to the Relief Hospital. His condition is serious, and the doctors say he man not survive.

In the young man's pockets were found a letter from J. A. Laporte, recommending John M. Gilman as a pharmacist; also a letter, signed "Annie Gilman," in another envelope postmarked Holyoke.

800 ENJOY SPORTS AT KNIGHTS' PICNIC

Quincy, June 6.—In observance of the fourteenth anniversary of Quincy Council No. 28, Knights of Columbus, the members and friends of the organization enjoyed an outing at Merrymount Park to-day. Fully 800 people were present. The day was given over to sports of varied descriptions.

Mayor William Shea was entered with a number of other Knights in a 100-yard dash. He acquitted himself nobly and came in a winner, with Dennis P. Crowley a close second. The Mayor's time was fifteen seconds.

The 100-yard handicap race was won by Timothy J. Carey, city tax collector. Dennis Crowley came in second. Grand Knight Edward J. Murphy won in the 100-yard dash for the officers of the organization. Past Grand Knight Timothy J. Carey came in second. Both received handsome prizes.

The closing feature of the day were ball games composed of picked nines. The Inagains defeated the Outagains in a close and interesting game by a score of 7 to 3. As a grand finale the Inagains tackled the Yanigans and defeated them, the score being 4 to 3.

NORMAL DEDICATION CEREMONY DAZZLING

With a pageant unprecedented in educational efforts in this country, the handsome new Boston Normal School in the Fenway was appropriately dedicated to "Learning for Service," the motto of the institution, yesterday afternoon. For nearly three hours the picturesque groups of young men, women and children, portraying with admirable regard for detail and exactness in dress and manner the various educational ideals of different epochs in the world's history, deserved the complimentary gasps of delight that were heard with frequency from the 5,000 onlookers.

When at half-past four the first peal of the trumpeters announced the procession, the graduates of the school who had spent the hour previous in inspecting the new features of the school, hushed one another in expectancy. Altogether there were twenty groups, ranging in number from six to fifty, who filed past the young woman typifying Alma Mater, and seated high in a commanding position in the centre of the stage, and then faced the audience, to teach as best a vivid picture can do, the customs in vogue from the time of Socrates to the modern kindergarten.

The Greek Sages, Socrates, Plato, Aristotle, Homer, Herodotus, Sophocles and Pythagoras were received with loud applause. Then the great Roman educators were shown by men who followed closely the picture that history gives us of these teachers.

The change from the color and gaiety of the Romans to the sombreness of the group of monks illustrates clearly that the men of that time had received new inspiration. These monks were trained for the occasion by a Catholic priest and the Tantum Ergo which they chanted made a distinct impression upon the audience.

At the conclusion of the exercises a reception was held in the large hall on the second floor, and refreshments were served. The past and present teachers of the school received their old pupils and their associates. Principal Wallace C. Boyden and Mrs. Boyden, Mrs. Larkin Dunton, wife of the former master of the school; Miss Katherine Shute and Miss Dora Williams, teachers in the school, were greeted heartily.

Mrs. Dallin, who materially assisted in formulating the plans for entertainment with Miss Elizabeth Tash, were heartily congratulated. The reunion committee consisted of Lotta A. Clark, chairman; Miss Bellem, Miss Margaret Nichols, Miss Dora Williams, Miss Charlotte Rafter and Dr. Colin A. Scott, counsellor.

The project will be repeated for the benefit of the public to-morrow evening.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

Washington, June 6.—President Roosevelt will proclaim within a few days the agreement of the Paris convention of 1902, declaring war on the "white slave" traffic between the United States and foreign countries.

The United States was a signatory to the settlement and the Senate ratified it, but, because of difficulties in the way of carrying out its provisions, it was never proclaimed.

New York, June 6.—Simon Lake, the submarine inventor and builder, of Bridgeport, Ct., has gone the amphibian species one better by inventing a new style of airship, and by his own genius he can now travel in air, water and on land.

A. Holland Forbes, a member of the Aero Club of New York, has seen the new air craft and says it is the best yet turned out. It is a combination of aeroplanes and a gas bag, the aeroplanes "grasping" the air much as hydroplanes take hold of water on submarines. By the use of a helicoptre the ascent can be made in a vertical direction or at an angle. The ship, the inventor says, is perfectly dirigible.

Mrs. Archie Broulx, formerly Miss Beatrice Miller

Another chapter has been added to the romantic career of pretty eighteen-year-old Beatrice Miller, the Dorchester singer and music teacher who has figured in sensational disappearances, parental dissensions and court proceedings as the result of her love affairs.

Her sudden disappearance some months ago was explained the past week when she arrived at the home of her parents, bringing with her Archie Broulx, a former Springfield hotel proprietor whom she introduced to her parents as her husband. The couple were married a few weeks ago.

The girl, when she left home, went to Springfield, where she secured employment as a pianist at a moving picture theatre. She stopped at the Springfield Hotel, in which Broulx was interested, and the acquaintanceship was formed there which resulted in the marriage a fortnight ago.

Arrested as Stubborn Child.

On September 3 of last year Miss Miller left her home on account, as she claimed, of her mother not permitting her to receive friends at the house. Contrary to the advice of the police of Station 11, whom she went to consult about her daughter at that time, Mrs. Miller the following day swore out a warrant for her daughter's arrest as a stubborn child, and the next evening Beatrice was arrested by Patrolman Joseph F. Loughlin of Station 11.

In court she admitted that she had run away with her sweetheart, Clarence Effler, on account of restrictions at home. She was discharged by Judge Joseph R. Churchill for lack of evidence and no sooner reached the sidewalk in front of the courthouse when she left her parents' side with a bound and ran to the open arms of her sweetheart, who nws standing nearby. It was after a sensational scene by her parents that she was separated from Effler and went to her home.

Disappeared Mysteriously.

She lived with them until the middle of last January, when she mysteriously disappeared for the second time. About the time of Miss Miller's second disappearance her sweetheart left Dorchester for New York, according to his friends, and has not been seen since.

Mrs. Broulx is an accomplished pianist and a pleasing singer. It was while singing in the choir of St. Mary's Church that she met Effler, who was singing in the same choir. The latter was a minstrel show instructor and Miss Effler frequently appeared on the amateur stage with him. Because of their musical tastes they became friendly.

Broulx is a Springfield young man. He recently sold out his interest in a Springfield hotel and came to Boston with his young wife to engage in business here. The girl's parents are pleased with her choice of a husband, and the young couple are at present living with them at No. 10 Bird street.

"I have had enough of disagreeable notoriety and do not care to say anything about my marriage," said Mrs. Broulx to an American reporter. "My parents are satisfied, my husband is and so am I. That is all there is to say about it."

BIG CROWDS STORM CHELSEA SALOONS

Chelsea's first Saturday night since the opening of the saloons developed a lively carnival, with twenty-nine arrests for drunkenness up to midnight and with the patrol wagon out for more.

There are fifteen saloons now in the city, with the License Commissioners empowered to grant twenty-two more. A mass meeting will be held in the Carey Avenue Baptist Church tomorrow night to protest against any more licenses being granted at present.

The police force was kept on the jump last night, with every available regular on duty and several reserve men. Street brawls were frequent.

The trolley cart from "dry" Lynn did a rushing business in the early evening, bringing load after load of thirsty Lynnites. At eleven o'clock a grand homeward rush for Lynn and way stations was begun, starting in with two trolleys running a special trip from Chelsea square jammed to the running boards.

The saloons so far licensed are bunched in two sections, one about Chelsea square, the other back toward the Revere line.

Police Send Former Harvard Instructor's Picture Broadcast.

In an effort to locate Erich Muenter, the former Harvard instructor, who is wanted on suspicion of causing the death of his wife, Leone, by poisoning, more than two years ago, Chief Inspector Hurley of the Cambridge police is preparing to send throughout the world circulars of the wanted man's description. Muenter is thought by the police to be in Europe.

HARVARD MAN FOR CHILI CONFERENCE

Washington, June 6.—Secretary of State Root to-day invited nine scientists to represent the government at the Pan-American scientific congress at Santiago, Chili, in December. They include Professor Archibald C. Coolidge of Harvard University and Professor Hiram Bingham of Yale.

MEET ON STAGE; WILL MARRY SOON

Greenwich, Ct., June 6.—The chief topic of conversation in the Summer colony here is the coming wedding of Miss Alberta Teressa Bowman, sister of Dr. J. E. Bowman, a millionaire, to Henry Lucius Chase, a wealthy Bostonian, at one time leading baritone for the Henry W. Savage Opera Company. Mr. Chase has been a guest of Dr. Bowman for a long time, and has been much in public with Miss Bowman, but the approaching wedding has just become known, and comes as a surprise. Yesterday Mr. Chase and Miss Bowman went to New York City and procured a marriage license.

The wedding will take place Wednesday at the Manhattan Hotel, Rev. Dr. Slicer of the First Unitarian Church performing the ceremony. There will be no bridal attendant, and after the wedding tour the couple will reside in Boston.

A pretty romance is connected with the wedding. Mr. Chase, who upon receiving a large fortune left the stage years ago, was staying in Greenwich two Summers ago when an amateur company was formed to play "Priscilla," by Surrette and Coolidge of Concord, Mass. No one could be found to take the part of Myles Standish until some one learned that Mr. Chase was an intimate friend of both Mr. Surrette and Mr. Coolidge, and was familiar with the opera. He agreed to take the part, and during the rehearsals for the play became acquainted with Miss Bowman and her brother. The acquaintance ripened into friendship, and Mr. Chase became the guest of Dr. Bowman and sepent the remainder of that Summer and the following Summer on his estate.

MARINES ENFORCE PEACE IN PANAMA

Washington, June 6.—Conferences on Panama to-day and this afternoon between the White House, Secretary Root and officials of the Navy Department indicate that the Government proposes to force a quiet election in Panama by the use of marines.

Secretary Taft and the President were both anxious to know whether the two hundred extra marines ordered to be in Panama at the time of the elections will arriev on time and it was ascertained that there will be no delay.

EIGHT IN FIELD TO SUCCEED LINEHAN

Alliances Said to Be Under Way for State and Congressional Campaigns.

Senator Frank J. Linehan has announced that he will not be a candidate for a third term and there are eight men seeking the Democratic nomination to succeed him in the Sixth District, which comprises the three South Boston wards and Ward 16 of Dorchester. The eight aspirants are Representative James F. Powers of Ward 13, Representative William P. Higgins and former Representative Patrick Shields of Ward 14, Representative Edward D. Collins and Patrick D. O'Connor of Ward 15, former Representative William Lyons of Ward 16 and two dark horses in former Congressman William S. McNary's ward. McNary also has been mentioned as likely to enter the race, but may be, it is thought, again be a seeker for the office of city clerk.

Silent About Congress.

Regarding his position, Senator Linehan said to a Boston Sunday American reporter: "I am not a candidate for the Senate, and the reputed candidacies of W. S. McNary and three Representatives does not interest me. About Congress I will not talk yet."

Senator Linehan has been very much discussed as a Congressional candidate in the Tenth District where there are a number of Democrats who are likely to fight O'Connell for the nomination. In Ward 17 Senator Michael J. McKttrick, Alderman James M. Curley and former Councillor Charles I. Quirk have also been discussed as factors in the congressional campaign.

Representative Powers, it is believed, would have the support in Ward 13 of the Jeremiah J. McNamara faction in the Senatorial fight. In Ward 14 the friends of Shields claim that he will be backed by the Ward organization. The Logan faction is expected to support Higgins.

May Back O'Connor.

In Ward 15 the politicians think McNary would be likely to back O'Connor, if the former Congressman should not seek election to the Senate himself.

Lyons counts on being able to make, it is understand, South Boston alliances in the Senatorial contest through his strength in his own ward if he should take a hand in behalf of some Congressional candidate. In fact, the Senatorial and he Congressional battles seem to have a great deal of bearing each upon the other.

HINGHAMITES GET EXCITED OVER DOG

SOME CALLED IT A 'TERROR'

Hingham, June 6.—This is the tale of a dog—a dog which, though dead, has thrown the whole staid town of Hingham into a factional fight, said fight being the sequel to a canine battle. Everybody in Hingham owns a dog—one or more.

Attorney S. Henry Hooper did own two dogs, where now there is but one. Fenton Thompson has just appeared from a three months' sentence in jail for killing the other. And this let loose the Dogs of War.

Hooper had two blooded Boston terriers—"terrors," Thompson's friends called 'em. And when Thompson strolled by the lawyer's home with his pet canine there was "something doin'."

There were three "G-r-r-rh-h-h-s" and Jerry and Billy made a lunge out of the Hooper yard at the Thompson dog.

Says Knife Was Used.

Miss Catherine Keaney, a maid at the Hooper residence, says she dashed out and tried to separate the canines and that Mr. Thompson stopped her, pulling out a knife and slashing Billy so badly that the animal had to be shot afterward.

Thompson was arrested, charged with disturbing the peace, attacking Miss Keaney and cruelty to an animal. On the first charge he was fined $20; for the attack on Miss Keaney $10, and Judge Kelley gave him three months for cutting the dog. Thompson appealed from all three sentences.

Then arose the trouble among the peaceful, law-abiding and justice-loving citizens of Hingham—the same who wage relentless war every Summer on speeding autoists.

Where They Disagree.

Lined up on one side are the friends of Lawyer Hooper, who declare that Billy was the best-natured, most loving and least pugnacious brute in the town.

Arrayed against them are the scores of people who sympathize with Mr. Thompson, who in turn declare that Hooper's dogs were the worst nuisances in town and never missed a chance to "pick a scrap" with others of the canine tribe.

The latter assert that everyone in Hingham who owns a dog, or dogs, has made a wide circuit to avoid passing the Hooper place, fearing a battle in which their pet would come out second best.

And when the appealed case is called, the court room is sure to be crowded.

Portsmouth, N. H., June 6.—While Portsmouth and Somersworth High School baseball teams were engaged in a hot New Hampshire Interscholastic League contest in this city to-day, the game being played on Colonial drilling grounds owned by the State, the contest was temporarily suspended and the spectators driven to shelter by the sudden and exciting appearance of Leonard Cook, an eccentric character, long known as "the Mayor of the Plains."

Cook came out of his house nearby with an American flag and two heavy pattern revolvers. Before anyone realized what he was doing, he planted the flag in the middle of the field, gave three cheers, and, it is alleged began firing the revolvers point blank into the crowd. There was a prompt scattering to points of shelter and a squad of police was summoned. By the time the officers arrived, Cook had quieted down and was secured with little difficulty. He is now held at the local police station.

TORTURES OF SOUL DROVE CONVERTED RABBI BACK TO JUDAISM

RENOUNCES CHRISTIANITY

"I Was in Wrong Fold and My Conscience Goaded Me, But Now I'm Happy."

How the tortures of his soul due to the knowledge that he was an apostate from the faith of his forefathers finally led to his renouncing Christianity and readopting Judaism, Rabbi-Rev. Samuel Freuder, formerly of Boston and now of New York, to-day tells the readers of the Boston Sunday American.

Rabbi Freuder, a delegate to the Third Sabbatical Hebrew-Messianic Conference which met here in the Park Street Church last week, created a sensation and a scene indescribable, almost, when he startled everyone by renouncing his adopted faith and declaring his intention of going back to that venerable religion he learned at his mother's knee. He is about to resign clerical orders in the Episcopal Church.

To-day he tells the readers of the Sunday American how he came to leave that ancient faith, how he was enthused by a time in the missionary work of the Episcopal Church and how mental suffering unbearable and the ostracism of those of his own race finally drove him to take the momentous step here in Boston of declaring his mistake to a great congregation who had trusted and admired him.

By Rabbi-Rev. Samuel Freuder.

I was born a Jew. I must die a Jew.

For nineteen years I professed, taught and preached Christianity. I am through with that forever. To-day I am happy, really happy, for the first time in many, many years.

Apostate! Who but one whose career has been like mine may know the terrors, the agonies, the heart-burnings, the mental tortures, the sleepless nights caused by apostasy?

And now I have declared the truth. I am through with the creed of my adoption. I believe as my mother taught me. I believe with my race, and though they may shrink from and have none of me, I can worship with the fathers and with the prophets.

Friends? I have none now. They have all turned from me because I followed my convictions and twice changed my religion. My own people—the Jews—despise me because I elected to become an Episcopalian. Now the Gentiles will despise me because I again put Judaism above Christianity. But in spite of it all I am happy. My conscience tells me that I am doing what is right, and I have acted as it has dictated to me.

After living for nineteen years as a "convert," part of that time preaching as an Episcopalian clergyman in Jewish missionary settlements, I am won back to the faith of my forefathers, which I tried in vain to leave. I abandoned Judaism a rabbi to accept Christianity. Now I return to my childhood faith—a nothing.

Sees Nothing in Future.

I am penniless. I am unable to see that the future holds forth anything for me but hard work and the contempt of my former friends and co-workers. But what of that! I have followed the command of my conscience, and I am happy.

I know now that I am in my natural element again. I have ceased to be a freak of nature. It is an entirely unnatural thing for a Jew to be engaged in spreading the doctrines of Christianity among the Jews. Such a man is out of place. He fits like a round peg in a square hole.

Changing faiths? Yes, it had its difficulties in my own case. My people? We must not so much as even refer to them. They must be left entirely out of it. They do not know—that is, all of them do not know. And it is better that they should not know. My people in the old country shall remain in ignorance of my step unless they hear it from someone else.

When I first changed faiths I saw immediately that my own people—the Jews—showed antipathy to me. They shunned me. Their averted faces when we met, their listless manner should we be forced to exchange words all goaded me. My friends turned from me.

I was regarded as one gone astray. That antipathy, that same almost-loathing, was evident everywhere I went, and I presume it will be my lot forever. My last step—the renunciation of Christianity—will not help to reconcile them to me.

No one knows the tortures of such an experience, but one who has endured it.

Tortured for Years.

In the old country people sometimes accept the Christian religion for the sake of social advancement. In London there is a great deal of work done among the Jews, but results in many cases are only of a temporary character. That is, there are many who become baptized expecting financial help, but as soon as their financial distress is relieved they forget all about the new faith.

There were two main things which induced me to take the step that I did and to leave off teaching and practicing Christianity. The first was the iniquity and deception practiced in Connecticut with the work of the Jewish missions. The second was the intellectual difficulty in reconciling the pure monotheism ingrained into the mental structure of the Jew and transmitted through a hundred generations with the trinitarian belief of Christians.

Now that I have renounced that belief which I did not believe, and which became irksome, a goad, a torture to me as the years dragged on, I will search for a plain job at living wages. If I don't find any work of that sort where I can earn an "honest living," I'll earn my bread in an equally honest way—I'll take a push-cart and turn peddler.

I am past middle age, but I am unmarried and have no one depending upon me. I was born of Hebrew parents, in the Jewish faith, and was given a good education. I can speak several languages. I was the first and only one of my family that I know of to give up Judaism for Christianity.

Shunned by Relatives.

My renunciation of the old faith was a blow to all my relatives who knew of it. To them I was a relative no more. I was as one dead. I was not of their faith, not of their world and was worse than blotted out of existence.

The realization of this clung to me through the years and unconsciously became more and more of a power operating toward the step which I have just taken.

When young, I became proficient in rabbinical lore. While young, I was elected to go out among my own people in the world and do what I could to uplift them and to bring them into closer association with the teachings of their church. As a rabbi, I worked among thousands in New York and elsewhere.

After years of such toil, I awakened one day to a realization that I was in the wrong fold. My conscience, or what I took to be my conscience, directed me to Christianity—to renounce Judaism and ascend the Christian pulpit. Thenceforward I lectured for fifteen years in many sections of the country and mostly among my own people, urging them to embrace the Christian faith, as I had done, but never baptizing any but Gentiles.

I never baptized any Jew into Christianity. I am glad beyond measure now that I did not.

Three years ago I was ordained an Episcopalian clergyman in Philadelphia by Bishop Whitaker. I had taken a course in Christian theology and was an ardent student of the New Testament history and doctrines. I talked with many noted Episcopalian divines, and the more I studied the more I convinced myself that the step in changing faiths was one in the right direction.

The Double Apostate.

For three years I labored as an Episcopalian clergyman, part of that time as a rector. But the years of ostracism on the part of my own people were telling. Despite my bursts of enthusiasm I know what the long sleepless nights are. I know what it is to have a soul divided against itself, a warring mind, an unsettled conscience.

These years won. Like the constant wearing of the drops of water on a stone my belief—my new belief—was slowly worn away and then my conscience—this time I knew it—pointed out to me that to be saved there was only one course for me. I must renounce Christianity.

I felt that I must readopt Judaism, the faith of my forefathers. Now I have done so and I am reconciled to the consequences.

I had lectured for years, as I said, before I joined the Episcopal ministry. Most of my lectures were on "The Jews" and before Jews. I never baptized a Jew, understand, because I always believed it carried a danger of encouraging hypocrisy. People, you see, often pretend to be converted when they are only seeking assistance of some kind. With the Jews especially that danger is great.

A hungry man is always ready to accept anything; an empty stomach is likely to profess any creed. Jews always have the highest respect for a Christian by birth who believes sincerely in his faith, and they never resent it, even should the Christian show an inclination to put Christianity above Judaism.

Faced Contempt of Jews.

But Jews have only feelings of contempt for the fellow Jew who attempts to preach to them the Christian doctrine. They held and still hold contempt for me. And this fate is bound to be that of any other Jew who in the future does as I have done.

I talk from what I know by experience. When I renounced Judaism and began to preach Christianity the Jews said I was insincere. They told me so. They laughed at me. But I persevered, thinking I was right. No rabbi extended his hand to me to urge me back into the fold. On the contrary they all ignored me.

This at the time showed me that there is a woeful lack of missionary spirit among the Jews. If there were more of the missionary spirit than there is, Christians would understand better the beauties of the ancient and glorious mother religion.

I can hardly say when I began to waver in my belief that Christianity was right and Judaism wrong. It came so gradually and because of the sufferings, humiliations, ostracisms, ridiculing, jeerings, heart-burnings to which I was subjected.

I know one thing, that I was so doubtful of my own course when I became a clergyman that I never baptized any Jew for fear that that poor detached soul should always thereafter haunt me in my sleep.

Veil of Darkness Lifted.

I have been shown the way back to the straight path. The true religion has been pointed out to me. The veil of darkness has been drawn from my eyes and I am myself again.

I do not expect that my former friends will recognize me because of this step. I don't care whether they do or no. Personal consideration does not enter into the thing at all.

When I get back to New York in a few days I shall write to my bishop asking that I be deposed. I shall not go into detail. I shall simply say that I am no longer in accordance with the Episcopal faith and its doctrines and worship. My request will be granted.

I realize fully what I am giving up. I might continue preaching Christianity and live easily so long as people would listen to me, provided I were not sincere. But I am sincere. I wouldn't do such a thing for the world. I willingly give up everything—respect, esteem, position, money and all—because I believe that Jehovah has directed it.

HEBREW-CHRISTIANS AT MESSIANIC CONFERENCE TELL OF WORK FOR JEWS

"Yes, we have converted several Jews to Christianity during the past week, and in the future months, I believe, there will be many more Jews who will eagerly take up Christianity and preach it among their friends," declared Dr. Edward S. Niles, of No. 79 Newbury street, president of the Third Sabbatical Hebrew-Christian Messianic Conference, which closed with a session yesterday in Park Street Church. The object of the meetings, which were held three time daily on Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, was to convert Jews to Christianity and to bring about an understanding between the two religions.

"I can not at this time give you the names of any Jews who have been converted to Christianity, for I do not know who they may be, as they will probably not declare themselves converted for some time," Dr. Niles continued. "The Jews, you know, fear to declare themselves converted for they are shunned by all their friends and relatives. I think that the conference has accomplished much, for it will help bring about an understanding between Jews and Christians."

Trust in God for Funds.

At yesterday's meeting all of the speakers emphasized and declaimed the marvels that had been performed in raising funds to carry on the work of converting Jews to Christianity. They told of how, when they were penniless, and unable to pay for the rent of their missions, they prayed to God for funds, and, as one speaker put it, "thousands of dollars poured in from 'the Bank of Heaven.'"

No Jew declared himself a convert to Christianity at any of the meetings during the past week, as a result of the Boston conference. They were present, however, a number of "Christian-Jews," who had been converted in past years, and they recounted their experiences.

Miss Amelia A. Snow of Boston said: "The Jews of Boston know more about the Bible and more about the New Testament than do the Jews in any other city. We expect that more converts will come to us after this meeting, and we shall be rewarded for our work.

"The best way for us to get money is to give all that we have in the bank. We can then pray to God and he will give us more. I had all my savings, which I wanted for old age, placed in a savings bank. When I became interested in the work, I drew all my money out of the bank and spent it in the work to which we all are consecrated. God has always supplied me with money and I shall not ever have cause to fear."

Tell of Work Among Jews.

Miss Ruth Angell, a converted Jewess, daughter of Rabbi-Rev. Angell, who is in charge of the New York City Christian-Jewish Mission at No. 280 Rivington street, New York, told of the progress of the work of conversion in her city.

Joseph R. Lewek, a converted Jew of Chicago and the head of the Hebrew-Christian Mission in that city; Phillip Sedersky, of Baltimore; Rev. Charles Leonard, of Worcester; Joseph Wise, of Boston, told of the work in their respective cities.

Developing Bust and Chest

Deep breathing helps greatly in developing the Chest. Every morning upon rising, and at night before retiring; afterward massage with MELOROSE Cream and three times a day take Willard White Co.'s Vaucaire Galega Tablets. Drink plenty of cold water, avoid all drinks containing acids, and within a short time the bust measure will have increased to the extent of several inches. —Mme. Willard White Company, Chicago, Ill.

Dear Sir—Am in receipt of your letter asking to use my letter as a testimonial. Indeed, I have no objection, for I really think your Vaucaire Tablets are almost magical. I can't say too much in praise of them. I have improved wonderfully in every way, especially my female health and my nervous system. The two dollars I have spent for the Vaucaire Tablets have done me more good than hundreds I have spent in the past with physicians who did me very little good, if any. I feel so well now and enjoy every moment of my life. My daily duties are a pleasure instead of a task. I will gladly and conscientiously recommend your Vaucaire Galega Tablets. Am enclosing money order for another box of them. Please send them at once, as I am almost out.

Very sincerely,
MRS. J. M. PUGH.

CAUTION—Imitations and worthless nostrums are being offered. See that the name, Willard White Co., is on each box.

TO SUE TEACHER WHO PUT PEPPER ON BOYS' TONGUES.

PUPILS TELL OF PAIN

School Board Stand Back of the Scheme, and Call It Mild Method.

Portsmouth, June 6.—Harry de Rochemont of Newington has asked the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children to take action against Miss Gertrude E. Bean, a school teacher, because she put pepper on the tongues of his two boys, Lawrence, aged ten, and Archie, aged seven, to punish them for whispering in school. Mr. de Rochemont declares that he sought the aid of the "society with the long name" only after he had been turned down by the Board of Education of Newington. He says that if the S. P. C. C. refuses to act in the matter he will start a civil suit against Miss Bean.

Mr. de Rochemont told a reporter from the Boston Sunday American that his two boys came home from school two weeks ago Wednesday night and could not eat their supper. "I asked them what the matter was," said Mr. de Rochemont, "and they told me that their teacher had put pepper on their tongues for whispering. They said their tongues smarted so that they didn't want any supper.

Calls It Cruelty.

"I didn't do anything that night," continued Mr. de Rochemont, "but the next day I called Miss Bean on the telephone and asked if it was true that she had used pepper on my boys. She admitted that she had done so. I thought it rather funny and a cruel way of punishing small children.

"I was still thinking the matter over in my mind when the following Thursday they both came home and told the same story over again. I was mad and immediately called the chairman of the Board of Education, Mr. Fred Pickering, on the telephone. I asked him if he knew that Miss Bean was putting pepper on the children's tongues. He admitted that he had heard something about it, in fact he said that she had asked one of the members of the Board about it before doing so. I then told him that I wanted a chance to be heard before the Board and he said he would let me know when I could have a hearing.

"He telephoned me that I could be heard by the Board on a certain date, so last Tuesday at 4 o'clock I went before them. I took both of the boys with me. All of the members were there, including Chairman Pickering, Mrs. Rosman Packard, Charles Coombs and Superintendent Small.

Advised by Supervisor.

"I told my story to the members of the Board and asked that Miss Bean be discharged. I was told that the Board were aware of the use of pepper as a form of punishment and that they considered it a mild form. Miss Bean was not there at the first of the meeting, but she was called in later. She admitted that she used pepper not only for my boys but on the children generally.

"She said that she had consulted Mrs. Rosman Packard about the matter and that Mrs. Packard not only agreed but urged her to use pepper. Miss Bean asked me if I could suggest some other means of punishment to stop the children from whispering and I told her that it was not my place to suggest, that being the work of the Board of Education.

"Chairman Pickering then took out some pepper and said that it was some of the same lot as was used in school. All the members tried it. Mrs. Packard put some on her tongue and said that she could hardly taste it. I didn't care whether they could taste it or not. It smarted so on my boys' tongues they couldn't eat their supper and I didn't want it used any more. The committee gave me no satisfaction, and when I intimated that I would bring a civil suit against Miss Bean Superintendent Small said that if I did he would be glad to defend the suit himself.

Stand by Teacher.

"After the meeting, where I was practically turned down, I consulted with my lawyer. He advised me to see the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children. I have asked them to take up the matter. Since the meeting Miss Bean has continued to use pepper, and the other night one of my boys came home and said he had had some more put on his tongue. Last night they both came home with still another dose. I'm not going to drop the matter until I get some sort of satisfaction."

That pepper was used generally in the Newington School is admitted by the members of the committee, who assume the attitude of approval of the teacher who invented the novel means of punishment. Prominent among those who defend the use of pepper is Mrs. Rosman Packard. In a most emphatic manner she declared that she not only sanctioned the use of it, but recommended its use when Miss Bean sought her advice.

"Miss Bean asked me about using pepper," said Mrs. Packard, "and I told her to go ahead. I thought it a good idea. I told my children that if they got any pepper in school to expect another dose when they got home. I think it's a good idea. The whole trouble is that this De Rochemont boy is a troublesome boy and ought to have been reported to the School Committee long ago.

"Unruly," Says Chairman.

"I guess if you investigate the record of Miss Bean you'll find she's a competent teacher. Anyway, she has a recommendation from some school superintendent in Massachusetts. I know because I saw it."

Chairman Pickering told a reporter from the Boston Sunday American that he considered the use of pepper a mild form of punishment. "The Board knew that Miss Bean was going to use pepper," said Mr. Pickering, "and sanctioned its use. We gave Mr. de Rochemont a hearing and at that hearing we all tried it. His boys told an entirely different story from what he did. They said it didn't hurt much. It is not true that I am prejudiced in favor of Miss Bean. The reports that I am, because of my friendship for her, are not true. The De Rochemont boy was an unruly boy."

"Yes," admitted Miss Bean to the reporter, "I used pepper on the De Rochemont children. I have used it everywhere I have taught. I have been teaching five years. Part of the time in Maine, part in Massachusetts and the rest here. I come from Sanford, Me., and am a graduate of Farmington Academy. Where did I teach school in Massachusetts? In New Bedford, at least in a small town adjoining New Bedford.

"I did not use pepper here until I had asked the committee about it. They sanctioned it. I went to Mrs. Packard about it and she thought it was a good idea. I think it is a very mild sort of punishment. The De Rochemont boy is an unruly boy. I had to use pepper to stop him from whispering. He does other things worse than whispering that are infractions of the rules."

WELD CLUB HOLDS ITS 12TH REUNION

Representatives were present from all of the New England States when the twelfth annual reunion of the Weld Club was held at the Virginia Street Universalist Church, Dorchester, yesterday afternoon.

Each individual member of the organization is a native or the immediate relative of a native of the town of Weld, Franklin County, Maine, and the annual reunions are among the most enjoyable features of the club's work.

The 1908 reunion was no exception. From the time Mrs. Sarah N. Pierce, the president, rapped the 125 members to order until the business and social programme was completed jollity and good fellowship reigned. Following a dinner the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. Sarah N. Pierce; first vice-president, Mrs. E. S. Wilder; second vice-president, Mrs. Fermont Scammon; secretary, Mrs. Sarah E. Wheeler; treasurer, Mrs. Annie B. Huntress.

Tremont Temple Store
GOOD GOODS MacDONNELL'S RIGHT PRICES
86 Tremont Street.

Five years ago Mr. MacDonnell inaugurated Employes' Week, and what pleasure he took in the event. This year I have decided to carry out his policy in this as in everything else, and next week will again be "Employes' Week" at MacDonnell's. I realize that this store is a busy one, and that the employes are faithful and conscientious; for this reason 2% of the total receipts of the entire week will be divided among them. Each department manager has been allowed to make certain price concessions, of which we hope our customers may take advantage. Every dollar spent here this week will not only be a good investment for you, but will help make Employes' Week the big success it ought to be. The store management this week has been turned over to the Employes.

Come and help them celebrate.

Glove Department

Special inducements are the rule this week in every department. The glove dept. offers as an unusual bargain a lot of 16-button length silk gloves in all shades, regular $1.50 quality, at 90c a pair. Also another lot of elbow length suede lisle gloves, regular $1.00 quality, at 79c a pair. These may be had in black, white, tan and gray. We have also marked down a lot of chamois gloves from $2.00 to $1.50. These gloves are elbow lengths and fine value. M. E. Low, Manager.

Hosiery Department

MacDonnell's hosiery is famous for quality and durability. Our "Employes' Week" offerings will be a lot of our regular 50c tan lace lisle and plain tan lisle hose, marked down to 29c a pair. To still further emphasize our value giving we have reduced the price of a lot of black embroidered hosiery from 50c to 29c a pair. These two reductions are for "Employes' Week" only, and should draw a big crowd to our hosiery department. E. H. Sharpe, Manager.

Hair Goods

In this department our "Employes' Week" bargains will be a regular $2.98 natural wavy hair switch, 22 inches long, reduced to $1.98; all shades of brown. Hair puffs, so popular at the present time, will be sold at 59c each. These puffs are 14 inches long and come in all the brown shades. M. Mullen, Manager.

Underwear Department

Among other values in this department we will sell some excellent quality white swiss lisle undervests at 10c each. This is just the season to get a summer's supply of undervests at a low price. 120 white lace trimmed nainsook petticoats, which ordinarily sell at $1.98, will be marked $1.39 each. These petticoats have deep circular flounces, val. lace trimmed. A MacDonnell bargain. F. M. Sullivan, Manager.

Corset Department

Since last "Employes' Week," a year ago, we have introduced in Boston our celebrated reducing corset, known as the Reduce-U, at $1.50 per pair. We also call particular attention to MacDonnell's Norust corsets, which seem to be growing rapidly in popular favor, one advantage being that we have them as large as size 40. Remember our prices, 98c, $1.50, $2.50 and $2.98. E. Dumas, Manager.

Neckwear Department

This should be one of the busiest neckwear departments in Boston this week, if values count for anything. 50c white lace Gibson stocks reduced to 29c; also some 25c ones at 19c. About 600 white linen wash belts with pretty pearl buckle, and which would be considered good value at twice the price, will be offered at 19c each. H. E. Coyne, Manager.

Veiling Department

A lot of 25c veiling will be reduced for this week to 10c a yard. In this lot there are plain and fancy meshes, both with and without spots. They come in black veilings only. Lot No. 2 consists of a number of three-yard auto veils, all shades, hemstitched all round, regular $1.00 quality, for 69c each. M. C. Cronin, Manager.

Shirt Waist Department

Here is the largest department in "Boston's Big Little Store." We, too, are celebrating "Employes' Week," and will place on sale three most attractive styles in white lawn waists at 65c each, regular $1.00 values. Another lot, consisting of about six styles, all most desirable patterns and sold elsewhere at $1.50, will be placed on sale at 98c each. Be sure to visit this department some day during this week. M. E. Manning, Manager.

Mail Order Department

Here we are ever ready to cater to the wants of our out-of-town patrons. Send money order or stamps covering cost of the articles desired and we will do our best to please you. Should our selection prove unsatisfactory send it back and get your money. K. Fitzgerald, Manager.

Is Hughes a "Canned" Candidate?

Alfred Henry Lewis intimates as much in a remarkable article in COSMOPOLITAN Magazine for July, on Thomas F. Ryan as one of the "Owners of America."*

> "Mr. Ryan will take a gentleman like Mr. Parker or Mr. Hughes and do with him what housewives do with peaches. He will peel him, and quarter him, and stew him down in corporation sweetness, and then most heedfully seal him up against every corrupting influence of the popular. Being thus successfully canned, Mr. Ryan will put him by on some shelf of his affairs, against a day of need. Later, does Mr. Ryan want a mayor or an alderman or even a governor, he takes down one of these specimens of canned humanity, blows the dust from the corporation mark—done in red sealing wax on the can—to make sure of the genuineness of the goods, and gives him to the Machine to be its candidate."

This whole amazing article demands a careful reading on the part of every thoughtful man and woman in the land.
